RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CONFERENCE.

During Saturday's session the Stewards' report presented the amount raised during the year, for the Superannuated preachers, and the widows and orphans of preachers, &c.—Collections in the churches, $7,928 47—being in advance of its assessment, $483 47; income on centenary, clartered funds, &c., $345, 63, making in all, $8,274 10—an increase in all, over last year of $2,000. This amount, was distributed among forty-six claimants, varying in amounts from $75 to $400. The Mutual Relief Fund, for ministers, reports: total for the year, $2,331 25. Of this sum paid, to three parsons, $2,252; incidental expenses, $78 25—leaving a balance in the Treasury of $18 00. The annual payment of $20 insures to the families, in the case of death, $1,000, paid within thirty days. The fund received on Saturday donations from three friends, amounting to $1,100. One thousand of this, was from a devoted friend of the Society. This is a noble fund, and ought to be greatly strengthened by donations from men of wealth.

—Ann Anderson, aged about sixty years, was run over yesterday afternoon, at Sixth and Lombard streets, by a Lombard and Sout street car and instantly killed. The deceased was crossing the street, and as the car approached, the driver gave the alarm, but before he could stop the car, the woman was knocked down and the wheels passed over her neck. She resided in Hallowell street below Carpenter.

—Alexander McClernan and John Tennan had a hearing yesterday afternoon, before Ald. Kerr, at the Central Station, on the charge of being concerned in beating Sergeant Thomas A. Maher, on Saturday night, at Tenth and Columbia avenue. The testimony adduced showed that McClernan and two other men set upon Maher, and that McClernan both struck and kicked Maher while down. The accused were held in $1,000 bail each for further hearing.

—Frank W. Roberts was arrested in this city yesterday on the charge of embezzling a large amount of funds belonging to Noonan & McNald, of Milwaukee. He was formerly connected with the rebel army, and lately made the acquaintance of a young lady in New York, and married her, against her parents consent. Detective Geo. H. Smith arrested him at the Continental Hotel, and he was committed by Alderman R. R. Smith.

—Mrs. Susan Haines and her daughter, whose arrest was mentioned in the Bulletin of yesterday, had a hearing before Mayor Stokley, yesterday, and an examination of them disclosed the fact that they contained quite a quantity of valuable jewelry, diamonds, pans and knifes, all nicely done up in paper, and a large show of bagnets, gents and ladies also wrapped up, and sundry bundles of old newspapers. The other had wer-coat on, and was a number of dresses on her, as also several new under-garments, with edging attached, the owner of which Miss Shivers-liard fl ed at having been stolen from her pace of business. Her privey mark was upon it, and she spoke of the rocks, dew sweet, and Ferrie ships wecks, how our ships avoid the rocks by a light-house—drew a picture of the Lighthouse, with the light streaming out from the lantern; across the waves—gave an account of its first erection and the fearfulness of the brave builder—during the whole time clearly bringing out Christ as the true light of the world, who only can keep our souls from shipwreck. So earnestly did he fix the attention of the accused, that, as he spoke, the clock in the tower rang the tick of the clock at the further end of the large chu-; could be distinctly heard. The remark was made by several—if an adult audience could be so held, how much more of a impression effect of children?

Rev. George A. Peltz continued the same subject. He expected to see the day when ministers, recognizing their position as teachers would use the black board and pictorial diagrams in the pulpit to make plain God's word. He told the teachers that they should not leave it all to the Superintendent in his review, but use it themselves in their class, and showed how this could be done with a pocket silicate slate. After giving many illustrations and incidents, he concluded with an account of a blackboard sermon. The question "Do I Love Jesus?" was written upon the board, remained upon, then the word "do," rubbed out, remarks made, and so on, word after word rubbed out, till Jesus only remained.

Mr. Vail said that in answer to the objection made by some that the blackboard sermon helps detracted from the spiritual work of the school, he would read an extract from a letter he had just received. It was from the Superintendent of one of our live Sunday-schools, a man who was an earnest worker in our Association, and who used all the modern helps in his work. He sent in request that he could not be present, and mentioned that a glorious revival was going on in the school, many children coming out and openly acknowledging Jesus as their Saviour.

The meeting was closed with a benediction by the Rev. Dr. Kunkleman.

The exercises were interspersed with choice music by the church choir, under the direction of Mr. Knauff, who knows how to lead a good organ as well as play it.

It was announced that the next institute, to be held Monday evening, will be in the form of addresses by Rev. Henry C. McCook, formerly one of the noble band of Western workers, but now of Philadelphia.

We pity those teachers who were not present last evening.

CITY BULLETIN.

—The new steam collier Achilles made a successful trial trip on Saturday.

—The Alumni Association of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy held its first annual meeting last evening.

—John G. Saxe delivered the eighth of the Star Course of Lectures, last evening, at the Academy of Music, before a large audience. His subject was "Poetical Fallacies."

—The Finance Committee met last evening, and agreed to grant permission to the Sculpture Society, $500,000 for the erection of new school-houses, and $700,000 for a new bridge over the Schuylkill.

—The Belmont Avenue Plank Road Company held a meeting yesterday to consider the policy of selling its franchises to the city. A committee was appointed to confer with the Park Commission on the subject.

—The Typographical Union of this city has admitted to membership a lady who was formerly the Secretary of the Boston Typographical Union, from which Society she held a certificate of membership. The new member is now regularly engaged in an office in this city.

—At a meeting of the stockholders of the Thirteenth and Fifteenth Streets Passenger Railway Company, held yesterday, the act of Assembly authorizing the laying of a tram-car on Locust street, from Thirteenth to Fifteenth, was unanimously accepted.

—James Logue had a higher hearing before Alderman Kerr, at the Central Station, yesterday, on the charge of being concerned in the recent robbery of Simes & Son's store, at No. 1102 Market street. In the absence of a material witness, Logue was held for a further hearing.

—The Coroner's inquest in the case of Hugh McKinney was concluded yesterday afternoon, and the verdict was that he came to his death from injuries received on the night of March 10th, 1870, by a fall, while intoxicated, at the premises near corner of Eighteenth and South streets.

—Julius Lipkin, a youth of twelve years, was arrested yesterday by Detective Carlton, Noble Kerr, for stabbing George Gardner, a colored youth. The latter threw a brick at Lipkin on Saturday, striking him on the head. He then ran after Gardner and stabbed him in the back. The wound is not a dangerous one.

—Bernard Dailey, colored, was shot yesterday, near a colored ball, called Magnolia Douglas, last week, at West Chester, and who came to this city and delivered himself up to Lieutenant Thomas, accompanied voluntarily yesterday to accompany the officers to Chester county for trial.

—Joseph Billings.—This genius expatiates to-night for the Young Men's Debating Club and Lyceum of Camden, on the subject of "Natural History."

DISORDERLY.—Two men were arrested last evening for drunken and disorderly conduct in the streets, and locked up in the Mayor's office. This morning they had a hearing before the Mayor, and were ordered to pay the usual fine.

FURTHER HEARING.—At the further hearing of Ammon Fowler, the man who was charged with having cruelly beaten his two children of Mrs. Cox, who resides at No. 525 Taylor's avenue, Camden, it was ascertained that the candy which had been analyzed and found to contain brass filings, &c., was not the candy which Mr. Fowler had given them. They had plicked it up from the floor where the boys had been playing, and had not, as he stated, had stuck to it. Mr. Fowler has been admitted to bail, and it is quite evident that the case will fall to the ground. Fowler, it is stated, will promptly ignore the matter, as the investigation has failed to show sufficient evidence to hold him to answer.

ATTEMPT TO ROB.—"Sparking on Sunday night," as the old song has it, is a sometimes attended with good results. This was exemplified on last Sunday night. While this process was going on, at the residence of Mr. Peters, Fifth and Spruce streets, South Camden, a noble man was heard in the parlor of the house. The young man went thither, and looking out of a window, I saw nothing. Going back to the room through the hal, he saw a man who had partially concealed himself behind some clothing. No doubt for the purpose of waiting for a good opportunity to commence operations. He ran into another room and communed with the police, who marched him up to the station-house. Yesterday Mayor Cox committed him to answer.

HOLDING INQUESTS.—The Medical Society of Camden have passed a resolution binding themselves to pay a contribution of $5 towards post mortem examinations for coroners at any inquest, or by virtue of an order of the County of Camden county, until the Board of Chosen Freeholders shall allow the new scale of fees which the Society has adopted, which ranges from $20 to $50. The Board has made a counter rule to pay $10 for such examinations, and most likely will adhere to that practice. A communication from the Secretary of the Society to the Board yesterday, stating their resolution, was received and filed, and no further action taken.

POLLARD AND DONN PIATT.

A Sad Business.

Donn Piatt, the Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, "goes for" E. A. Pollard, the historian, as follows:

I perceive that the great historian of the Lost Cause takes issue with me upon the comparative merits of McClellan and Lincoln as military leaders. I had said that the suspicion was gaining ground that if Grant had been put in as the beginning of the war he would in all probability have come out as badly used up as McClellan, and that Grant fought after the war ended, for the conflict had terminated at the South a year before it was known at the North. This, says Pollard, is no such thing.

I am sorry to have caused this difference. I had a certain sympathy for I. He has instinctively the disposition to but his historical labors upon a stone wall and then quietly retire your correspondent. We are in common the only two advocates of what we believe to be the truth. But he not only takes issue with me, but he does it with a sort of lofty contempt that is very distressing. He speaks of me as "one Donn Piatt."

Now, I humbly admit that I have not done so much to distinguish myself as this learned historian, but I have accomplished something. I am not so obscure as that phrase would indicate. I claim to be, in some respects, rather a remarkable man. I for example, I have read all and reviewed some of Mr. Pollard's books. Can another man boast as much? I have them all in my library; and they promise to remain there. Only one even ever proposed reading them. He was a Yankee refugee—"a poor, wandering refugee"—who could never read nor write. He died, subpœnaed under the hands of a horse doctor, who said that his disease was "colic-evil." I don't know that that is; but it is fatal to a refugee; at least he died suddenly.

Under the circumstances, I think Mr. Pollard should reconsider his lofty contempt and recognize my claims.

The great historian, P., is a clear, vigorous, writer, but he is not logical. Having disposed of me with a snuff, he went in and disposed of McClellan; and as he had his hand in, he tried on Grant, and ended by admitting all that I had claimed. The Confederacy fell to pieces while Grant was in command—whether through bad management or lack of resources I cannot tell.

The great historian, P., seems to be prejudiced against Jeff. Davis. After a remarked perusal of his several works, I think I may say, without fear of successful contradiction, that Pollard is prejudiced in his feelings against the late President of the Confederacy. He says Jeff. promised to die in the last ditch, and did not do-it. Now, I can tell him, as a part of the unwritten history of the late civil war, that when Jeff. was captured he was in search of that ditch, and it is now ascertained that that celebrated excavation was in the neighborhood, and if Jeff. had been let alone he would have, in all probability, reached the same next day, about 5 o'clock P. M. This was the undoing of the dispute as an old lady with the two buckets. The last ditch would, in all probability, have water in it or a spring adjacent, hence the buckets.

It is well known that when Jeff. was retaken and had he avowed his earnest determination to go again in search of that "last ditch," but old Donna Dooley succeeded in his desist, telling him that the ditch had been taken North by an enterprising Yankee to exhibit. The Gentile Giant was subsequently dug out of it.

This is all valuable as so much unwritten history, and I trust the day is not distant when the impartial pen of the philosophical re-confirm will do Jeff. the justice a billion Pollard denies.
