Do they Miss me at Home?

BY TRAVELER.

I.

Do they miss me at home?—do they miss me?
'T would be an asurance most dear
To know that my name was forgotten,
As though I had never been there.

II.

To know that the tailor and landlord,
And the banks where my paper is due,
And hosts whom I cannot now mention,
Had banished me quite from their view.

III.

Do they miss me at home?—do they miss me?
When the market for money is 'tight,'
And collectors with haste are pursuing
Their debtors by day and by night?

IV.

Do the friends who once loaned me a 'fifty,'
And the others who loaned me a 'ten,'
Heave a sigh of regret as they miss me,
And wish they could see me again?

V.

Do they miss me at home?—do they miss me?
When no longer I'm seen upon 'Change,
And do those who were wont to assist me,
Say 'His conduct's infernally strange?

VI.

Does the SHYLOCK who loaned me his money
To bear me to regions unknown,
Look in vain for occasion to dun me,
And wish I again were at home?

VII.

Do they miss me at home? do they miss me?
'T would be an assurance most dear,
To know that my name was forgotten,
As though I had never been there.

VIII.

But I know that my memory lingers
Around the deer place as I roam,
And while I've my wits and my creepers,
They'll miss me, they'll miss me at home!

A TALE OF MARENGO.

BY DARIUS DAVAN.

The great battle of Marengo was fought between the French and Austrians on the 14th of June, 1800, and resulted in the defeat of the latter. The French, led by Napoleon, had crossed the Alps at the Great St. Bernard, and met the Austrians under General Meles, an old veterand of eighty-four years of age. Just previous to this decisive battle, it was supposed by the hostile enemy of France that she was about to crumble and fall by her own internal convulsions; and there were good reasons for it, for there were numerous factions in France: the Jacobins, the Red Republicans, and the followers of the heirs of the legitimate sovereign, each striving to gain the ascendency. But France was destined for a period to tread the path of glory, for Providence, in His mysterious workings, had given her a man, one of superior intellect, which never has, and probably never will, be equalled in military renown, who was to beat out and drive her enemies like chaff before the wind.

Of the young conscrips which composed the largest half of the French army, was a youth from the southern province of France. He had left the roof of his beloved parents at his country's call, and had gallantly shouldered the musket in her defence. This young man, although he had occasionally traversed the lonely hunting paths of the Pyrenees, and had slightly tasted of the fatigue attached to the rifle, still he was not inured to the hardships of the battle-field.—He had a brother older than himself, who had, a number of years before, joined a division of the French army, and was thought to have been killed, as he had not been heard from since his enlistment.

Besides his brother and parents, there was another which he dearly loved—a young and beautiful girl. She was eighteen years of age, tall and graceful, with dark eyes, and black hair, with the usually darkish hue which prevails so extensively in those countries, which lie in close proximinity to far-famed Italy. Their parents were neighbors to each other, and, consequently, their offsprings were together more or less, during the whole period of their lives; at the juvenile school-room, they had beed hand in hand. They had played together on the hill sides and in the valleys, and gathered fruits and flowers in autumn. Naturally, how could it be otherwise than that they should be deeply enamored with each other.

All things have an end; and so the time was rapidly approaching when our hero would be obliged to take leave of his aged parents and his beloved companion, and enlist himself under the banner of his country. The enormous armies of France were again called into the field. Numerous bodies of military men were everywhere in motion, and marching towards the head quarters of their commander. The enemy were also on the alert, and seriously menancing the frontier towns of France. Napoleon had just returned from the disastrous Egyptain campaign. A large and magnificent French fleet had been destroyed by an English fleet, under Lord Nelson, and the prospects of France were indeed dubious. Most generals, in such a case as this, would have given up hopelessly, and probably left the country to its fate; not so with Napoleon; his mighty genius overeame every obstacle; everything must succumb to his superior mind. He had gathered a large army of conscripts, in a comparatively short time organized them, and, marching a long distance, passed the mountain heights, and met the enemy on the plains of Marengo. The Austrian army amounted to over sixty thousand men, well disciplined; while the army under Napoleon had just been formed out of young and raw material, and, of course, unaccustomed to the horrors of war; but the young conscripts of France, although they amounted to only about thirty thousand men, one-half of the number of Austrians, proved an over-match for their opponents, and successfully put them to flight.

The sanguinary battle came very near proving disastrous to the French, as the Austrians so largely out-numbered their enemies; but, by the timely arrival of a fresh division of troops, under the gallant General Dessaix, who that day lost his life while at the head of his division, checking a tremendous onslaught of the Austrians, France on that bloody field, sacrificed some of her noblest sons. One of her best generals was killed, with numerous other officers; and, among the privates on the list of killed and wounded, was our hero. He had been seriously, though not fatally wounded, with his regiment on a desperate charge to take one of the enemy's batteries. He remained in his painful but exhausted condition till the thundering of nearly a hundred pieces of artillery had subsided, and the heavy tramp of the dragoon's steed had ceased to crush and mangle the dead and wounded of his fellow-countrymen and his country's foes.

When the surgeons and soldiers of the successful army came to carry the wounded to more comfortable quarters, and bury the dead, they came across this noble young soldier, in an insensible condition. He was thought, at first, to be dead; but on lifting him up, it was found that life had not wholly departed. After he had been conveyed to a place prepared for the wounded, and his wounds being dressed, he revived; but he had been so long without food, or anything to strengthen him, that the surgeon made up his mind that he must die. He remained in this low and precarious situation for a number of days.

One day, as he lay with only his blanket to cover his languishing form, thinking of his home, a stranger, but a friend, approached him. The stranger was his brother—a long lost brother; and, when he was told who it was, his eye brightened to see the one who was thought to be dead. The brother had, with his division, joined the main army, on the day previous to the engagement. He had been kept on the northeastern portion of France for over two years; but good fortune had at last brought him round in season to rescue his younger brother from an untimely grave.

With the good care which the elder brother bestowed upon him, he was enabled in a few days to walk, and, in a few weeks, he had nearly recovered from his wounds. But his constitution would not allow him to pursue his vocation; he was, therefore, allowed to return home as an invalid, and, by good care of himself, combined with the salubrious climate of sunny France, he soon recovered his lost health.

The Boat Funeral—Washington Navy Yard.

BY J. MCF.,

I saw them from the vessel come
And heard the fife and muffled drum,
The bugle's wild notes, loud and clear,
Fell mournfully upon mine ear.

How many there are who never think seriously, of that great truth which the funeral procession teaches, but gaze upon the mournful cortege with an idle curiosity, and admire the splendid regalia, or wonder at the gorgeous uniforms, and the solemn music.

We never look upon the funeral train without learning a sorrowful, yet useful lesson—sorrowful, because it teaches that the dearest tie, the fairest and most beautiful object upon which we lavish all a mortal's fondness, must be snatched from the embrace of loved ones, and consigned to that place o'er which the mourner bends, and, in his agony, would feign repose beneath the mound that hides the being, who was once the idol of his soul.

This, truly, is the picture of our sorrows; and yet there is a lesson which may be learned from the very depths of affliction, the utility of which is forgotten in the phrenzy of dispair, and it is this, that the true Christain, however severely tried, will be triumphant at the last, and in heaven be crowned with that coronet, the jewels of which shall sparkle in the effulgence of the light of eternity.

This is the brightest side of the picture, and one that cheers our heart even when the murky atmosphere of despondency settles around the pathway of life, and we trust that, when our day star shall have sunk behind the horizon of mortality, the soul may wave its pinions in that glorious sphere, where the light of the sun is not needed. A few years since it was our privilege to witness a scene that will ever be engraven upon the tablets of memory, and as many of our readers, perhaps, did not behold the sight, we will endeavor to give a brief description of what passed before us.

It was the holy Sabbath, and a more lovely day we never saw. The wind blew softly from the southwest, playing upon the surface of the waters of the beautiful Anacostia; and as ripple after ripple followed each other over the pretty river, and the rich scenery, on the opposite side, reflected itself in those clear depth, we exclaimed, "oh, how beautiful!"

Away in the distance lay a large vessel, one whose singular fate has often been made the theme of conversation. As our eyes were directed towards her, we observed that something unusual was about to take place. Several boats were lying near the steamer, (the Missouri,) and very soon we saw that the sailors were embarking upon some mission.

The boats, one after another, were slowly filled by the men, and we were surprised to see them follow each other in regular succession, as they started from the ship, and still more surprised when the clear notes of the bugle, the shrill tones of the fife, and the roll of the muffled drum, broke upon the stillness of that sweet Sabbath afternoon. Onward they moved, but slowly, for it was a funeral, yes, reader, a boat funeral. The sleep of death had fallen upon the young Lieutenant, and those hardy sons of "old ocean's wave," were paying their last tribute of respect to the departed. Slowly they advanced near the spot where we stood; in the second boat rested the coffin, enshrouded with the stripes and stars of our own America. Ah! there was silence among that little band. The rude jest and wanton mirth of the sailors was hushed in the quitude of solemnity, and a sacred awe rested upon the whole company as they rowed to the burial place of the dead.

We walked leisurly along upon the river's bank and listened with a melancholy pleasure to the mournful strains of the band; oh! how mournful were the sounds of the bugle! There is something in the clear tones of that instrument which always charms our ear, but there was an unusual liquid sweetness in its sound that day, and long will the solemnities of that afternoon be remembered by the writer, with mingled feelings of melancholly and delight.

The boats at length paused, and we quickened our pace to witness the closing scene.—The coffin was carefully removed from the boat, and placed upon the shoulders of the sturdy seamen; the officers of the ship walked immediately behind the corpse, and the remainder of the ship's company, with other persons, followed in the procession. Having arrived at the grave, the coffin was lowered gently down into its final resting place, and we paused to notice the effect produced upon the company.

The officers of the ship approached and gazed into the narrow house, each countenance indicative of the emotion which touched the heart; they then retired and the sailors gathered around that little spot.—Long and earnestly did they look upon the coffin, and we saw the big tears trickling down the cheeks of more than one of those stern men.

The sexton seized his spade, and was about to build another house over the remains of a stranger, when we advanced and looked into the grave. It was dark and deep, and we shuddered as the thought flashed across our mind, that we too must be "gather in," and the sexton's spade hurl the clods upon our coffin. We thought of the relatives of that young Lieutenant, the tender mother stood not by the grave of her boy to drop the parting tear and sigh farewell; the sister came not, in her agony of soul, to breathe a long adieu and weep o'er her departed brother, and no father leaned over that dark, damp grave to take the last look, and groan in the bitterness of his soul. No! the sexton has covered the stranger with the clods of the valley. Winter's stormy blast sweept over the spot, but the sleeper stirs not. Spring passes by, the green grass cover the grave, while the gentle zephyrs play amid each spear, and yet the slumberer is unconscious.

No tall pillar or sculptured cenotaph marks that stranger's lonely bed, but there is One who guards the dust and watches over those who mourn for the departed one.

KOSSUTH ON THE VISIT OF NAPOLEON III. TO ENGLAND.—Kossuth has written an unusual bitter letter, even for him in relation to the visitof Napoleon III to England. He calls the reception a "comedy." The letter appears in the New York Times. Kossuth salutes Autsria as follows:—

„That Austria, sir, which means the Haps burgs, whom I, a plan unpretending citizer, weighed in the hollow of my hand just seven years ago; the very existence of whom depended on a breath of mine; whom I saved with ill-fated generosity; fool as I was to trust a king's oath, whom the people of Hungary has humbled to the dust, unarmed unprepared, forsaken and hermetically secluded as we were; those Hapsburgs whom the Czar propped up for a while, but to whom no aid, no combination can impart vitality, and whom the very hand of the Eternal has doomed to certain destruction. It is this Austria, sir, which strikes terror to the adventurer who carved his way trough all the bloody horrors of December, and though unscrupulous perjury to a throne: this Austria, sir, to which the Cabinet of St. James bows with fear; this Austria, whose finger pulls the leading string on which England and France are hooked in the camp and in the councils alike."

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

The most valuable Spring and Summer Medicine in the world! DR. HALSEY'S

FOREST WINE!

Patronized by the Nobility and Medical Faculty of England and esteemed the most extraordinary medicine in the world.

Medicines containing molasses or liquorice, like the boasted Sarsaparillas, require many large bottles to produce the slightest change in health. The Forest Wine is altogether a different article. It contains no syrups to give it consistency, but acquires its excellent flavor, and powerful medicinal properties from the vegetable plants of which it is composed. The Forest Wine combines the virtues of the Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Yellow Dock, and Sarsaparilla, with other valuable plants whose properties are still more effective.

Its high concentration renders it one of the most efficient medicines now in use. Sometimes less than a single bottle restores the lingering patient from weakness, debility, and sickness, to strong and vigorous health. Every dose shows its good effects on the constitution, and improves the state of the health. The Forest Wine is recommended, in the strongest terms, for all the complaints of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Nervous Disorders, Billious Affections, Dropsy, Dropsyla, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, Female Complaints, Scrofula, and all disorders arising from Bad Blood and impure habit of the system.

Saved from Death!!

Testimony of Mr. Nathan Mathews, a highly respectable and wealthy citizen of Newark, N. J.

Dr. G. W. HALSEY:—I believe your Forest Wine and Pills have been the means of saving my life. When I commenced taking them I laid at the point of death, with Dropsy, Piles and Asthma. My physicians had given me over as past cure, and my family had lost all hopes of my recovery. While in this dreadful situation, your Forest Wine and Pills were procured for me, and before I had finished the first bottle of the Wine and box of Pills, I experienced great relief; my body and limbs, which were greatly swollen, became sensibly reduced. Hopes of my recovery began now to survive, and after continuing the use of your medicines for about a month, the Piles and Asthma were completely cured. The Dropsy, with which my life was placed in such great danger, wak also nearly gone. I have continued the use of your medicines until the present time, and I now enjoy as perfect health as ever I did in my life, although I am more than 60 years of age. Yours, respectfully, N. MATHEWS.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 19, 1847.

Great Cure of Liver Complaint of ten years standing.

New York, Jan. 9, 1848.

Dr. HALSEY. Dear Sir:—Having taken your Forest Wine and Pills to remove a disease of the Liver, from which I have suffered severely for upwards of ten years; and having adhered closely to the directions that accompany the medicine, I have recovered my health notwithstanding all who knew me thought my case incurable. Previous to taking the Wine and Pills, I had recourse to the best medical treatment, but continued to grow worse to an alarming degree. Some of my friends spoke despairingly of my case and tried to persuade me from making use of any advertised remedies; and I doubt not, but what there are hundreds dissuaded from taking your excellent medicines, in consequence of the deception and inefficiency of many advertised remedies put forth by unprincipled men, in flaming advertisements. But what a pity it is, that the deception used by others should be the means of dissuading many laboring under disease, from making trial and being cured by your excellent medicine. Humanity speaking, they have saved my life; when I commenced making use of them, I was in a wretched condition, but began to experience their good effects in less than three days; and in six weeks from the time I purchased the medicines, to the great surprise of all my friends, I was entirely cured, and had increased fifteen pounds in weight, having taken one box of the Pills, and two bottles of the Wine. Would to God that every poor sufferer would avail himself of the same remedies. Yours, &c., J. S. WILSON.

NERVOUS DISORDERS,

Are disease set the mind as well as of the body, are usually brought on by troubles and affliction, and are most common to persons of delicate constitutions and sensitive minds. Low spirits, melancholy, frightful dreams, and fearful anticipations of evil from the slightest cause, generally accompany nervous disorders. The Forest Wine and Pills are an energetic remedy in these complaints.

Extract of a letter from Mr. Jos. C. Paulding, dated

Dr. HALSEY. Philad'a, Sept. 7, 1848.

Dear Sir, Your Forest Wine and Pills have cured my wife of a dreadful nervous disorder, with which she had been affected for many years. Her body was almost wasted away. She was frequently disturbed in her sleep by frightful dreams, awakening quite exhausted and covered with perspiration, and at times laboring under the delusion that something dreadful was about to happen to her. By the use of four bottles of the Wine, and a box of the Pills, she is now in perfect health. She has regained her flesh and color, and enjoys society as well as ever.

J. C. PAULDING.

Dr. David Marvin, a celebrated practitioner of N. York, declared publicly, that one bottle of Halsey's Forest Wine contained more virtues than fifty of the large bottles of Sarsaparilla. Messrs. S. S. Lampman & Co., one of the largest and most respectable Druggists in Syracuse, in a letter, says: "From what they have heard and seen of Halsey's Forest Wine, it is an excellent and good medicine, and will undoubtedly become the leading medicine of the day."

The Forest Wine is put up in large square bottles, with Dr. Halsey's name blown in the glass. One Dollar per bottle, or six bottles for Five Dollars. Gum-coted Forest Pills 25 cents per Box. SALAMANDER SAFES.

EVANS & WATSON, No. 26 South FOURTH St., Philadelphia.

GREAT FIRE, CHESTNUT & FIFTH Sts, Friday morning, December 15th, 1854. Evans & Watson's Salamander Safes triumphant, as they always are when put to the test.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15, 1854.

Messrs Evans & Watson, No. 26 South Fourth St., Philadelphia.

GENTLEMEN:—We take much pleasure in recommending your Salamander Safes to Merchants and others in want of a secure means of preserving their books, papers, &c., from fire, as the one we purchased from you about seven months since has preserved our books, and cash in as good a condition as they were when put into it, before the great fire this morning, which destroyed the entire block of buildings corner of Chestnut and Fifth streets. The above was in use in our office, on the second floor of our building, from which place it fell into the cellar and remained there until the fire was out. The Safe was then removed and opened in the presence of at least 1000 persons, who witnessed the good condition of the contents. Will you please have the Safe and locks repaired as we intend to put it in use again, having perfect confidence in its fire-proof qualities.

Yours, Respectfully,
LACEY & PHILLIPS.

Evans and Watson take pleasure in referring to the following, among the many hundreds who have their safes in use:—U. S. Mint, Philada.; Farmers and Mechanics' Bank, Philada.; Samuel Allen, Esq, High Sheriff Phila; John N. Henderson, City Controller; Caleb Cope & Co., No. 183 Market St; Richard Norris and Son, Locomotive builders, Philada; Bancroft and Sellers, Machinists, corner 16th and James Sts.; Franklin Fire Insurance Co., Phila; Penn'a Railroad Co., Philada.; Lacey & Phillips, corner 5th and Minor Streets; Sharpless Bro., No. 32 south 2d St.; James, Kent and Santee, No 117 North Third Street; W. Our Stock of Stoves.

IS now completed—and we would take this opportunity to say that we can show the most beautiful and splendid patterns of Parlor and Cooking Stoves to be found in the county.—Among them can be seen the Revolving Front, and Gothic Parlor, for wood or coal, entirely new patterns, and decidedly pretty stoves. Prices from five to ten dollars.

Of our Cooking stoves, we think it needless to say much, only to remark that we are selling them at our former prices, and judging from the rapidity of our sales, we believe the public are entirely satisfied with the prices and quality of our wares.

We have a "few left" of the "Clinton Air Tight Elevated Oven stove," acknowledged by all to be the best cooking stove now in use.—Russia and English pipe at old prices, and Trimmings and Tin Ware of all descriptions, at the very lowest rates.

ESTABLISHMENT!

Which may easily be found—it being in close proximity to the new Court House—the Southwest corner thereof. Our building is not as commodious as we intend having in the Spring. If our patrons will bear with us until that time, we flatter ourselves that our establishment will not be surpassed by any in the county. We have the most approved patterns of STOVES ever brought into this market, among which may be found

Star of the West (Elevated Oven,) Cultivator (Elevated Oven,) Paragon, New World, Globe, Atlas, and Three States,

All Air-Tight, and various other patterns too numerous to mention.

TINWARE of all kinds kept constantly on hand for household use. Jobbing done to order and in the best manner. All Tin-ware carefully proved before leaving the shop.

They respectfully solicit the patronage of all who wish to purchase anything in their line, assuring them that more can be saved by examining their stock before purchasing elsewhere.

"Man, Know Thyself."

An Invaluable Book for 25 cents—"Every family should have a copy."

100,000 COPIES SOLD IN LESS THAN A YEAR. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and hand Book for the afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency; with an outline of complaints incident to Females, from the result of some twenty years' successful practice exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Professor of Obstetrics in Penn College, Philadelphia—"DR. HUNTER'S MEDICAL MANUAL"—The author of this work, unlike the majority of those who advertise to cure the diseases at which it treats is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOS. S. LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A. Woolward, M. D., of Penn University, Philadelphia.—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the Author of the "MEDICAL MANUAL." Numerous cases of Disease of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing, have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some cases where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by self abuse or Excess of every. I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M. D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of disease of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and, with too little breath to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world, at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruit of some twenty years' most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual" says:—"Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution, without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and they do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generation. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy (securely enveloped) will be forwarded, free of postage, to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or six copies for $1. Address, (post paid) COSDEN & CO., Philadelphia, or Box 194, Philadelphia.

Pumps! Pumps!!

THE greatest improvement of the age. C. H. Williams' Patent Double Acting Ball, Valve, Force and Lift Pump. An improvement above all other pumps or machines, for lifting and throwing water, combining both a pump and Fire Engine. This Pump, patented in February, 1854, is the whole of it metalic, no bolts or screws about it to rust, consequently it will last a man's life time. It can be used in every variety of form, can draw water from any situation and carry it to any part of a house, it is superior to all other pumps for distilleries, Paper Mills, Tanneries, Brick Yards, Iron Works and Manufacturing establishments of all kinds.

All orders must be addressed to Addison Dimmick, Lodersville, Pa., who has bought the sole right for Susquehanna County.

Glad Tidings to Old Soldiers.

BY a late law of Congress, all Soldiers, Teamsters, and their widows or minor children, are entitled to 160 acres Bounty Land. Those who have received Warrants for less than 160 acres, are entitled to have an additional 80 or 120 acres Warrant. Those who have been simply mustered into service and paid, get 160 acres of land.

I am still engaged in the Bounty Land and Pension agency, at Montrose, and will obtain new warrants for all Danville claimants, free of cost or charge of any kind. All other cases merely for fees. And I will pay the highest market prices in cash for all warrants.

I am at Searle's Hotel, and in case of my absense at any time, D. R. Lathrop, Esq. County Treasurer, will attend to my business.

Doctor Yourself: THE POCKET ÆSCULAPIUS:

Or, Every one his own Physician.

THE FIFTIETH Edition, containing One hundred Engravings, showing Diseases and Malformations of the Human system in every shape and form. To which is added a Treatise on the Diseases of Females, being of the highest importance to married people, or those cotemplating marriage. By William Young, M. D.

Let no father be ashamed to present a copy of the Aesculapius to his child. It may save him from an early grave. Let no young man or woman enter into the secret obligations of married life without reading the Pocket Aesculapius. Let no one suffering from a hackneied cough, Pain in the Side, restless nights, nervous feelings, and the whole train of Dyspeptic sensations, and given up by their physician, be another moment without consulting the AESCULAPIUS. Have the married, or those about to be married any impediment, read this truly useful book, as it has been the means of saving thousands of unfortun
