Jacob Boston, Proprietor,
RESPECTFULLY informs his friends and the public generally that he has taken this well known establishment, and has had it thoroughly repaired in all its departments; and it is now fitted up in a style inferior to none in the city. Epicures, and all fond of good eating, will find his larder bounteously supplied with all the necessaries and luxuries the market can afford. It will be the aim and pride of the proprietor to keep his eating department well stocked, and in a manner suited to the taste of the most fastidious.
To the lovers of good liquors, too, he can without flattery to himself, offer as good and well furnished a BAR as is kept in the western country. The choicest wines and best of stronger liquors will always be kept in store, for the accommodation of those who may favor him with a call.
His facilities for accommodating the traveling public generally, will be found equal to any in the city. The Stable is airy and capacious, and the best attention will be given to the horses of those putting up at his house.

DENNING'S FIRE PROOF IRON CHESTS.
PITTSBURGH, Oct. 22, 1842.
J Denning: On Friday, the 30th of last month, about 9 o'clock at night, the Planing, Grooving, and Sash Manufactory, owned by Gay, Dilworth & Co., with a large quantity of dressed and undressed lumber, was all consumed by fire.
The Iron Safe which I bought of you some time back was in the most exposed situation during the fire, and was entirely red hot. I am pleased to inform you it was opened at the close of the fire, and all books, papers, &c., saved;—this is the best recommendation I can give of the utility of your safes.

The Daily Morning Post.

From the N. Y. Plebian.

LATER FROM ENGLAND—ARRIVAL OF THE BRITANNIA.

The steamship Britannia arrived at Boston on Tuesday morning, having made the passage in twelve days and six hours. She brings our files to Sept 4th. The news is of no great importance, except the actual commencement of hostilities in Morocco.

The French papers are all filled with speculations representing the effect of the operations of the Prince de Joinville, on the relations existing between France and England.

The account of the capture, and occupation of Mogadore, by the French, is the only piece of intelligence of importance received in the past week. The town and its batteries have been destroyed, and the island invested with a French garrison. A very considerable loss, however, was sustained by the assailants—much greater, as is usually the case, than that returned in the official account. It is impossible to predict what may be the final issue of this struggle, as the Emperor of Morocco is using every effort to make a successful resistance, and as there is a daily increase in the number of the Moors, who maintain the conflict with great spirit and impetuosity.

The chief topic of the day is the rumored intention of her Majesty to visit Ireland, preparatory to an amnesty remitting to Mr O'Connell and his fellow prisoners the remaining term of their imprisonment. Whether true or not, the mere rumor has created great excitement among all parties.

The affairs of Morocco, and the possibility of a war between England and France, have raised the hopes of the Repeal party; and it is one of the signs of the times, that several of their journals advert with evident satisfaction to the chances of a French invasion of Ireland.

O'CONNELL.—The proceedings before the House of Lords in the celebrated writ of error case, were terminated on the 2d inst, the English Judges having confirmed the doings of the Court. It is below stated that no one was surprised, and that the majority was much puzzled to know what to do with O'Connell and his fellow prisoners.

They are unanimous in their decision that the judgement cannot be reversed by a writ of error, though their lordships take a somewhat different view of parts of the question.

In Spain, and other parts of the Continent the belief is general that the affairs of Morocco will lead to a war between the great Powers; and in Germany it is even rumored that an alliance offensive and defensive against France has already been formed between Great Britain and Russia.

The latest accounts from Egypt, state that Mehemet Ali had abandoned his intention of resigning power. His absence lasted but four days, and he had returned to Alexandria to carry on the government as usual.

A letter from Cadiz of the 22d ult. mentions that the Prince de Joinville's arrival from Mogadore was expected daily.

Dreadful Battle between the French and the Moors.—We publish, says the Morning Herald, the following extract from a private letter, dated Marseilles August 29, twelve o'clock—"The 15th, at half past 2 P M, the enemy's fort opened their fire against the Suffren, Jemmapes, and Triton, which were manœuvering to take up their stations. At 3 o'clock the vessels had taken their stations. The fire now became general, and lasted till six o'clock; at five o'clock the enemy's batteries were silenced. More than 100 pieces of cannon defended the town and well served. At 4 o'clock the Belle Poule approached close to the town; the brigs and steam boats now attacked the island were met by a volley of musketry. They, however, soon got possession of all the batteries—garrison by 350 Men. The Island was occupied. They there were found on the island nearly 200 dead, and 40 severely wounded; 128 were made prisoners. During the whole night the Belle Poule and Cassard continued cannonading the town. The ships of the line anchored after the action in the roads. The 16th, the cannonading of the town recommenced by the Belle Poule with the steamboats. At half past three a landing was effected—the town was abandoned, the guns were spiked and thrown into the sea. Several flags and some curious pieces of artillery were taken on board the Suffren, and have been sent to France. At five o'clock every body returned to the ships. The city was pillaged by the Kabyles.

Liverpool Cotton Market, Sept. 3.—The market, previous to the arrival of the last steamer from Boston, had a better feeling and an upward tendency, but the receipt of late advices reporting the probability of a large crop of cotton in the United States, caused an unfavorable reaction. Prices immediately began to droop, and the market since Friday, has been dull and heavy. We quote prices of American fully 1-8 per lb. lower than the highest point of last week, and there are numerous sellers at the decline. The sales on Saturday were 4500 bales, yesterday 5000, and to day 2000 bales, nearly all to the trade.

"CALM AS A SUMMER MORNING."—As Mr Theodore Frelinghuysen never "killed an Indian," and is not particularly renowned for anything, that we are aware of, except for his "calm as a summer morning" remark, it may, perhaps, at the present moment, be as well to quote the passage in which his celebrity is founded; that "his glory may not be extenuated wherein he is worthy," and that the achievement may be freshly remembered.

This devoted friend of the national bank, in his speech in the United States Senate, June 27, 1834, on the deposite question he said:

"It was strange that it did not occur to the President, when he was fulminating his anathemas against the bank, that their effects would never reach it.—There sits Mr Biddle, in the presidency of the bank, calm as a summer morning, with his directors around him, receiving his salary, with everything moving on harmoniously: and has this stroke reached him? No, sir; the blow has fallen on the friends of the President and the country."

So spoke Mr Theodore Frelinghuysen in 1834, at a moment when the country writhed in pain under the "screws," and when pressure and panic were the order of the day, to compel the people to pass under the yoke of the "monster." The bank had declared war against the republic—a system of terrorism had been resorted to Business was, to a great extent, suspended and ruin spread itself around, amid cries of revolution from the satellites of bankism in Congress and elsewhere. It was an organized system of terture, in which Mr Frelinghuysen bore an active part, and, confident in its ultimate success, he could not repress his exultation, and drew, by way of contrast to the excitement of the popular mind, the above quoted picture of the calmness which prevailed at the very centre of the mischief. Everything there moved harmoniously; it was a circle beyond the suffering, and not a doubt existed in it that the moment was at hand when a triumph would be accomplished over the democratic party, with Andrew Jackson at its head, which would give us the bank for a government, and crush all opposition into the very earth. It is true that Mr Frelinghuysen and his associates were disappointed. The people proved to be of sterner stuff than he supposed; but though the conspiracy failed, and had "the ingredients of the poisoned chalice returned to its own lips," still the remembrance of what was then endured is not to pass away so lightly; and Mr Frelinghuysen, with his fancy pictures, will find that the people have not forgotten the part he took in the warfare against them.
