POLITICAL.

County Chairman McFarland has established headquarters in the Armory building, 2nd floor.

The county chairmen of the new Congressional district, composed of Washington, Beaver and Lawrence counties, appear unable to agree upon a method for making nominations. The Beaver county chairman proposes the old and vicious conferee system, in which each county shall be equally represented by delegates. The Lawrence county chairman urges a slightly better method, the voting of first, second and third instructions by each county, no county to drop its favorite until at least 20 ballots have been taken.

To the Washington county chairman belongs the credit of suggesting the only rational and fair means of nominating a candidate—by popular vote. His plan is that all candidates shall be voted for by the party voters of the district, the one having the largest vote to be the nominee. It may be contended that the most populous county in a district is given an advantage by this system. That is only true in rare cases where where local pride dominates political sentiment. Ordinarily there are well-defined issues represented by the several candidates that will have more influence upon the canvass than the desire of each county to name the nominee.

The instructive feature of the controversy, however, is broader than the district. It proves the necessity for a general State law, governing primary elections, on the lines proposed in the Guthrie bill of last winter. The primaries are the foundations of the whole political fabric and should be uniform, honest and expressive of the popular will.—Dispatch.

Clarion county is strongly Democratic and the local nominees of that party are usually elected, but this year their nominee for Judge will probably be badly defeated. The Jacksonian, the leading Democratic paper of the county, in a late issue said:

After mature deliberation and thorough investigation the Jacksonian has decided to endorse the candidacy and work for the election of Harry R. Wilson for President Judge of the Eighteenth Judicial District.

In future issues our reasons for this course will be set forth at length. Briefly stated some of them are as follows:

The office of President Judge is or should be a non-partisan office. The people should select for Judge the man who is best fitted professionally, morally and every other way for the place regardless of his affiliations. So in supporting Harry R. Wilson we do not feel that we are breaking any political faith but we are simply exercising the right which every citizen enjoys of selecting and supporting the candidate whose election he believes will redound most to the interest and benefit of the people of the county.

Professionally considered Mr. Wilson is an ideal candidate. His education, professional training, experience, and skill in interpreting the law are beyond question.

As a man Mr. Wilson is clean, honest upright, reliable and without a stain of any kind upon his reputation or character.

He was nominated by his party fairly honorably, unanimously and without his personal solicitation. Mr. Hindman was nominated in all probability by corrupted Republican votes in what no one calls anything but the most bitter and corrupt primary election contest ever held in the county. It is openly charged that liquor, money and promises of place and patronage were used in the most reckless and disgraceful manner in securing Mr. Hindman's nomination.

If these charges are true, Mr. Hindman has already made it impossible for him to consistently take the oath of office. If he should be elected and under the circumstances take the oath of office, what incentive could there be to induce him to keep his obligation?

Believing these things to be true the Jacksonian cannot do otherwise than advocate the withdrawal of support from Hindman and urge the election of Harry R. Wilson. We call upon all true Democrats to rebuke the corruption that has made its appearance in our party and which at the late primary election brought the entire county into humiliation and disgrace. As a matter of self preservation the Democratic party must denounce the tactics and practices of the political boodler or the party will go down to everlasting defeat in the county.

It is the open boast of Hindman's chief supporters that with his election a strong political machine will be cemented together and that this machine will control the patronage and offices of the county. This fact is being held over the heads of office holders and office seakers in the party as an incentive or a threat. A man who will deliberately seek by such means to be elevated to the sacred duties of the bench with such motives in view is unfit for any trust. The Democrats of the county cannot afford to sanction such a dastardly plot and we refuse to believe that they will.

Resolutions.

On death of our President, Comrade William McKinley.

James Harvey Post No. 514, Department of Penn'a G. A. R.

Whereas, the murderous hand of an assassin has taken the life of our beloved Comrade, William McKinley, President of the United States, in the very zenith of his fame and usefulness.

And further, believing as we do that the teaching and preaching of anarchists, by their inflammatory speeches and publications are always a menace to our free institutions and endanger the lives of our best citizens, especially those in high position. Therefore resolved,

1st. That in the death of our Comrade, William McKinley, our country has lost an able and patriotic President and a Statesman of world-wide reputation, and the Grand Army a noble and loyal Comrade.

2nd. That our safety as a Government and our prosperity as a people enmand that our lawmakers enact and force the most stringent laws for t suppression of anarchy and the extermination of anarchists.

3rd. That while we mourn the loss of a dear comrade and an honored President we take great comfort in the thought that he lived a Christian life, and that great and honored as he was here, death to him was but gain.

4th. That to his invalid and now sorely afflicted widow, we of James Harvey Post in common with our comrades of every other Post in this broad land extend our most sincere and heartfelt sympathy in her great bereavement.

Benjamin Harrison on Taxation.

In a series of lectures on "The Obligations of Wealth," by the late Benjamin Harrison, published by the Bowen-Merrill Company, Indianapolis, a number of very sound observations are to be found that are entitled to serious consideration. The estimation in which a man is held, he says, should be determined by his character, and not by his possessions. It is quite as illogical to despise a man because he is rich as because he is poor. Not what a man has but what he is, settles his class. Poverty is not a virtue, nor is property a crime. What we want is equality of opportunity, not of dollars, and the dull brother must not be handicapped by chicanery. Justice is the best safeguard against injustice.

One of the just causes for complaint which the poor have against the rich, he argues, is the fact that many rich men flaunt their wealth on the street and hide it from the tax gatherer.

"It is a part of our individual covenant as citizens with the state that we will, honestly and fully, in the rate or proportion fixed from time to time by law, contribute our just share to all public expenses.

"A full and conscientious discharge of that duty by the citizen is one of the tests of good citizenship. To evade that duty is a moral delinquency, an unpatriotic act."

Real estate seldom escapes proper taxation, but the great bulk of the fortunes of rich men are represented by securities, including stocks, bonds, notes, mortgages and the like, and these are seldom fairly represented in the tax returns. The delinquency is most flagrant in the great centres of wealth, where it is notorious that the rich do not pay their just proportion of the taxes.

"A gentleman of prominence, residing in one of the smaller towns of New England," says the late President Harrison, "recently told me that there had resided in his town for many years a gentleman who was reputed to be wealthy, whom he supposed to be worth, perhaps a million dollars, and who was assessed for $100,000.

"He died, and when his personal property was scheduled by his executor it was found to amount to about six million dollars, and when this property went upon the assessment roll of the town the tax rate was reduced one-half.

In other words, this gentleman, living in neighborly relations to his fellow-citizens and discharging apparently with kindliness all of the obligations of citizenship, had been every year of his residence in the town defrauding his neighbors by compelling them to contribute to the public expense a share that he should in honesty and good conscience have discharged.

"He was filching from every hand that was extended to him in neighborly confidence His alms were of other men's goods."

As a remedy for this evil Mr. Harrison suggests that the various State legislatures should pass laws estopping the claim of any man or his heirs to property the ownership of which he had disclaimed in his tax returns.

While it is true that in Pennsylvania the expenses of the State Government, as well as the large appropriation to our public schools, are paid largely from corporation tax, it is also true that local taxation, especially in the cities and larger towns, would be very materially reduced if men who have their wealth in the various kinds of securities were compelled to bear as large a share of the burdens of taxation as those who have their money invested in real estate.

It is very difficult, however, to regulate these matters so as to prevent the dishonest from defrauding the honest The "single-taxers" maintain that the only solution of the problem is to place all taxes upon real estate, and their theories are presented in very plausible language. But it strikes us that all wealth, of whatever kind, should bear an equal share of the burdens of taxation.—Punxy Spirit.

At the recent convention of County Commissioners, held in Bellefonte, one of the Myers voting machines was on exhibition. It was examined and tested by many, and all agreed that it was a perfect device to secure a secret and honest ballot and an expeditious court. The cost of the machines would be repaid in two years by the saving on the present system of conducting elections. The Legislatures of twelve States have legalized the machine for voting, and over 600 cities and towns in New York are using them now with most gratifying results

The Constitutional Amendments.

Interest in the November contest should not cause citizens to overlook the fact that two Constitutional Amendments are to be voted on. One of these emanates from the Union Committee for the Promotion of Ballot Reform and the Merit System in Pennsylvania. It proposes to amend the Constitution so as to give authority to the General Assembly to prescribe personal registration of voters in cities. In its present form the Constitution provides that all laws regulating the holding of elections or for registration of electors shall be uniform, and that no elector shall be deprived of the privilege of voting by reason of non-registration. The latter clause was obviously intended to protect voters whose names had been negligently or maliciously left off the lists by assessors. Experience has demonstrated that the system of assessment in cities is susceptible of grave abuses. Too many of the assessors neglect their duties, or perform them improperly, while the principal cause of complaint is the assessment of the names of persons who are disqualified or mythical. In the country precincts the electors are well known, and padded lists are rare, but in the crowded cities, where persons may dwell for years in adjoining houses without becoming acquainted, and where there is a large migratory population, the present system offers abundant opportunities for fraud. The amendment recommended by the Union Committee on Ballot Reform provides that laws regulating and requiring registration may be enacted so as to apply to cities only, provided that such laws be uniform for cities of the same class. The reason for authorizing the application of personal registration to cities, without extending it throughout the State, is that the country districts consider that they do not need personal registration, and are averse to the expense which such a system would impose on them. The adoption of this constitutional amendment does not enjoin personal registration, but it empowers the Legislature to introduce it at the discretion of the law makers, and subject to the retained constitutional restrictions.

No better evidence of the necessity for personal registration and of its practicability need be sought than the experience of New York, where elections are often close and temptations to fraud strong. In New York city the registors sit for several days in advance of the general election for the purpose of enrolling the names of persons qualified to vote. Minute description of the physical appearance of the applicant is recorded in a book kept for the purpose as a check upon personation at the polls. The work of registration is done with order and care, and by representatives of the principal political parties, so that partisan advantage and fraud are minimized. The introduction of such a system to Philadelphia would not usher in the millennium, but it will conduce to fair and honest elections.

There is another Constitutional Amendment to be submitted at the November election. It provides that elections may be carried on by other secret means of voting than the ballot. The adoption of this amendment would permit the General Assembly to authorize the use of voting machines, of which there are several varieties.

Certainly no good citizen should fail to cast his vote in favor of the personal registration amendment.—Philadelphia Ledger.

OIL NOTES.

THE MARKET—Both agencies are paying $1.30, this morning.

AN IDEA.

The production of Pennsylvania oil as shown by the published runs for the month of September is not far from 86,000 barrels daily, the smallest since the month of March, 1899, when crude was $1.68; the decline over the previous month, August, being about 6,300 barrels daily average, notwithstanding it is alleged there was a new production of 6,770 barrels daily brought in in the month of September.

In the month 729 holes were drilled to get the new production, but the guesser must have his imagination largely developed, or the sand rocks are about drained.

The production for September seems to have gone all to pieces, the greatest per centage of decline being in the wells connected with the Eureka pipe line, that being about .09½ per cent., Southwest, Macksburg division and Tidewater, each showing a little over .05 per cent. decline, the National Transit line having the smallest decline of any, it being a trifle over .02 per cent., the production however of all the wells connected with this line for September being only 16,567 barrels per day against 19,224 barrels daily during September, 1899, a decline of nearly .14 per cent. in the 2 years.

The decline in the stocks of Pennsylvania oil during the month of September should be about 500,000 barrels, unless some sediment and surplus is used in the shipments reported, without which, the net stocks are lower than in Jan., Feb. and March, 1899, when the price on crude was $1.68 per barrel.

Producers should run their oil to the credit of some "trustees" who would advance any money required at a fair rate of interest, and then fix the price at say $2.00, thus meeting the buyer with one seller.

The "community of interest" being put into effect, to compel justice.

MIDDLESEX TWP—The Forest shot their well on the Marshall farm in the Gold field Friday and it started at the rate of 5 barrels a day when put to pumping. McIntosh's well on the David Park came in dry.

In the Bakerstown field south of Middlesex twp. Eisler, O'Brien & Co. have completed their No. 3 on the Porter farm and have a 20 barrel well. Campbell & Murphy are starting their No. 2 on the same farm.

BUTLER—West of town the Reiber Gas Co. have a well drilling on the Kradel farm, and the Forest, Scott and Starr on the Krug.

The workmen on the Krug and Keck farm well ride to and from work on the street cars, something new for Butler oil men.

Burtner & Co. have their rig up on the Stamm brickyard lot.

Alf Darling's well on John C. Kelly's farm came in Tuesday and shows for 10 barrel well in the thirty-foot.

CENTRE TWP—Sheriff Hoon and some friends are drilling a well on his farm five miles north of town, hoping for a double chance to strike oil, vis the McCalmont third sand streak or the Speechley. T. W. Phillips has a well started to drill to the Speechley on the Anthony Thompson and Barnsdall on the Jacob Renick.

CONCORD—Wells have been started for the Speechley on the Johnston Brown farm and on the Andrew McKinney farm east of Sunbury.

The South Penn's well on the Marshall farm at Hooker is reported very small. The Devonion Oil Co's well on the Samuel Glenn farm at Sunbury is in and reported dry. Nicklas & McGill have a nice 12 barrel well on the Pres. Murtland and the South Penn's No. 1 on the W. F. Murtland seven acres is also a good producer.

FORWARD—Dr. Showalter & Bro's last well drilled on their farm below Reibold is doing 24 barrels a day from the fourth sand.

Titusville was the scene of an impressive ceremony last Friday commemorative of a most important event in the industrial history of the world. It was the unveiling and presentation to the city of a magnificent monument to Colonel Edwin Laurentine Drake, the pioneer of the petroleum producing business. The donor of the granite pile has not permitted his name to be given to the public, but a blank has been left on one of the tablets where it will be engraved after the donor's death.

The most attractive figure at the ceremonies was that of the guest of honor, Mrs. Laura C. Drake, the widow of the man in whose honor they were held. Mrs. Drake has consented to the exhumation of her husband's body in order that the remains may be interred in the shadow of the beautiful monument, because, as she feelingly expressed it: "Colonel Drake belongs to the oil country." Hon. John Dalzell was the orator of the day, and many prominent oil producers were present. Col. Drake died some twenty years ago, and since he drilled the first oil well, about a billion barrels of the stuff have been taken from the earth of this country.

The Cup Races.

Sir Thomas Lipton, the Englishman who is trying to recover the America cup, had exactly the kind of wind he wished for last Thursday, and the racing yachts ran over the thirty mile course in three hours, the Columbia beating the Shamrock by 3 minutes.

In Friday's race the Shamrock led, but some blunders by her Captain or crew and the time allowance for extra sail gave the race to the Columbia by 41 seconds. This gave three races of the five to the Columbia, and the cup will stay here for another year.

The Cup itself—for the possession of which so many millions have been spent, and over which, it is no exaggeration to say, the whole world is periodically aroused to enthusiasm—is a rather insignificant piece of plate, whose claims to distinction are certainly not based upon its artistic beauty. It was won in the year 1851, at the time of the great World's Fair in London by the schooner-yacht "America," which was designed by George Steers for John C. Stevens and others of the New York Yacht Club, for the purpose of crossing the water and engaging in yachting contest with the British boats of that day. She was 88 feet on waterline; 94 feet over all; 22½ feet beam, and her draft was 11½ feet. She differed very widely, both in model and sail-plan, from the English yachts of that day, which were built on the "cod's head and mackerel tail" theories, according to which the greatest beam of a yacht was placed at a point considerably forward of amidships. The British designers of those days believed that a bluff entrance and a long, finely-drawn-out run and quarters were conducive to speed; and it is a remarkable fact that the challenger "Shamrock II," after fifty years of development in yachting, should show, as a result of the tank experiments on which she is modeled, some of the features of the early model, her point of greatest beam being rather far forward, her forebody rather full, and her afterbody relatively long and fine.

Mrs. Joseph Gruver of Harmony, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Cross at Erie, for some time, returned home this week.

Rev. J. B. Starkey D. D. of Pittsburg preached an excellent sermon in the M. E. church at Harmony on Sunday morning. He was the first presiding elder in the Northwest Conference in Minnesota and Dakota and is ripe with experience in the ministry and a forceful talker.

THE merciless and mercenary war which England is waging against the burghers of South Africa has now entered upon its third year, and is still costing her about $1,000,000 a day. It is the pinch in the pocket-book, rather than in the conscience, that is causing the present outburst of English opinion about the conduct of the war and its discouraging results. Although Kitchener has proclaimed the Boors as outlaws and bandits, and has burned their homes and confiscated their ruined farms, the sturdy burghers are still fighting effectively for home and freedom. It is not too much to hope that such heroism will finally save the two Republics from the onslaught of cruelty and greed—

"For He who worketh high and wise,
Nor falters in His plan,
Will take the sun out of the skies
Ere freedom out of man."

NEGLEY—At his home on High St., West End, Pittsburg, Saturday morning, Oct. 5, 1901, Major Felix C. Negley, aged 76 years, 7 months and 5 days.

Felix Casper Negley was the second son of John Negley, dec'd, and was born in Butler, February 28, 1825, in a house that stood on the west bank of the Connoquenessing creek, across from the present Walter mill. The foundation place of the old house can yet be seen. His education was received at the old Butler Academy and such other schools as were then in this place. While yet a young man he taught school in Clearfield twp., and perhaps in some other parts of the county. But his inclination was towards surveying or civil engineering, which he followed here for a while. About the time of reaching his majority he went to Pittsburg and was engaged there in mercantile pursuits with friends. He was married there, Oct. 12, 1848, to Miss Margaret A. Dickson, and soon after became a member of the firm of Dickson, Stewart & Co., in the coal business.

The discovery of gold in California came about that time, and he, with others from Butler and Pittsburgh, started in March, 1849, to that far off land to find gold. The hardships of that trip were often narrated by him. They went by the overland route, going down the Ohio river and up to Saint Joseph, Missouri There they purchased ox teams to draw their heavy articles and started on foot over the plains and barren deserts of near three thousand miles. It took months for the journey, and from the effects of it on his naturally very strong system he never fully recovered.

After returning from California he, in connection with his brother, James, kept store here in Butler for a short time, and returning to Pittsburg was engaged in the coal business until the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion.

He participated in that war in various ways and was active and patriotic in the service of the Union. At its close he again engaged in the coal business until the year 1884 when he became an officer in one of the Courts of Allegheny county, holding a position in same to his death.

He leaves a widow and ten living children—four sons and six daughters, nearly all married. He was a brother of Mrs. Mary B. Muntz, Mrs. Susan A. Patterson and John H. Negley of this place, all his elders in years. His relatives here generally attended his funeral, which took place Tuesday, last the remains being laid away in the Allegheny cemetery. His complaint was said to be heart failure. And thus ends the life of a kind husband and father, a true friend, and a man of most pronounced and generous character. The widow and family have the sympathy of all in their great loss.

MORE MEN ARE LEARNING

every day that its better to pay a little more for clothes made to measure than to try to save a few dollars, simply because the few thereby saved sacrifices the value of the clothes. It is impossible to cheapen the workmanship of good clothes without destroying their value.

Give us your order for our $30 sack suit and we will give you an interesting example of comfort and economy. Our abundant assortment of new fall goods affords every opportunity for a choice selection.
