the new States on the Pacific. Two persons found in the act of horse stealing on Casumnes river, were hanged by the people. N. Y. Herald Saturday.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Collins steamer Pacific arrived at her dock on Saturday morning, after making the voyge from Liverpool in the shortest space of time in which the passage has yet been accomplished. The joy of our citizens at this, though not so loudly expressed as when the news arrived of the safety of the Atlantic steamship, was not less general. All classes seemed proud of this triumph of our steam marine; and when the fact was announced on Change, the pleasure of the merchants was demonstrated by three hearty cheers for the Collins line of steamers.

The political news from the European States is not very interesting. The hopes of France are now centered on a new ministerial arrangement, which we have before noticed as in progress. This, in connection with the debates on the revision of the constitution, still keeps the gay capital alive with hopes and apprehensions. Business had revived with the anticipation of a more settled ministry, and the great mercantile houses were preparing for any contingency that might arise from the discussion on the constitution.

In England the Chancellor of the Exchequer has introduced a second budget, which has been tolerably received It is quite a modification of the first, and the ministers are holding on to office only till the dissolution of Parliament, which it is said, will take place before the close of the Great imposition as the English journals now admit the World's Fair to be. The case of Miss Augusta Talbot continues to occupy popular attention. The decision of the Lord Chancellor has been made in the case and he declared, under the circumstances, that the lady ought to be withdrawn from the convent at Taunton. Accordingly, we find that Miss Talbot is now in society having made her fiirst entree into the gay world, since the decision, at the residence of a noble lady, introduced by the Countess of Newburgh in whose care she remains. Miss Augusta Talbot it will be rememberd was a ward in Chancery, now nineteen, years of age, who had been placed by noble relatives at the convent, as a pupil—but as the fortune of eighty-five thousand pounds due when at her majority, would go to endow the convent, friends interposed to rescue her property and person from the establishment, Chancellor took occasion to say there was not a word of detraction. The case is quite an interesting one, and we shall endeavor to present, in a day or two, a complete history of it as given in the Court of Chancery.

So far as the general prospect of Europe is concared, we can pergeive nothing that diminishes the anticipations which we have often expressed with respect to grave political commotions during the summer.—London may furnish many mad spirits, who will attempt any difficulties to carry out their favorite theoretical projects, while it is not too much to suppose that on some parts of the European continent one or two deeply designed and well digested revolutionary plains may be worked out, to attract more than common attention, and to have a very great influence on the future of European politics.—N. Y. Herald of Monday.

The Kent County Tragedy.

BALTIMORE, April 19th.

Drummond, the man who was arrested about a month since on the charge of participating in the terrible murder of the Cosden family near Georgetown Cross Roads, Kent county, Md., on the night of February 27th, has made a confession disclosing the true authors of the crime.

He says that five men named Murphy, Shelton, Foard and Sills and Taylor, were the prepetrators of the murder. He denies that he had any thing to do with it. He only knew of the conspiracy of the others for the commission of the crime.

The four first mentioned, Murphy Shelton Ford and Sills, have been arrested at Havre de Grace. Taylor the other party, is still at large. Webster, the uncle of Mrs. Cosden, who has been suspected, is not implicated.

In his confession, Drummond also intimates that if some of the Cosden family had not escaped and given the alarm it was the intention of the murderers to have followed up their work of plunder and massacre; and other families in the neighborhood, against whom they entertained feelings of hostility would have been murdered the same night. The disclosures thus made add a deeper dye to the already terrible crime which has agitated the community where it occurred to such an extraordinary extent.

Highly Important from Albany.

Our intelligence from Albany is of a highly important character In consequence of the determination which was manifested by the advocates of the bill for the completion of the enlargement of the canals of this State twelve of the opponents of the measure believing it tobe unconstitutional, resigned their seats in the Senate, to defeat it. Yesterday morning, Mr. Mann in a very appropriate speech insisted on the propriety of postponing further action on the bill, in order that the sense of the people at large might be obtained upon it, or until they had an opportunity of instructing the Legislature on the subject. He and his associates he said were willing to remain until the final adjournment of the Legislature, for the purpose of disposing of all other business; but if this bill was not postponed, the majority must be held responsible for the result that would follow. The majority insisted upon immediate action on the bill, twelve Senators, as we have remarked, resigned their seats, and the consequence is that both houses of the Legislature adjourned sine die.

Inasmuch as the Appropriation bills have not yet been passed an extra session may be convened by the majority; but unless the Governor has been authorized to fill vacancies in the Legislature by a law passed since the adoption of the new constitution, an extra session will be of no avail, and the wheels of the government of the State will be stopped until the meeting of the next Legislature, on the first of January next.

Be this as it may we can hardly wonder at this extraordinary result, for it might have been anticipated from the conduct of the majority of the democratic members of the Senate. The Canal bill, from its very inception, was fraud a spring-trap on the Legislature, as well as on the people of the State of New York and the sly and very suspicious manner in which it was introduced as well as the pertinacity with which it was advocated and hurried forward carried suspicion with it. Its peculiar and very ardent advocates must have known from the commencement that there was an honest doubt about its constitutionality, to say the least; but notwithstanding that, about and notwithstanding not only the opinion of Mr. Chatfield the Attorney General, who decided it was unconstitutional, but that of nine-tenths of the people at large it was pushed and hurried on, as if the salvation of the State depended upon its passage. The minority would not stand such teranny and preferred to resign as it did, rather than countenance it in any way.

Now that the majority have seen the result of their efforts to force this bill through regardless of the opinions and conscientious and constitutional scruples of the minority it is to be hoped that the people will be allowed to have an opportunity of expressing an opinion upon the subject. We have had the opinion of eminent lawyers, for and against its constitutionality; but in this case there certainly is a "higher law" to which an appeal may be taken. This, however is not the higher law of Seward, Weed, Greeley & Co; it is not a law higher than the constitution—but a law higher than the opinions of lawyers and politicians which we hope will be resorted to for the purpose of testing whether this barefaced attempt to violate the higher law viz, the constitution of the State will be tolerated or not by the people, who have a right to be consulted in the matter.—N. Y. Herald. of Friday.

SUICIDE.—Peter Osborne, a man 30 to 35 years of age, leaving a wife and severel small children, living just over the Penn. line, near Factoryville, on the opposite side of the Susq. River, committed suicide on Friday morning last. He went to bed with two of his children at night, got up before daylight, dressed himself and left the house; and some hours afterwards his lifeless body was found suspended by a rope, to a beam over the barn floor, by his brother-in-law who was at work for him.

The deceased was a young man, comfortably off in the world, apparently enjoying life as well as any body. No cause is assigned for the rash act, although circumstances are called to mind of recent occurrence, which lead to the conclusion that it had been for some weeks premeditated.—Oswego Gazette.

THE MISSISSIPPI.—From many quarters we hear the voice of distress and alarm, in consequence of the encroachments of the river. Every day or two some new crevasse is announced. We talk over these disasters coldly for half an hour, and then forget them until another is proclaimed. In the meantime, it is difficult to exaggerate the inconvenience, injury, and often absolute ruin to individuals, that these calamities occasion in the localities where they occur. All along the Mississippi, and in the whole fluvial region, from its west bank to Red river and the Teche, planting has been, for the last three or four years, a precarious business, and few men, when they plant a crop, though the soil be the most productive in the world, and the seasons the most beneficent and uniform, can feel sure of reaping harvest. The effect of this uncertainty is seriously affecting the value of real estate, in the whole alluvial district of Louisiana. The local newspapers are crowded with advertisements for plantations for sale, and many planters have abandoned, or are abandoning their plantations, preferring to go into the woods elsewhere, and begin anew, to the perpetual apprehension and probability of being every year drowned out.

This is a deplorable state of things, and it is time that we should ask ourselves what is to be done? It is obvious that what has been done heretofore is utterly inadequate to the magnitude of the evil. Our efforts have been sectional partial, and employed only at the moment the contingency occurs. This is the error. Local remedies will not answer, nor should we delay action until the catastrophe is upon us. Some general system must be adopted. A system based on hydrographic and topographical surveys—not mere superficial reconnoissances—but thorough and scientific examinations by engineers of the highest standing. And that system must be on a scale commensurate with the grandeur of the enterprize, and the vast pecuniary interest at stake.—New Orleans Courier.

SAD ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday of last week a serious accident occurred in the family of Mr. William Durk at Carbondale, Luzerne county. A young daughter of 12 years was for a moment left to take charge of the house, when the dress of a little girl, still younger, caught fire. The sister at first attempted to smother this fire by wraping her own clothes around the little girl. But this was in vain, and the two girls were soon enveloped in flames. They ran into the street, but no one could come to their assistance until the clothes were all burnt from them, and their bodies most shockingly scarred and burnt. The younger one soon died, and the older one is scarcely expected to survive her pain and suffering.

SALE OF PROFESSOR WEBSTER'S LABORATORY.—The various appliances of the late Professer Webster's laboratory were sold at action yesterday, by Mr. Leonard. Among this extensive assortment were unique glass ware, electrical machines, air pumps, batteries, and the thousand-and-one things usually found in a chemists apartments. A great many things were useless, having been manufactured for experiments. The sale lasted two hours, and the proceeds of which amounted to something over $500—being about one third their true value.

The most notable article in the collection was a magnet, once owned by the distinguished French chemist Lavoisier, who, it was well known, was beheaded during the French revolution. After various fortunes it came into the possession of Professor Webster, by whom it was highly prized.

The magnet was purchased by Mr. Francis Alger of South Boston, for the trifling sum of $5,25. We understand Mr. Alger would not dispose of it for $2000. Its rare history gives it a value entirely beyond any intrinsic value.

In this connection we may state that at the auction of Professor Webster' library last week, his name was erased from all the books except one, and which book is now in the possession of a well known literary gentleman of this city, who has one of the largest collections of autograph of any person in the country. This book contains the Professor's signature, written in a bold and dashing manner. It escaped the detection of the family by one of the leaves adhering to the cover.

We believe these are the last remains of the unfortunate man which will come before the public thro' a sale.—Boston Bee, 27th ult.

Rules for Detecting Counterfeits

A friend has handed us the following "infalliable rules for detecting Counterfeit Bank Bills," with the leave to publish for the benefit of the public. We assure the readers the rules can be relied upon at all times and are more safe to a practiced eye than a thousand bank note detectors. We invariably apply these rules to bills taken by us and since becoming acquainted with them, have never been imposed upon. by a counterfeit. The person who favored us with the rules paid one dollar, for them. The public have them gratis.

1. Examine the appearance of the bills—the genuine have a general dark, neat appearance.

2. Examine the vignette or picture in the middle of the top; see if the sky or background looks clear and transparent or soft and even and not scratchy.

3. Examine well the facesisee if the expression is distinct and easy natural and life like. Particularly the eye.

4. See if the drapery or dress fits well, looks natural and easy, shows the folds distinctly.

5. Examine the medallion ruling and heads and circular ornaments around the figures &c. See if they are regular and smooth and uniform not scratchy. This work in the genuine, looks as if raised on the paper and cannot be perfectly imitated.

6. examine the principle line of letters or name of the bank. See if they are all upright, perfectly true and even, or if sloping of a uniform slope.

7. Carefully examine the shade or parallel ruling on the face or outside of letters, &c., see if it is clear, and looks as if colored with a brush. The fine or parallel lines in the genuine are of equal size, smooth and even; counterfeits looks as if done with a file.

8. Observe the round hand writing engraved on the bill, which should be black, equal in size and distance of a uniform Slope and smooth. This in genuine notes is invariably well done, and looks very perfect. If counterfeit, it is seldom so; but often looks stiff, as if done with a pen.

9. Notice the "imprint," or engraver's name—which is always near the border or end of the note—and is always alike; letters small, upright and engraved very perfectly. Counterfeits seldom do this well.

☞ NOTE.—It was remarked by Stephen Burroughs, before he died, that two things could not be perfectly counterfeited; one was the dye work, or portraits, medallion heads, vignette, &c., and the other the shading or ruling above the letters.

ADVERTISING OF LETTERS.—The circular instructions which have just been issued by the Postmaster General, explanatory of the fifth section of the new Postage Law relative to advertising the list of uncalled for letters direct that when the gross receipts of the Post Office do not reach more than $500 per quarter the postmaster is to advertise the uncalled for list once in six weeks only; when they do not exceed more than $1000 per quarter the list to be advertised once a month; when they do not exceed $7,500 per quarter twice a month; and when they exceed $7,500 per quarter, as in several of the large cities, the postmaster is authorised to advertise the list once a week. The advertisement is to be inserted in one newspaper only and that the paper having the largest single circulation within the range of the delivery of the Post Office where it is printed. The price of advertising is fixed at one cent for each letter for one insertion. Refused letters, box-letters, free letters, and letters which are expected to be called for soon, are not to be advertised. When there is a dispute as to the circulation of newspapers claiming the advertising the postmaster is to receive evidence and decide upon the fact, his decision to remain good for one year.

Married:

In Springville, by Rev. Thos. Wilcox on the 15th inst., Mr. THOS. W. JAMES of Auburn and Miss MARY PALMER of Springville.

In Harford by Rev. A. Miller, on the 13th inst., Mr. WARNER PICKETT of Naugatuck, Conn., to Miss CYNTHIA B. TINGLEY, daughter of Mr. Edwin Tingley of Harford.

Died.

At the residence of J. N. Kinsman; in this place, of Plurisy, on the 8th inst., PLINY G. BURCHARD, in the 24th year of his age.

The subject of this brief notice, was born in the County of Susquehanna, in the State of Pennsylvania, in September, 1827, migrated to this country in his eighteenth year, and was favorably known and highly esteemed in the relations he sustained as a "Son of Temperance" and citizen in this community. His death, was seriously felt, and will be long deplored by his numerous friends. The funeral services, on the 9th inst., were attended by a very large, feeling and deeply sympathising audience, and his mortal remains was followed to its final resting place, by the Oskaloosa Division Sons of Temperance, and the citizens generally.

His friends are not left without the only consolation of the survivor; the triumph of the appearance of Faith in him who is the "Resurrection and the Life." And however near the relation dissolved, and strong the tie severed, the mind rests with calm delight upon "the hope in his death," and draws solace in the reflection that he is resting with him who said "I go to prepare a place for you."

"Let sickness blast and death devour,
If Heaven must recompense our pains,
Perish the grass and fade the flower,
Still firm the word of God remains."
