The nomination of Marriot Brosius, Esq., of Lancaster, for Congress-man-at-large, was a large piece of spontaneous combustion with all the force, effect and merit of the Tom Marshall nomination of May 10th.

General Beaver at Chicago.

The following letter from a brother of Prof. Joseph Shortlidge of Concordville, this county, shows that General Beaver did not betray his constituents at Chicago, as has been asserted :—

To the Editor of the Press.

SIR: When the Republican Committee of Centre County met to elect delegates to the Harrisburg Convention which was to select delegates to the National Convention at Chicago in 1880, there was no possible misunderstanding as to General Beaver's position. In the first place Centre County, by rotation, was entitled to a delegate to the National Convention. This being understood it was generally conceded by all Republicans that General Beaver was our representative man, and would best serve the interest of the party. I was a member of the committee, and a Blaine man. Prior to the meeting of the Committee I called on General Beaver, and stated to him that I believe it was the desire of the Republicans of our county that he should represent us at Chicago, and ask him for whom he would vote in the event of his appointment as delegate to Chicago. He replied: "I will vote for General Grant I will not go back on my old commander." "In the event that General Grant shall be withdrawn or cease to be a candidate before a nomination shall have been made, I will vote for James G Blaine." Before the delegates were elected to the Harrisburg Convention I stated to a caucus of the Blaine members of the County Committee the above conversation with General Beaver. We did not believe that Grant would be a formidable candidate before the Chicago Convention, and being anxious to serve General Beaver we concluded that we would give him the support of his own county and send Beaver delegates to the State Convention uninstructed. I was at that time as I am now a Blaine man. Last year I voted for Mr. Wolfe; but I believe General Beaver is the choice of the great mass of the Republicans of Pennsylvania and was fairly nominated by them, and I am unequivocally and enthusiastically in favor of him for Governor, and I assert that, the statement, that he in any wise betrayed his constituents at Chicago is unqualifiedly false.

Yours truly.
WILLIAM SHORTLIDGE.

The Political Lie.

United States Senator Cameron denies the absurd story published in regard to his utterances on the tariff question in the following letter:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., June 5, 1882.
—I note what you say about the rumor which is now going the rounds concerning certain alleged remarks supposed to have been uttered by me. I did not suppose that there was any man of common sense in Pennsylvania who would ever believe that I said such a thing, and, therefore, I do not think it worth while to trouble myself about denying it; and the utter absurdity of the thing condemns it.

I do not intend to be put upon the defensive, and therefore, I shall not deny any political lie which is started by the enemies of the party.

Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for THE PHILADELPHIA PRESS and THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE, is a branch of the Philadelphia Press Office.

Mr. Taggart, of Northumberland, in a speech before the Republican State Convention which met at Harrisburg, on the 21, inst., said the following:

This convention has very properly reassembled to complete its own unfinished work, and if it has not the right and the power to do that, I would like to know who has? And in spite of my learned friend, Lear, who is unavoidably absent to-day, on account of sickness in his family, I think that a body which made such good nominations before can be trusted to make another. But I am sorry that one of our nominees, Tom Marshall, did not have as good an opinion of himself as we had of him. He could have filled the bill well enough but for his confounded modesty—a failing which is as rare as it is unbecoming in a congressman or a Senator. If any mischief-making democrat tries to make you believe that Don Cameron owns this convention, tell him that you have just called to preside over it a man who is not only for James A Beaver for governor, but for James G. Blaine for president from the crown of his head to the soles of his pot metal boots, and who looks upon Boss Wolfe, Boss Mitchell, and even Boss Cameron and all the other bosses as of very little account in comparison with the continued supremacy of the great republican party. And it occurs to me that the party could spare them all for a little while just now, till after the election, with great advantage to itself. For then we should have neither independents nor stalwarts, but only republicans who learned the battle cry of freedom under Ben Wade, Thad Stevens, Simon Cameron and Abraham Lincoln, and whose flag has never trailed in National defeat since the complete organization of the party twenty-two years ago. If the people could only realize how transitory, and of small consequence both big and little men in public life are by the side of eternal principles, there would be no party schisms growing out of personal friendships or personal hatred. But of all political tantrums the most illogical and the most disbolically unjust is to oppose a brave and gifted candidate, who is almost the unanimous choice of the party, because some "big dog of the tanyard" whom we envy, fear or hate is also for him. And on this account to be willing to hand over the destinies of the country to an organization whose policy we believe to be pernicious if not destructive. The right time to show your hostility is when the obnoxious fellow himself comes up for election. I would be ashamed to allow Don Cameron or even his old daddy—I don't mean his old grand daddy—to influence me half as much as our sore headed friends are influenced by him. They have even permitted him to drive them out of the party, for the present at least, and to put them in practical opposition to their lifelong convictions, and to make them efficient allies of the democratic party. Salvation by proxy is what most of us will have to depend upon, but damnation by the same process is a trifle unreasonable, and yet this is the dose they offer to our pure and noble candidate for governor and his worthy colleagues upon the regular republican ticket. Though Don Cameron all stalwarts are to be damned, and by him all independents, especially when has the toothache. This puts both wings of the party in a bad fix. We all know that General Beaver would have been nominated if the bosses had been against him. We all know that Charley Wolfe did not get a single vote for lieutenant governor, although the big boss electioneered for him. We all know that Tom Marshall got a two-thirds vote and yet neither Quay nor Cameron ever asked a man to go for him. The truth is, no man ever lived who was big enough to own a convention of 251 picked men of the republican party of Pennsylvania, and it is calumny upon the state, the nation and popular government to assert it. There are men in this convention whom even their wives do not own exclusively, and yet they are assessed as the sole property of one poor, inoffensive, fallible man. If it be possible for us to devise some plan by which our grand organization can be reunited with its forty thousand majority, it is our very obvious duty to devise it, regardless of the wishes of any one man, or set of men. The success of the party is of more account than that of a thousand bosses, or a whole pack of wolves, with Charley at the head or tail of them. I am for Blaine and Beaver all the time, and I may say without profanity, that I don't care a Beaver dam who knows it, and I am sure that most of you are just as independent, if not quite so stalwart as myself. Being sort of accidental president, I don't feel that I am under particular obligations to any of you for the place. I will try to deserve it, however, by acting fairly.

Mr. Taggart's speech is peculiar to Mr. Taggart and highly suggestive and characteristic of the man. He says some very good things with a flippancy that don't hurt the truth or force of his sayings. We owe it Mr. Taggart to publish his speech in full. One thing is very clear that Mr. T. has no idea of attending a funeral this next November.

Judge Agnew leaves the Independents.

The venerable Judge Agnew, named before the Independent Convention both for Governor and the Supreme Judgeship, last Saturday published a letter in the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, in which he said:

'The power of the Independent ticket can be felt in the defeat only of the Republican party in the State. In the language of my letter to Mr. Mapes, 'This is inevitable, for the Democracy, who are wise as serpents, will take advantage of division.' Democratic success gives that party a four years' lease of power in the State. This includes the Presidential election of 1884. Now, who taught you that the defeat of Bossism, by a deep-seated schism in the party, is not fatal disruption, or that the death of Republicanism in 1882 will be followed by a happy resurrection in 1883? You are not the first one whose 'foresight is not equal to his hindsight.' You will find that many beside myself will regard your tragic heroism, simple suicide, to be punished by a stake through the body at the crossroads.

Could you not tell us something of the other side—the humiliation of Republican defeat, the heartburnings of clashing leaders, the bickerings and animosities of factions, the rejoicings of the victors, the stimulus of victory to future effort, the transfer of the 'spoils,' the advantage of the possession of the arsenals, and ammunitions of war, and the strongholds of power, and the control which possession of the State gives over the election in 1884. Your quackery would use the knife, tho' you endangered the Union by the loss of Pennsylvania. It reminds me of a case of malpractice tried before us, when a heroic surgeon extirpated the liver as a huge tumor. Did he kill the patient? Certainly. A Democratic victory in 1884 is a reversal of the Republican policy of twenty years—is danger to the doctrine of protection—to the system of national currency, the revival of free trade notions, the resumption of Bourbonism, the renewal of Bossism in the South, and of many dangers which, when you were a commonsense Republican, you once saw.

Beaver, June 8, 1882.

On To Denver.

To the weird beauty of the Rocky Mountains resorts and health giving quality of its sparkling waters and bright skies, as an inducement to the tourists and pleasure-seekers for a summer trip to Colorado, must be added this season the attractions of the National Mining and Industrial Exposition, the interesting features of which are new, numerous, and varied. This grand exhibit of minerals and geological specimens, together with the best productions of mechanical and industrial skill, opens August 1st for two months.

The good news reach our table, in official form, that the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy NEW THROUGH LINE from Chicago, Peoria or St. Louis to Denver, will be opened for through passenger traffic on July 23, thus affording all intending visitors to Colorado, a direct, elegant and comfortable route. When ready to go you should ask your ticket agent to ticket you by way of the "Burlington Route," the only through line.

THE CANDIDATE.

Marriot Brosius was born in Colerraine township, Lancaster county, in 1843, and after receiving a common school education entered the Law University at Ann Arbor, Michigan. Before completing his course the war broke out and young Brosius enlisted, in 1862, as a private in the Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers serving gallantly as a soldier. At the battle of Bermuda hundred, Virginia, he was shot in the right shoulder and is yet partly disabled. After his discharge from the army Mr. Brosius entered the law office of Thomas E. Franklin, of Lancaster, and was subsequently admitted to the bar of that county. From early life he has been identified with the temperance cause, delivering many lectures and addresses on that subject. He is an orator of fine ability and was honored by being selected to deliver the oration at the unveiling of the monument at Antietam two years ago. He has never held office except that of notary public and School Director, being at present a member of the Lancaster School Board.
