IMPORTANT FACTS.

DR. LEIDY'S Sarsaparilla Blood Pills are applicable in all cases, whether for Purgatives or Purification. They possess all the boasted virtues of other pills, and are additionally efficacious, containing Sarsaparilla in their composition, which is not contained in any other pills in existence. They are also different from other pills in composition, being purely vegetable, and can be employed at all times, without any danger, and requiring no restraint from occupation or usual course of living.

Notwithstanding Dr. Leidy never pretended his Blood Pills would cure all diseases, yet it is not saying too much of them, from the innumerable cures performed by them in every variety and form of disease (certificates of many of which have been published from persons of all denominations, physicians, clergymen, and others) that they seem to be almost universal in their effect; and persons using them for whatever sickness or disease, may rest assured that they will be found more efficacious than any other pills in existence.

From the known reputation of Dr. Leidy's Blood Pill, it is necessary to remind the public where they can at all times procure the genuine, as it is attempted to impose other pills, called the 'Blood Pills' upon the public on the reputation of Dr. Leidy's. ☞ Be particular and ask for Dr. Leidy's Sarsaparilla Blood Pills and see that the name of N. B. Leidy is contained on two sides of each box, (the boxes being of paper, and oblong, square shape, surrounded by a yellow and black label.

PRICE—25 cents a Box.

Prepared only, and sold wholesale and retail, at Dr. Leidy's Health Emporium, 191 North Second street, below Vine, Philadelphia, and by B. A. FAHNESTOCK & CO., corner of Wood and Sixth streets, Agents for Pittsburgh. jy 12—1y

The Daily Morning Post.

From Noah's Weekly Messenger.

MY FIRST AND LAST LOVE AFFAIR.

I believe the admission general, that no boy passes his nineteenth year without having experienced, at least one tender and "eternal" (of course) passion, and that very few girls get through their sixteenth year scathless of a romantic love. The tender sentiment so peculiar to the teens, is something like the mumps and the measles, it comes once in a lifetime.

Just as I was entering the last half of my nineteenth year, (it matters not how long ago that was) and beginning to think of whiskers, tobacco and other modern evidences of manhood, I fell most desperately in love. I know at the time that it was the maddest thing in the world to voluntarily yield myself up to a passion, which is very cleverly caricatured by French Cooks, when they put a live fowl before a slow fire and roast it gradually for the purpose of swelling the heart; but show me a youth who listens to reason, if he has any, when his head, heart and other "fixins" are in the broil of tenderness, devotion and romance; and I will confess that I was a greater fool than the majority of my sex and age.

The "course of my love" ran smoothly enough for a while but this did not deceive me—I knew I should get to the rapids and whirlpools too soon for my own comfort. I was like the drunken Indian in the canoe above the falls of Niagara, I just took long draughts of delicious nectar, and allowed the little shallop of my fate to take its own way, and make the best bargain it could, with the treacherous waves. My gentle resignation, however, did not make my sufferings the lighter; the crisis came—I stood on the edge of the precipice—I looked piteously around for help—I shrieked in the most pathetic and romantic tones; but it would do no good, over I went into the maddening flood.—I felt for an instant that it was "all up" with me—and then there was a blank.

When I awoke again, I found myself in bed—very weak and wretched. The doctor told me I had been threatened with inflammation of the brain, but that a rheumatic fever had stepped in instead. What a cold bath to romance! I, who was dying of a broken heart to be labelled "rheumatic"—I hated the man from the moment and swore to be revenged, and I kept my oath, his bill is unreceipted yet.

My young readers—and I am writing now especially to them—will know what the foregoing means, without further explanation; but lest some sour, crabbed old maid, or fussy old bachelor, should accuse me of putting nonsense in type I will just add in plain terms, that after a most tender season of love, which commenced in the warm months and lasted to the cold, I was very politely informed, by a very polite mother, that I was a "wild rake," an unprincipled libertine and that she looked upon my attentions to her daughter with displeasure. Here was a damper! I a rake! who had never dared to read certain chapters in the old testament, for fear of knowing more than a modest young man should!—I a libertine; who had never looked in a lady's face without blushing! The charge astonished me, the virtuous Surface, with less reason, was not more indignant; but astonishment and indignation did no good—both ended, as I said before, in rheumatism.

When I recovered, a most devoted friend of "the parties" handed me a pretty three cornered note, the seal of which, white wax, of course, represented two hearts, very barbarously run through with an ugly looking skewer. It (the note not the skewer) was from "my own, one," and was full of tender terms—'broken hearts,' 'crushed affections,' 'blighted hopes,' 'poignant regrets,' 'undying love,' &c. &c.; every body knows how these strong expressions are sprinkled in. The P. S. put new life in me. It ran thus:

"Love laughs at locksmiths." Come to my window that looks into the little garden, at 10 to-night.

'Is scaling the wall, look out for the broken glass that is imbedded on the top, and don't forget to put a beef steak in your pocket to pacify the dog with, if he should attack you. He is very ferocious, and Ma had his teeth filed yesterday.

I was in raptures. What did I care for the wall? I would eat through it, glass and all; and as for the dog with the filed teeth, why my account at the butcher's should answer for the faithfulness with which that job had been performed.

Ten o'clock came, and I was off at the rendezvous. The wall I got over at the expense of a rent in my coat and a slight scratch on my person, I cared for neither. Holding three or four huge slices of beef in my hand, for I did not half like the prospect of an encounter with the dog, I threaded the narrow walks and gained the designated spot beneath the window. The night was very dark; but two bright eyes shining from the casement, told me all that I was anxious to learn. How I managed to clamber up I cannot say, but I got up, and found myself in her arms, or she found herself in mine—I forget which—it was all the same though.

"My own love" (a pretty appellation, isn't it?) was in raptures, and so was I; she wept and I sung to her—

"O why is the girl of my soul in tears," (do I quote correctly?) until she wiped her eyes and began to talk. Then I know she had gained her composure, for I have observed that a woman never talks when she is excited—it is a yell, or a sniffle, and either is not very pleasant.

We laid great plans that night. Elopement, hasty marriage, prayer for Ma's pardon—every thing was fixed upon. In the small hours of the morning I prepared to leave. I approached the window and looked out; it was unusually dark. There is an especial proverb against jumping in the dark, but I did not think of it at that moment—more's the pity.

The farewell kiss was burning on my lips, the soft adieu ringing in my ears as I took the jump. Powers above what a transition! I found myself immersed to the lips in—in—a hogshead of warm meal slush—a compound which, however, good for fattening hogs, is not exactly calculated for a hot bath. How it got there, or how I got into it, I had no time to ascertain, for the loud baying of the dog called my attention to a new danger. The beef I held in my hand, as I leaped from the window, and I now contrived to draw it out of the meal, with the hope of silencing the dog, as I attempted to extricate myself from the unpleasant position in which I was placed. But dogs, though they like beef well enough are not particularly fond of Indian meal—hot—as I soon found to my cost. The enemy came on with a fierce yell; as I held out the beef, a sudden flood of light, exposed to me, and two or three grinning servants, and a host of "family friends," the ridiculous scene in which I was figuring. I attempted to rise and explain, as Mr Wise did a few days ago in Congress, but the dog decided that I was out of order, and compelled me to "duck" my head quite under, to avoid his spring. I arose but to hear peal on peal of laughter, and to dodge again in the same way the vile animal, who continued to leap over me with the agility of a cat and the ferocity of a tiger. I thought my time had come, and was about to resign myself to my fate with as much dignity as it was possible for me to exhibit in a hogshead, when my persecutors relented and called the dog off. I was then taken out, scraped down and allowed to depart; but the story of my mishap became known and I was greeted with laughs of derision at every corner.

Against this, however, I bore up bravely, till I was informed that the fair one, for whom I had encountered all these perils, had played me false by marrying her cousin. Then I solemnly swore never to dabble in love or meal slush, and thus ended my first and last love affair.

KILLED BY AN ELEPHANT.

We learn that a man, a visitor, was killed by one of the elephants belonging to Hopkin's menagerie at Mt. Pleasant, day before yesterday. The man forfeited the animal's good will by putting a quid of tobacco in his mouth, at which he became violent, and by a blow with his trunk laid the offender of his dead at his feet.—Cin. Com.
