al Constitution, and are ready at all hazards to carry its provisions into effect; to assert otherwise is a libel upon the fair fame of the citizens of the Commonwealth.

Resolved, That the adjustment measures of the last Congress shall be faithfully observed and respected by the Whigs.

Resolved, That That an unalterable determination to maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and Laws has been, and is now one of our cardinal doctrines, and that, while others have faltered, the history of the Whig party demonstrates that, in the storms of adversity or in the sunshine of prosperity, this guiding star of our country's hope has never been dimmed by its action or council.

Resolved, That the opinion of our worthy State Executive on this subject, as expressed in his last annual message, meets the cordial approval of this Convention, and expresses the views of our constituents.

Resolved, That Wm. F. Johnston, Pennsylvania's Whig Governor, deserves and will receive the gratitude of tax-paying thousands, for his untiring zeal and devotion to secure and further their interest, by perfecting a sinking fund system that must ultimately pay that oppressive State debt, which has been fastened upon them by the profligacy and extravagance of our opponents, and for his efforts to complete and bring into successful operation the unfinished public works without increased taxation, thus proving how wisely and how well he has watched over and guarded every interest, devised every means, and directed all, that the welfare of the whole people should be secured.

Resolved, That it is our duty to accustom ourselves to think and speak of the National Union as the main pillar in the edifice of our political safety and prosperity, essential to our collective and individual happiness, and for which we cherish a cordial, habitual, and immoveable attachment, discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned.

Resolved, That the National Administration, under the guidiance of our Whig President, Millard Fillmore, has the unbounded confidence of the Whigs of Pennsylvania; that in our domestic policy its manly advocacy of protection to native industry, the improvement of rivers and harbors, the reduction of postage, and the strict accountability and economy of public officers, its energetic, republican, truthful and dignified management of our foreign affairs, have secured for it the gratitude of this and the respect of other nations.

Resolved, That the Whig party, and all such members of other parties as feel a common interest in the prosperity and good name of Pennsylvania, entertain a just pride in our executive officer, who firmly maintained her honor and faith at home and abroad, and who has defined with ability her principles and policy, whenever and wherever assailed.

Resolved, That the history of Governor Johnston's administration furnishes us the safest guarantee that on all subjects submitted for his consideration, his action therein will be governed, influenced and directed by a faithful regard to truth, justice, and the requirements of the Constitution.

Resolved, That Gen. Winfield Scott is beyond question the choice of the Whigs of Pennsylvania as their candidate for the Presidency in 1852, and that we earnestly recommend him to the Whigs of the Union as the most deserving and available candidate for that high office.

Pending the question upon the adoption of the resolutions, John M. Scott, Esq., of Philadelphia, moved the insertion of the following as an amendment:

Resolved, That the provisions of the Constitution in reference to the rendition of fugitives held to service or labor, demand and shall receive from our party a faithful, manly and unequivocal support.

On the question of the adoption of the amendment, a long, discursive and exciting discussion sprang up, in which Messrs. Ogle, Sullivan, Bell, Robinson, Loomis, J. M. Scott, John Dickey and others participated. The remarks of the different speakers were frequently interrupted by the noisiest demonstrations of applause. The speech of Mr. Ogle was received with up roarious shouts of laughter and great satisfaction.

Finally, the previous question was called on the discussion, and sustained, on a call for the yeas and nays, by a vote of 71 to 43.—The question then recurring upon the resolutions, the amendment having fallen with the admission of the previous question, they were adopted by yeas 92, nays 27.

The committee appointed to wait on the Governor and invite him to a seat in the Convention, reported that Governor Johnston would be present this evening.

The Convention then adjourned till 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The Convention re assembled at 8 o'clock, and on motion of Mayor Gilpin, proceeded to nominate candidates for Canal Commissioner. The following named persons were placed in nomination:—George V. Lawrence, Washington county; Robert F McClay, Clarion; Lord Butler, Luzerne; William L. Loyd, Blair; John Covode, Westmorland; S. P. Markle, Westmorland; William Campbell, Jefferson; and John Strohm and Joseph Konigmacher, Lancaster.

The Convention then proceeded to nominate candidates for Judes of the Supreme Court, as follows:—John Banks, Berks; David F. Gordon, Berks; Richard Coulter, Westmorland; Joshua A. Comly, Montour; Joseph F. Buffington, Armstrong; John B. Miles, Huntingdon; George Chambers, Franklin; Wm. Jessup, Susquehanna; Frederick Watts, Cumberland; Jos. F. Hale, Centre; Nathaniel Ewing, Fayette; Daniel H. Mulvany, Montgomery; D. O. Parry, Schuylkill; John M. Scott Philadelphia; Daniel M. Smyser, Adams; John H. Walker Erie; Thomas E. Franklin, Lancaster; James Pollock, Northumberland; Thomas S. Bell, Chester; and Wm. M. Meredith, Philadelphia.

The nominations here closed, and about the same time Gov. Johnston entered the Convention, and was received with tumultuous applause and repeated cheers. When he had been introduced and taken his seat, a motion was made that the Convention adjourn to the street in front of the Court House, to listen to a speech from the Governor, which was agreed to, and the Governor spoke for an hour or more, in his usual happy style, to the immense mass crowded together in all the avenues leading to the Court House.

The meeting had not adjourned at 10 o'clock.

SKETCH OF GOV. JOHNSTON'S SPEECH.

The Governor took the platform in front of the building, and was received with long and loud applause. In the course of his address, which was listened to with marked and profound attention, he alluded to the importance of the approaching State elections, involving the choice not only of a Governor and Canal Commissioner, and the Legislature, but the choice also, for the first time in the State, of the five judges of the Supreme Court. He dwelt with particular effect and emphasis upon the paramount necessity of nominating able and incorruptible men for this high and important judicial tribunal.

He next vindicated what had been his own policy as Chief Magistrate of the State, and his efforts to increase the public revenue and to reduce the taxes of the people. He exhibited triumphantly the results of this policy in redeeming the public credit, and in relieving the burthens under which the State had suffered. He considered that it was our true policy to carry out the system of a sinking fund, and the appropriation of the surplus revenues to the public works begun, so as to make them available and advantageous to the public service. Then turning from this point, he enlarged upon the disastrous operations of the tariff act of 1846, and his own efforts for a better system; but all his recommendations to the Legislature had been utterly disregarded from Political considerations; and now the Sheriff has his official process upon many of our once most prosperous manufacturing establishments. When the existing law went into operation, he pledged himself, if elected, to pursue policy which his experience had proven to be that most beneficial to the State.

The Tariff was a leading subject of his speech, and he argued the policy of home protection as indispensable to prosperity of Pennsylvania, to redeem her from the present prostrated condition of her great manufacturing interests. He spoke frankly and freely on the compromise measures. He should never have voted for the Texas Boundary Bill nor for the Fugitive Slave Law; but the Compromise bills are now the law of the land, and the questions are settled. The controversy on these agitating and irritating subjects has been adjusted—the Fugitive Slave Law is a law of the land—it demands our obedience, and no honest or right minded man will resist it. But the law is still within reach of amendment. It is not necessarily an absolute and perfect law. It is just as open to free and fair discussions and modification as the tariff act of 1846. The law, as such, requires our allegiance. The Whig party has always been a party of law and order.

While the law remains on the statue book we will abide by it; but if this law could be amended and made more perfect, he would if called upon to vote, support proper changes that would render it more acceptable. In regard to any amendment of the law, he said the people were told not to ask for its modification for fear of disunion; but he did not think that any one act of congress could dissolve the union. It would require long years, to poison the public mind to such an extent that it would entertain the idea of dissolution and he esteemed it the duty of every man to teach his children and neighbors the improbability of such a calamity in whatever situation he might be placed. He would ever preach such doctrines even at the fireside and to his offspring.

He said the Union was not worth preserving if the organic laws which have existence for that Union were violated. The immunities granted by the Constitution must be respected, and if he erred in his political course it was not designedly, but it was rather an error of judgement than of intention or heart. He said the Democratic party would attempt to make the coming campaign a question of disunion or union.

He deprecated the position of the Democratic party as a national party. It was entirely aground, and their action would tend, if anything could tend, towards dissolution. He alluded to the repeal of the section in the law of march, 1847, to prevent kidnapping, and ridiculed the importance which was attached to it by the opposition. He said the act had remained upon the statute book for four years, and only in the session of 1851, in the last hour, it was discovered to be of any importance, and it was then hastily repealed, and the bill sent to him for approval.

He said he would stand up for the institutions of his own home, no matter who complained; and he boldly asserted his right to examine and carefully weigh all measures which were presented for his approbation.

The Governor, at the close of his address was loudly cheered.

SECOND DAY.

The convention met pursuant to adjournment, and on the sixth ballot, nominated John Strohm, of Lancaster for Canal Commissioner by a vote of Strohm, 69, Lawrence 39, Lloyd, 15. The nomination of Strohm was ratified unanimously.

The ballotings for candidates for the Supreme court resulted in the nomination of Richard Coulter 113, Joshua W. Comly 104, George Chambers 96. William M. Meredith 77. William Jessup 77.

Mr. Bell moved to appoint a Committee of one from each congressional district to act for the Whig party.

On motion the nominations were unanimously ratified.

Resolutions were adopted recommending the different nominees to the people throughout the State. The following resolutions was unanimously passed: that the delegates of this Convention individually pledge themselves to use all fair and honorable means to secure the election of the entire ticket placed in nomination by the Convention. A resolution was passed tendering thanks to the Whigs of Lancaster for their kindness and courtesy to the delegates. The Convention then adjourned sine die, with six cheers.

The Public Debt and the Locofoco Party.

The 'glorious principles of Democracy' are the subjects of ceaseless ranting by Locofoco speakers. This is an old trick of the enemy. They are at the old cry of 'stop thief.' Themselves guilty of what, if known, would keep them out of power until years of repentance had atoned for their crimes and given earnest of future honesty, they try to deceive the public by raising false issues—drawing off attention from their misconduct—and thus escaping the indignation of a betrayed and outraged people.

This is their obvious desire. We can't afford to indulge them in it. Our duty to the State impels us to say that they have used power iniquitously, and that they have made it the means of saddling upon the taxpayers of the State an enormous debt, which will require many and long years of economy and frugality to discharge.

The Reading Convention appeared very much frightened at the idea of having a permanent National debt. They said that it would be an 'incubus,' which would greatly retard our prosperity; and they endeavored to throw the responsibility of its creation upon the Whig party. What a set of hypocrites they are! They had the power in Pennsylvania uninterruptedly from 1824 to 1835. During that time they put the State in debt twenty two millions three hundred and sixty nine thousand five hundred and eleven dollars and thirteen cents. ($22,369,511 13.)

From 1835 to 1839 when they were out of power, not a cent was added to the State debt.

From 1838 to 1848 they were in power. When Gov. Johnston was elected 1848, the State debt was OVER FORTY MILLIONS OF DOLLARS—showing an increase of nearly twenty millions in ten years. The men who did this, now talk about the impropriety of creating public debt! What hypocrisy! Their history shows, that they are good for nothing else.

Gov. Johnston has been in office about three years. In that time he has paid more than HALF A MILLION OF DOLLARS of this Locofoco debt. Do the people wish to have the public debt lessened as rapidly as possible? If they do, let them re-elect Gov. Johnston. Do they want to re-instate in power the men who ADDED about two millions to the State Debt every year? If they do, let them elect Wm. Bigler Governor of the State.

Lever, Watch, and minute Automata Mechanism.

J. A. SINGLETON (Pupil of Litherland, the Patentee, and late with R. Roskell, Liverpool,) Chronometer, and Patent Lever Watch Manufacturer.

In compliance with numerous influential and earnest solicitations to remain in Montrose, I have consented, on condition that I meet with that encouragement and approval which it shall be my constant study and interest to merit.

In addition to the Manufacturing Department, J. A. S. undertakes effectually to repair every description of Geneva Musical Tableaux, Repeating and other Watches, together with Automata Mechanism, however complex. The disagreeable jarring so prevalent in spiral music, and so justly complained of, thoroughly eradicated, more particularly so in Musical Boxes.

It must be admitted that, in connection with, and in addition to theoretical knowledge, or a speculative acquaintance, it is indispensibly requisite the artizan should be practically familiar with the complex nature of that delicately minute description of machinery referred to. This qualification, and this only, renders the artist competent to accomplish with mathematical accuracy.

If upwards of forty years' assiduous and practical perseverance in the construction of various approved escapements for the more accurate means of measuring Time, in conjunction with unique specimens of Automata now in his possession, together with the high patronage enjoyed, preponderates in the scale of scientific approbation, then J. A. S. unostentatiously presumes he has some pretensions to the confidence of those honoring him with the recommends.
