The Grinder Family—A Few Facts in their History.

The career of Mrs. Martha Grinder as a poisoner, has naturally excited some curiosity as to her history, but as yet we have been enabled to gather but very meagre details as to her conduct or reputation before coming to this city. Her husband, George Grinder, who is now held in custody as an accessory to the murder of Miss Buchanan, states that he was born in Jefferson county Pa., but his parents soon after removed to a farm on the Allegheny river, in the neighborhood of Leechburg, where they still reside. While engaged in a coal yard at Louisville, Grinder became acquainted with the woman whom he afterwards married, but he states that he knows nothing of her history except what he learned through herself. She was a widow when he married her, and her first husband was a huckster named Sutherland. She was raised at Bloomington, Indiana, but he never saw any of her family relations, and was informed by her that they were all dead. She gave her maiden name as Greene. At the time of her marriage, she resided with her sister in Louisville. The history of the little girl, Mary Florence Grinder, whom they have claimed as their own, is thus related: About a year after their marriage, Dr. Weatherford, of Louisville, applied to him to know whether he would not take Mrs. Grinder take a baby to raise, promising to pay them liberally, and to settle a handsome sum of money on the child. He at first demurred to the proposition, but his wife being willing to accept the charge, it was arranged that the child should be brought to her, and adopted as their own. They were under a pledge of secrecy as to the matter, and were to have full control of the child. The next morning, at an early hour, the doctor and another gentleman drove to the house in a carriage, and left the child—a little bit of a thing—which gave them a great deal of trouble, as it was sick for a long time. It was represented to Grinder that the mother of the child died soon after its birth, and that the father was a practising physician of Louisville. The father had been married, but was a widower at the time, and sought to shield himself and family from disgrace he had the infant disposed of as stated. He is reported to have died some time since, and Mrs. Grinder had intended to leave Louisville some time ago, to look after the property promised to the child, but was never able to get away. The child is now about five years old, and is very sprightly and intelligent for its years. It is now on a visit to his friends up the Allegheny river.

Grinder is admitted, on all hands, to be one of those indifferent, passive kind of men, who are easily governed by women of strong will, but many persons are nevertheless of the opinion that he knows more about his wife's doings than he cares to tell. He says that he never had the slightest intimation of any wrong act committed by his wife, and as she had always been kind to him he never had occasion to suspect her of anything wrong. He does not deny selling the gold, but states that he got it from his wife, and believed that she had received it from a friend in the West, as she stated to him at the time.

Arrested for Larceny.

Some weeks ago, a large skiff, loaded with copper tubing, was found at the Allegheny wharf, and taken possession of by the police, under the belief that it was stolen property. It had been brought down the river by a man named John Carr, who left it in possession of a boy, while he managed to sell the copper tubing, which had been bent up and considerably broken. Carr fled from the city without effecting a sale, and the owner of the skiff was subsequently ascertained to be a resident of Tarentum. Last night Carr was arrested in Tarentum by the owner of the skiff, and brought down to this city on Sunday. He was taken before Mayor Lowry, and failing to give a satisfactory account of the manner in which he obtained the property was committed to jail to answer the charge of larceny. The copper, which is still in possession of the Mayor, has not yet been identified, but it is supposed to have been stolen from some oil refinery on the river. The skiff was valued at thirty dollars, and the owner intends to prosecute Carr for stealing it.

Death from the Effects of Laudanum.

A child of Mr. Isaac Long, cutter and salesman, residing at No. 95 Webster street, Allegheny, died on Sunday afternoon, from the effects of laudanum accidentally obtained. Mrs. Long, being ill on Saturday night, took some laudanum, and left the bottle, with others, on a stand near the crib in which the children were sleeping. In the morning, hearing the bottle broken, she turned towards the crib and noticed her little boy, aged two and a half years, playing with the laudanum bottle. The contents, as she supposed, had been spilled, and she did not appre end any danger, as the child had no appearance of having swallowed any of the drug. About eight o'clock, however, the child began vomiting, and soon after fell asleep. About ten o'clock it was waked up, but convulsions ensued, and the physician in attendance considered its recovery impossible. The brain became effected, and death ensued about three o'clock in the afternoon.

Central Board of Education.

This body met on special call on Saturday evening. Messrs. Lowe, Marshall, Nobbs, Sergeant, and President Negley, being in attendance. Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

The Principal of the High School having presented his report of the re-examination of applicants for admission, on motion of Mr. Marshall the candidates holding the following numbers were declared entitled to admission to the High School: 3, 9, 21, 23, 34, 36, 45, 51, 55, 62, 83, 93, 96, 109, 110, 116, 127, 135.

A communication was received from Professor A. Conley, tendering his resignation as teacher of penmanship and book-keeping in the High School. The resignation was accepted, and Professor J. C. Smith nominated and elected to fill the vacancy.

On motion adjourned.

Return Cricket Match.—The return game of cricket, between the Eleven of Allegheny and the Eleven of Beaver, was to have been played at Rochester, on Saturday, but owing to a dispute the match was not finished. On the first innings, the Allegheny scored 60, and the Beaver 27. On the second innings, the Beaver players having 51 to 80, and five wickets to go down, a dispute arose regarding a point of the game—the Beaver batsman refusing to abide the award of the umpire, the game ceased. The best of feeling prevailed until this unfortunate disagreement arose.

Wash out the Gutters.—The gutters in many parts of the city have become extremely filthy, and during the present hot weather the stench arising from them is very offensive and unhealthy. A very favorable opportunity to wash out the gutters is presented during or just after a shower of rain, but few persons avail themselves of it. The work can be done with half the labor required at any other time, as the current will carry the accumulations off with very little assistance.

Sport Among Oil Men.—There was a race for a set of colors, on Saturday evening, on the Allegheny, between the crews of the "Big F," "Tiger" and "Enterprise," but owing to two of the boats running foul in turning the buoy, it was decided to have the race over again next Saturday.

"High" Life in New York.—A correspondent writes from New York that he has marked the following daily order of proceedings at that watering place:

For Ladies.—Rise late. Breakfast where you sit about a great deal, scan everybody that enters or exists, eat what you can get, and look wise about fashions. Promenade to the table with an appetite. Promenade to the march in Faust, vigorously played by the band. Sit in the corridor, and abuse the company. Drive to the beach and bathe, or drive to the beach and not bathe, and wonder how other women can. Return home and wait patiently for the hairdresser. Hairdresser. Grand toilette. Dinner.

Ladies in black silk go to the table early to see and not be seen. Ladies in grand tenue wait till the second course, in order to be seen and not see. Very little eating, and a great deal of remarking what other women have on. Promenade to the march in Faust. If you are young and pretty, and have admirers, you begin your flirtations for the day. If you are not young and pretty, but are a coquette, you flirt all the same. If you do neither beauty nor coquetry, you sit down in the corridor, learn everybody by heart, and abuse the company. Driving on the avenue, when nobody looks at the sunset and everybody continues to look at everybody else. Tea, less eating than at dinner, and more gossip. Retire to emerge in evening costume. Promenade to the march in Faust. Flirtations in their height. A general desire to look at the moon. If you don't indulge in flirtation, you watch others, and thereby acquire a fund of information for the next day's gossip. To bed at midnight.

For Gentlemen.—Rise late and buy a New York paper. Breakfast; read a very little of the newspaper, and look a great deal at the pretty girls opposite. Get an introduction to pretty girls and promenade. Smoke a cigar on the piazza, and talk about the pretty girls and the Saratoga races. Go down to the beach and watch the bathers; ridicule the women and pronounce them frights. Cigars or billiards, or both, or an equivalent. Another cigar and gossip. Toilette. Dinner. Lounge and watch the ladies. Go in rather late. Gaze unabashed at all the toilettes that were invented for the purpose of attraction. Fee the waiter and take what you don't want. Promenade with as many girls as is possible. Talk an indefinite deal of nonsense; invite the prettiest and silliest to drive. Drive and display your horses, or be driven and talk about men than have turn-outs extraordinary. Tea with pretty girl. More nonsense.

Cigars on piazza. More talk about horses in general, pretty women in particular.

Promenade with pretty girl. Flirtations.

Some gentlemen—those who approve of early hours—are up betimes to visit the "gr
