Manhood: How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermaterrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

All wanting FRUIT FARMS, especially adapted to the growth of the VINE, where it is an established success and pays LARGE PROFIT. The land is also adapted to the growth of Peaches, Pears, apples and small fruits: also, Grain, Grass, and Vegetables.

Many hundreds of excellent VINEYARDS, ORCHARDS and FARMS, can now be seen.

THE LOCATION is only 34 miles south of Philadelphia, by Railroad, in a mild, delightful climate, and at the very doors of the New York and Philadelphia Markets. Another Railroad runs direct to New York.

THE PLACE is already Large, Successful and Prosperous. Churches, Schools and other privileges are already established. Also, manufactories of Shoes, Clothing Glass, Straw Goods and other things, at which different members of a family can procure employment.

It has been a HEALTHY RESORT for some years past for people suffering from pulmonary affections, Asthma, Catarrh, Ague, and debility: many thousands have entirely recovered.

A new Brick Hotel has just been completed, 100 feet front, with back buildings, four stories high, including French roof, and all modern improvements for the accommodation of visitors.

Price of FARM LAND $25.00 per Acre, payable by installments, within the period of four years. In this climate planted out to vines, 20 acres of land will count fully as much as 100 acres further north.

Persons unacquainted with Fruit Growing, can become familiar with it in a short time on account of surroundings.

Five Acres One Acre, and Town Lots in the towns of Landisville and Vineland, also for sale.

Whilst visiting the Centennial Exhibition, Vineland can be visited at small expense.

A paper containing full information will be sent upon application to CHARLES K. LANDIS, Vineland, N. J., free of cost.

The following is an extract from a description of Vineland, published in the New York Tribune, by the well known Agriculturist, Solon Robinson:

All the farmers were of the "well to do" sort, and some of them, who have turned their attention to fruits and market gardening have grown rich. The soil is loam, varying from sandy to clayey, and surface gently undulating, intersected with small streams and occasional wet meadows, in which deposits of peat or muck are stored, sufficient to fertilize the whole upland surface after it has been exhausted of its natural fertility.

It is certainly one of the most extensive fertile tracts, in an almost level position, and suitable condition for pleasant farming, that we know of this side of the Western prairies. We found some of the oldest farms apparently just as profitably productive as when first cleared of forest fifty or a hundred years ago.

The geologist would soon discover the cause of this continued fertility. The whole country is a marine deposit, and all through the soil we found evidences of calcareous substances, generally in the form of indurated calcareous marl showing many distinct forms of ancient shells, of the tertiary formations, and this marly substance is scattered all through the soil, in a very comminuted form, and in the exact condition most easily assimilated by such plants as the former desires to cultivate. Romantic and Thrilling Recognition.

About ten years ago two brothers left their home in Illinois and went to California. The elder was a man of the most steady habits, and had received a good business education, but the younger was inclined to be dissipated, and, indeed, had figured in so many scrapes at home, that his departure was not regretted in his native village. The two brothers lived for a short time in San Francisco while they looked for situations. The younger brother fell into bad company, and they seperated by mutual consent. The elder brother obtained a situation in a wholesale store as porter, and by diligence and steadiness so worked himself into the confidence of his employers, that he rose from the position of porter to that of partner in the firm. He lately purchased a house in Brush street, married a lady of considerable fortune of her own, and on last Christmas eve saw three beautiful children around him enjoying the delights of a Christmas tree. The family retired at midnight, but the gentleman had hardly closed his eyes when he was awakened by a noise down stairs, and, moving stealthily to the parlor with a revolver in his hand, he saw a man endeavoring to open the buffet where he kept his silver. Leveling the revolver at the thief's head he exclaimed, "Stop, or you are a dead man!" The jimmy dropped from the hands of the burglar, who falling on his knees, cried out, "As God is my judge, Robert, I did not know that you lived here!" The gentleman then discovered to his horror that burglar whom he was about to shoot was the younger brother whom he had not met for nearly ten years. That night the burglar slept peacefully under the roof of his forgiving brother, who assured a friend, with tears in his eyes, that he was about to give him employment in his own store, and that he had never spent a happier Christmas.

No!—Why is it that so many of our young men can say no with such ease when asked to subscribe for a paper, buy a book, or attend a lecture, spend an houre in the house of God, or with a social gathering at the house of some friend? Ask them to do any or all these things and they will say no with a firmness that will astonish you. Ask them to indulge in a social glass, in a game of cards, to smoke, to chew tobacco, to blaspheme the name of God, and these young men, who are to be pitied for their weakness, cannot say no.

Does it require more back-bone, more stamina for me to say no when some kind friend invites me to spend an hour in worship?

No, certainly not. Must I have more courage to say no when the devil tempts me to vaste my money in rum and tobacco than when I am asked to purchase a good newspaper I think not. It pays to say no to Satan. It is all loss to say no to your Heavenly Father. Then, young man, when Satan tempts you to do wrong stand up boldly and say No! in a tone that will make him tremble.

TIME.—In all the actions which a man performs, some parts of his life passes.—We die while doing that for which alone our sliding life was granted. Nay, tho' we do nothing, time keeps his constant pace, and flies as fast in idleness as in employment. Whether we play, or labor, or sleep, or dance, or study, the sun posts on and the sand runs. An hour of vice is as long as an hour of virtue. But the difference between good and bad actions is infinite. Good actions, though they diminish our time here as well as bad actions, yet they lay up for us a happiness in eternity, and will recompense what they take away by a plentiful return at last. When we trade with virtue, we do but buy pleasure with the expense of time So it is not so much a consuming of time as an exchange. As a man sows his corn, he is content to wait awhile, that he may, at the harvest, receive with advantage. —Owen Feltham 1836.

In a recent lecture in Edinburgh on "The Stars," Prof. Grant said that a railway train, traveling day and night fifty miles per hour, would reach the moon in six months, the sun is two hundred years, and Alpha Centauris, the nearest of the fixed stars, in fourty-two millions of years; a cannon ball, traveling nine hundred miles per hour, in 2,700,000 years; and light traveling 185,000 miles per second, in three years. Light from some of the telescopic stars takes 5,760 years to reach the earth; from others 500,000 years These stars, therefore, may have become extinct thousands of years ago though their light come to our eyes. Alpha Lyra is 100,000,000,000 of miles from us, and its magnitude and splendor are as 20 to 1 compared with our sun. The sun is neither greater nor smaller than most of the stars.

JAWS OF IRON.—At Granville, N. Y., is a young man named Morris Wando, aged 19 years, and weighing 160 pounds, and deserves the title of champion, "Man with the iron jaw." A few days ago a man weighing 200 pounds sat on a heavy table, in a saloon there. Wando stood on a chair and seizing the table on one side with his teeth, lifted it and the man two feet clear of the floor, and held them there fifteen seconds. He lifted a cask of whiskey weighing 400 pounds, astride of which were 300 pounds more, by seizing it by the chime with his teeth, holding it out straight. Three men pulling on a rope which he held in his teeth could not budge Wando from his tracks. He has gone East to seek an engagement with a circus.

Old Age.

"There is nothing which should so touch our hearts with pity and reverence as the sight of a naged person. Trembling with infirmity, they bend o'er their staff with a helplessness that is touchingly suggestive of many long years of care and sorrow, and who now in the even time of life must rely upon others for comfort and sympathy."

How beautiful these lines from Longfellow, "The eyes of an angel look meekly into my heart! The voice of age echoes mournfully through it! The hoary head and palsied hand of age plead irresistibly for its sympathies! I venerate old age, and I love the man who cannot look without emotion upon the sunset of life, when the dusk of evening begins to gather over the watery eyes, and the shadows of twilight grow broader and deeper upon the understanding."

I have seen a sweet, pale-faced old lady, whose hair was whitened by the frosts of many winter's and whose steps once so buoyant, were now feeble and halting, surrounded by all that was needful for her physical comfort, yet love and sympathy that should have brightened her few remaining years was denied her, no one had time to devote to "grandma." With tears glistening in those dim eyes and falling over the dear, withered face she would say, "Oh, that the dear father would call me home, for I am only a burden—only in the way," and rocking to and fro in her low rocker, she would keep saying in her childish, absent tone, "Only in the way!"

There can be nothing more beautiful than the sight of youth and beauty supporting and cheering the aged.—They who have nearly completed the weary march of life, and who have seen many who were dear to them, grow weary and faint by the way, they who keep steadily on, and now, as they feebly complete the remaining steps yet between them and heaven—let their path be made smooth, and the sun of life fast sinking go down without a cloud.

There is stamped upon my memory a picture that time can never efface, and as my thoughts revert back to those childhood days, I can almost hear the dear voice that has long since been silent How, in the gathering twilight, when wearied with play, we children would gather around the low rush bottomed chair, wherein she sat, and whatever of grief or wrong we fancied were ours, now it was all smoothed and made plain, while the dear wrinkled hand softly stroked our hair! Years have passed and the old chair is tenantless, but the memory of those days, and the influence of the dear old grandmother will remain fresh.

There are many weary ones whose race is almost run, and whose eyes, dim with the mists of old age, look helplessly into ours for sympathy and love, and whose hearts, in which the strength of life beats out feebly, are easily wounded by the harsh word or cruel frown. Let us lend those faltering feet in the sunshine of love, soothing the childless, fretful spirit with kind words and patient forbearance, that their last days be their best, and the even time bright with the rays of love and peace.

Summer Eating.

One of the things which the public does not concern itself about as much as it ought to is the kind and amount of food it shall eat during the Summer. The generality of the people go on in the same way during the Summer that they do in the Winter with respect to the food they eat, varying it only as the seasons themselves very it. The average men or women is not apparently aware that the heart of the human body may be materially increased or decreased according to the kind and amount of food that is imbibed. True, most people when the hot weather comes along rush spontaneously to fruit and cream themselves with berries, cherries, peaches, watermelons, canteloupes, pears, and often swallow much more than is good for them. Hence cholera, morbus, diarrhoea and other similar affections of the stomach. But very little or no care is taken in eating heavy beef in as great a quantity as during the coldest month in Winter. It is no infrequent sight to see a man sit down, when the thermometer is at ninety-five degrees in the shade, at a table groaning with fat forming, heat-producing meats. On these he gorges himself, until he is as filled to repletion as during the coldest days of December or January. It takes repeated warnings and a long experience to teach him that it is just as senseless to do this in the depressing days of July and August as it would be for him to wear his thick winter flannels and overcoat. True philosophy would teach us to be as careful to keep the inside of the body as cool as the outside.

A great deal of stuff has been written concerning the danger of cold drinks and eating ices and creams. There is danger under certain circumstances, as, for instance, when large quantities are gulped down while the body is over-heated. But when no more heat is experienced than what is inevitable in warm weather from any, even the highest exercise, draughts of water may be quaffed by mouthfulls at a time, or even the coldest of creams and ices be slowly eaten with a spoon, without any risk, save in eXceptional cases. Of course there are many ignorant and obstinate people, who, eating and drinking habitually like pigs, cannot be satisfied with this quiet and temperate mode of enjoyment. They pay the penalty of their disqualifications. But for intelligent people, who will learn how to eat and drink reasonably, there is abundance of healthful pleasure for the palate, even during the hottest of hot days. Eating and drinking correctly are an art, and have to be acquired.—New York Telegram.

KEEP A FAMILY RECORD.—It is astonishing how careless many people are in keeping family records. Many people hardly know when they were born. Parents do not know the age of their children. Some hardly know their parents' names, especially their mother's maiden name. Lots of people cannot give the names of their grandparents, and still fewer can give the dates of their births and deaths, nor tell where they were buried. Some people do not seem to think more of their ancestors than a horse does of his. These things ought not so to be.—Ex.
