ODE TO THE MOON.

O thy enamelled and marine
Are thy ethereal splendors seen,
O, ever subliparian moon!
A thousand vistucts of light
Were not so spherically bright,
Or vanflisted half so soon.

Methought I stood upon a cone
O, solid allopathic stone.
And gazed afward the breezy skies
When, lo! from yonder planisphere,
A rapid, atrabilious tear
Was shed by pantomimic eyes.

"Adieu, Miesma," cried a voice
In which Alcypo might rejoice,
So perfectly were its tones;
"Adieu, Miesma, think of me
Beyond the antimonean sea
Which covers my pallid bones."

Again, my star-gazing lark is tossed
Upon the raging heaves
Of that adulterated seas;
And disappointed, pouting down,
With inner orbits fain to drown
My transcendental gopes.

PAT'S EVASIVE ANSWER.—Patrick O'Neil, who has became joined in the "wedlock" with Bridget, was in the serv ce of Father Cannloy. One day the priest expected a call from a protestant minister, and he wished some excuse to get rid of him. So calling Patrick, he proceeded to give some instructions.

"Patrick," said he, "if that minister comes here to-day, I don't wish to see him."

"Yis, yer riverence."

"Make some excuse and send him away."

"What shall I tell him?"

"Tell him I am not at home."

"Would you have me tell a lie, yer riverence?"

"No, Patrick, but get rid of him some way give him an evasive answer."

"Ah ovasive answer is it? I will do it."

"You understand me, Patrick?"

"Av coorse, yer riverence."

The matter thus arranged, Father Connoly retired to his library, and Patrick went about his duties. About dusk in the afternoon the priest came out of his room and found Patrick in unusually good spirits.

"Well, Patrick, did the minister call to day?"

"Yis, sir."

"And did you get rid of him?"

"I did, sir."

"Did he ask if I was in?"

"He did, sir."

"And what did you say to him?"

"I gave him an evasive answer."

"An evasive answer, Patrick?"

"Yis, yer riverence."

"And what did you say to him?"

"He axed was ye in, and I towld him was his grandmother a monkey?"

"CALL THINGS BY THEIR RIGHT NAMES."—Tom Cooke tells a story of an occurrence at a provincial theatre in Ireland, where Macready was personating Virginius. In preparing for the scene in which the body of Deniatus is brought into the stage, the manager called to Pat, his property man, for the bier. Pat, being of a "hasty" temperament, responded to the call by saying he would fetch it "immaditly." Pat next made his appearance with a full foaming pot of the right article, and was received with anger for his stupidity.

"The bier, you blockhead!" thundered the manager. "And isn't it here?" exclaimed Pat, holding the mug. "Not that, you dunkey; I want the barrow for Deniatus." "Then why don't you call things by their right names?" muttered Pat. "Who would suppose you meant the barrow when you called for beer?"

"HAVE YOU" said a young lady, entering a music store, to the young man over the counter, and addressing the young man, "Have you a heart that loves me only?" "Yes, miss," was the reply; "and here is the sheet music with the song." She took the song, but hesitated to the clerk, as he was leaving the store, when he said, "One sweet kiss ere we part." "Oh, I forgot! I want a song for my mother." The clerk glanced at the front of the music, and nobody was there; he looked in the counting-room—the "boss" was out; rapidly he leaned forward, and Mary advanced her face, her mouth assuming the "lip-pucker" shape exquisite, and eleven smacking busses were at once turned out in the best style of prompt workmanship. "Go thou and do likewise." And she said she would.

THEY SAY.—The following is a bill of Jemmy Maher, who has so long been the gardener of the Presidential mansion, in Washington:

The President had heard rumors that Jemmy was accustomed to get drunk, and to be uncivil to the visitors at the White House, so one bright morning he summoned him into his office to receive his dismissal.

"Jemmy," said the President, "I hear stories about you. It is said you are constantly drunk and uncivil to visitors."

Jemmy was puzzled for a reply; at last he said:

"Mr. President, so dad, I hear such worse stories about you, but do you think I believe them? No, by the powers, I know they are false."

HOW HE-PROVED IT.—A lover had been offered a kiss if he would prove his assertion that lo-motives are accustomed to chew tobacco, as well as smoke out of their pipes:—

Giving his arms the proper gash
To imitate an engine crank,
The motion forward first to show,
And then the backward motion;
Eager to press the promised pulse,
He puckered his lips and twinkled his eyes,
To aid the
"Observe the sound
As the crank comes round,"
He mildly said;
"It's choo—choo—choo,
To go ahead,
And chew—chew—chew
To keep back her."

A BARK AND A CUTTER.—A young fellow named Charles Collett was brought up the other day before the lord Mayor, charged with cutting his (Charles's) initials on the bark of one of the trees in Kensington Gardens. He pleaded that he had got a situation abroad and was going to emigrate. He was advised to transmit his name in some other way to posterity, slightly fined and discharged. Mr. Punch, ever ready to help the unlucky, thus does the transmission for him:—

"Collett, take this advice from me;
Never back timber in the sea;
For though your bark is on the wave,
Your C must not be on the beak."

A MODEST REQUEST.—House breaker (to old gent who has sent his family in the country, in order to have a quiet time of it). It's very annoying, I assure you, to be obliged to inform you that you must retire for the night; but you see, my pals are below, waiting to rob the house, and they expected you would have retired before this, and have left them in possession; they have been waitin' for about two hours in the damp cellar, and as one of them has an affection of the lungs, they beg that you will retire for the present, and give me the key of the wine cellar!

"CAN'T BE BEAT."—You appear to have a fine assortment of musical instruments for sale," said Quiz, addressing a music dealer.

"Yes; first rate—all new—can't be beat," was the response.

"If that's so," said Quiz, "I must look elsewhere."

"Why?" asks the amazed dealer.

"Because," replies Quiz, "I want a drum!"

A GREEN looking fellow hailed an omnibus driver, as he was dashing down street recently, with "Goin' to Flushing?"

"Yes," said John, reining up his horses.

"Wall, so I thought!" responded the gawky, and passed quietly on.

"YES, Mr. Robinson, men are tyrants. Poor wives can't even make their wills before they die."

Husband, (resignedly.)—Well, never mind, my dear; they manage to have their wills all their life time."

"WHAT stingy fellows they must be in New York," exclaimed a fine country girl.

"Our Sallie says she could never get a beau to walk home without paying six and a quarter cents for it."

MR. PARTINGTON thinks that old mother Ocean is no better than she ought to be, or else she would not allow the Atlantic cable to lay in her bosom!

A WAG says he doesn't care a fig whether they get any cables through the Atlantic cable or not, but he would like a few fresh stakes.

WHY is an old hair that has had a new bottom put in it like a pail with a handle?

Because it is reversed (receipted.)

A POOLY REFLECTION.—How does it happen that when a bill becomes due the acceptor is often missed?

THE man who reached the height of politeness has suddenly disappeared in a cloud.

WHY is love like a canal boat? Because it is an internal transport.

WHAT ship's boat ought to contain a happy crew? A jolly-boat.

A RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—A dividend now-a-days.
