The Post.

Middleburg, MAY, 1, 1879.

J. CROUSE, Editor & Proprietor.

"Exodusting" is a new word coined by Western journalists, in speaking of the stampede of the colored people from the South.

Hon. H. G. Fisher has been selected as the member of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee from Pennsylvania.

Information from the South shows that it is flooded with pamphlets encouraging the people there in the faith that the lost cause has been found.

A bill has been introduced in the House at Harrisburg for the licensing of all persons over 21 years who desire to purchase drinks at a public bar.

The extra session of Congress has already cost the country about $500,000, and the returns for the investment are very meagre. Set it down to Confederate reform and economy.

At the recent election, Michigan gave a clear majority of between 3,000 and 4,000 over Democrats and Greenbackers. Last year the combined majority against the Republicans was 25,000.

The Japanese are fitting up a palace for General Grant, and he is to be the guest of the Empire. Forty thousand dollars have been set aside for his entertainment, and it will no doubt be on a grand scale.

Jefferson Davis, according to the Democratic papers, will soon visit Washington. And while there will probably pick out his seat in the senate, so that when he is sent back officially he can drop into it without delay. The brigadiers yearn to see him reseated.

A project is on foot to have the entire force of the National Guard of Pennsylvania assemble on the Gettysburg battlefield some time during the coming summer, and go into camp for one week. It is intended to make it the largest encampment ever held in the State.

Ex-Congressman Smalls, of South Carolina, says that the negroes of that State are scraping all their money together preparatory to "exodusting" to Kansas. They are bound to stampede, says Smalls, and will live on tenpenny nails until they get money enough to buy railroad tickets.

A Southern statesman in conversation with a representative of the Chicago Tribune, is reported to have said: "We are going to put a rebel President into the White House, for Democracy now means nothing else.' The true animous of the opposition to Tilden is perhaps explained rather prematurely

One day, toward the close of last month, a remarkable wave of darkness obscured a part of London, and for twenty minutes it was as dark as on a moonless night. The darkness differed from that of an ordinary fog, as distant lights could be clearly seen, but all above was veiled in impenetrable gloom. As the darkness abated a lurid glare caused alarm, the idea prevailing that it arose from a tremendous conflagration.

Diptheria is prevailing to a remarkable extent all over the world. In this country it has exhibited itself in malignant form North, South, East and West. It has shown itself in nearly every country of Europe, and in Russia its ravages have been more fatal even than the plague. This disease, which rarely occurs except as an epidemic, has only been known in this country within the last twenty-five years, except in the way of occasional sporadic cases.

The first Treasury warrant for the payment of arrears of pensions was issued on Thuesday, and the Secretary now thinks he can pay the back pensions as fast as the amounts can be made up, or at the rate of a million and a half a month, unless Congress makes some unexpected appropriation. He estimates that after July 1st the refunding of the debt in lower-rate bonds will save the Government at least thirteen millions annually, and two years of this saving, it is estimated will nearly pay the pensions.

Every effort of the Democracy to disparage General Grant fails as it comes forth, for the reason that Grant is a manly man. There is no such material in the Democratic party; no such manhood in all the range of Southern traitors, from politition to braggart, legislator to rebel brigadier. The Republican party at this time, could, not be better served than in the abuse of Grant. We advise our Democratic opponents, therefore, to pile it on thick. —Harrisburg Telegraph.

As an evidence of the revival of business, the transactions at the Philadelphia custom house for March should be considered satisfactory. During that month the receipts amounted to 1,077,538 nearly $50,000 more than in March 1876, when many goods where passing through the customs for exhibition at the centennial. In noticing the agreeable fact the Inquirer remarks: "There is no longer any doubt that the tide of trade has fairly turned. For five years it ebbed and ebbed until it really seemed as though we should never, never get afloat again. Then came slack water, and now the waves of prosperity have began to flow in, and in a little while all our harbors, which have so long been [illegible] again."

The famous Kittanning Point at the "Horse-shoe curve" on the Pennsylvania railroad route over the Allegenies is being beautified. The company has made a large "fill in" from time to time, until now there is nearly half an acre of ground made on the lower side of the curve. The embankments on both sides for the entire length are being sodded the made ground laid out as a huge flower bed with a fountain in the centre, supplied from the springs in the rocks from the huge mountains adjoining. On the outer edge of this huge flower garden is erected an exact imitation of a Swiss cottage, which will not only add adornment to the spot but will be used by the track watchman constantly on duty at the Point. At the bank of the horse-shoe, so to speak, or at the curve there is a high bridge above the roadway. At this point a huge electric lighthouse is in course of erection. From this point a flood of light will be thrown on the tracks, east and west, lighting up the whole valley on nights "when de moon doth shine."

Hezekiah Shaffer, who murdered his wife on February 21, 1878, was hanged in the jail yard at Chambersburg, on the 17th ult. He was carried to the scaffold in a blanket, the loss of blood consequent upon his attempt at suicide rendering him so weak that he was unable to walk

A Washington correspondent thus sums up the whole matter: "Twenty-seven loyal States furnish 269 Senators and Representatives, of whom 54 were Union soldiers. Eleven disloyal States furnish 93 Senators and Representatives of whom 85 were rebel soldiers."

Gen John A. Dix, died at his residence in New York, on Monday night, in the eighty-first year of his age.

SPECIAL NOTICE. Many abuses have grown up under the old system of selling sewing machines through "Middlemen," whose cupidity has often led to misrepresentation and fraud.

For the protection of the public and ourselves we have abandoned this whole pernicious system. We have abolished the "middleman" and sell directly through our own salaried agents, whom we are able to control.

We can thus give to every purchaser of a Genuine Singer Sewing Machine the guaranty of a company of 25 years standing, that any machine sold by a "Singer" agent is exactly what it is represented.

The difference between such a guaranty, and the guaranty of an irresponsible, hungry canvasser, whom the purchaser has never seen before and may never see again, is too marked to require comment.

We Warrant Every Machine Sold by us.

The Singer Company have established an office in ULSH'S DRUG STORE, SELINSGROVE, Pa. Machines will be sold on the installment plan at reduced prices.

WEST JERSEY MARL AND TRANSPORTATION COMPANY.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.—We are now prepared to deliver the justly celebrated Marl at points along the S. & L. R.R. at $10 a ton. An analysis of a pounded white Marl, taken from a uniform slice cut from the face of the bank, made by George H. Cook, State Geologist of New Jersey, shows as follows:

Phosphoric Acid,	2 5-10 lbs.	Alumina	8 9-10 lbs.
Silicic Acid,	49 2-10 lbs.	Protoxide of Iron	17 6-10 lbs.
Lime,	6 7-10 lbs.	Water,	8 1-10 lbs.
Lime,	2 5-10 lbs.
Magnesia,	3 5-10 lbs.	Total	100 lbs.

The West Jersey Marl Company have their Marl cut from the top to the bottom of the bed, and thoroughly mixed, and they pledge themselves to supply Marl equal to the sample analyzed.

This Marl is adapted to all classes of soil and crops, and numerous testimonials can be shown from farmers and truckmen of its remarkable worth as a

PERMANENT FERTILIZER.

Its constituents of Phosphoric Acid and Potash alone make it at once the cheapest and best of manures, and of actual value to the farmers of over $1 per bushel or $2 per ton.
