The Reception of the News of the Maine Election in Kentucky—A Model Jollification and a Damp Time Generally at the Corners.

[From the Toledo Blade.]

POST OFFICE CONFIDENCE X ROADS, (which is in the State uv Kentucky,) Sept. 20, 1868.—The glorious news of the Maine election reached the Corners promptly on the fourth day after it occurred. So anxious wuz we to hev the earliest intelligence uv the overthrow uv the Abolishists uv the Pine Tree State, that Bascum's mule wuz kept bridled and saddled, Isaiker Gavitt's little brother, Jethro, onto him, at Secessionville, the nearest stashun to us, for three days and nites. But ez no trames stop ther onless ther is a barl of whisky to roll orf for Bascom, it wuz a long time afore we good git a paper. That paper wuz finally thrown off to him, and he rode into the Corners wavin it over his hed in triumph: It wuz a World, but hed it been a Triboon it wood hev mate no difference. Ez the precious child can't read, all papers is alike to him.

I opened it in fevrish eagerness, and my sole dilated ez I saw the hed lines.

"How is it?" shreekt Dekin Pogram, Elder Pennibacker and Bascom in a breath.

"Yes them roosters! Observe them hed lines! We hav carried the State uv course!"

"Ror!" shouted the entire assemblage.

"Three cheers!" sed I, for Maine. The tidle wave of Democrisy hez commenced movin. Maine hez uncumbed; let the other States do ez well and Seymour is elected. Three cheers for Maine!"

They gave em with a will, and then demanded the partikulars.

"I will read," says I. "Listen."

"We hev the pleasure uv announcing to our readers the most glorious victory ever achieved by the Democrasy uv any State."

"Ror!" sung they out altogether.

"Maine has spoken. The Abolishists who expected to carry the State by 23 000 majority at least, and who hed based their hopes thereupon, hev bin—"

"Ror!"

"Disapinted. After a hard-fought battle, in wich money was poured without stint, they hav—"

"Ror!"

"CARRIED THE STATE BY ONLY 22,000!"

The vast aujence by this time gathered didn't cheer at this. On the contrary, there wuz a most ominous silence pervadin uv um, wich I acknoledge affected me.

"Is this reely and trooly a victory?" askt the Deakin in a huskey whisper.

"So the paper sez," returned I.

"How much did they carry the State by, last fall?" askt he, bustin into tears.

"Eleven thousand and some odd hundreds," replied I, wipin my eyes in a vane attempt to restrane the teers wich started unbidden.

"Ef we keep on gainin at the same rate in Ohio, Injeany and Pennsylvany will it certainly elect Seymore?" askt the blessed old lamp.

"So the World sez!" sed I.

"Then let's jollify," sed he, and proceeded to do it.

A percession was formed, and a more glorious one it hez never been my lot to ornament. It wuz organized in the following order:

1. The Deakin and me with handkerchiefs at our eyes, weepin perfoously.

2. Billdare band, consistin uv one bass drum playin the Ded march in Saul, the perfoymer okkepyin one hand with his handkerchief, and the other a holdin up the drum in consekence of the strap being in yoose ez a circingle on Bascom's mule.

3. Bascom with a hankercher at his eyes engaged in calkulatin ef I kep on payin my licker bill at his bar at the same rate the Democrasy head won victrys in Maine how long heood stand it ef my stumick held out.

4. Elder Pennibacker and Isaaker Gavitt both with handkerchiefs.

5. Capt. McPeiter and Elder Punt, with handkerchiefs.

6. The populis generally, with handkerchiefs.

7. Joe Bigler and Pollock, the Illinoy storekeeper, arm in arm, without handkerchiefs and wearin a most diagnatin expression uv levity on their countenances.

8. A dozen or more niggers, all with handkerchiefs—in their pockets—and showin ther ivories furiously.

This cheerful percession reached the church, wich it entered, all the members thereof holdin ther heds down jubilantly, ceptin Pollock, Bigler and the niggers. We marched slowly up the aisles, I takin the cheer without the formality uv a vote.

After settin decorously for perhaps three minite, each with his head bowed in high glee onto the seet afore him, Deekin Pogram arose, and wipin his eyes, remarked that the occasion wuz one uv great exhilerasiun: we hed heard from Maine (pensive cheers from the aujence,) and we hed gathered together to jollify therefore. He moved, therefore, that we jollify, and sot down overcome with his feelins.

Another interval uv three minits elapsed, wich wus spent by the populis in the most exhileratin meditation with their heads bowed. Elder Pennicacker then arose, and futtin his damp hankerchief in his pocket, blithely askt ef it wooden be well to read the vote by counties.

Isaaker Gavitt, spreadin his hankercher on the back uv the seat afore him to dry, and usin his coat-tales in its place, vivaciously observed that it wood highten the interest uv the occasion ef the sed vote wuz compared with the vote uv the precedin years, and he sat down jubilantly, his eyes enfluscd with tears.

Bascom, with an animasiun born uv high hopes, remarkt that the resnlt would doubtless hav an effekt upon Ohio and Pennsylvany, at wich the aujence wuz sum man, sprightfully exclaimed, "Gad forbid!"

After sittling in cheerful buoyant silence for perhaps ten minits, Deacon Pogram moved that as we hed jollified long enuff, perhaps it wood be well to adjourn, at wich the aujence moved with decorous slowness put uv the church, and each went to his own home peacefully and without any uv that levity and noisiness wich hez marked other occasions uv the kind. Bascom remembered at a little past ten, ez him, Pogram and me sot in his bar, that we hed forgotton in our excitement to give any cheers for Seymour and Blare, but it wuz too late to git em together agin, and so we let it go.

I notice however, as I passed Pollock's store that a party gathered there fell well. Bigler, Pollock, the free niggers uv the Corners, and a parcel of Northern men who have settled on the Run west uv the town, hed gathered together, and ther cheers for Grant, and ther hip, hip, hurrahs for Maine, grated harshly on my feelins. Kin it be that Seymore is to be beaten after all! Kin it be that in my old age I shel be turned out uv me haven of rest, that Pollock will hev my place, and that the place wich knows me now will shortly know me no more forever?

Convulsively kissin the stamp and with a lovin look at the mail bags, I sunk sobbin onto my couch. Thus ended this most auspicious day.

A clergyman lost his purse on Saturday evening, and after hunting with a hoy until midnight, gave up in despair. The next day, somewhat relieved at his loss, he went into the pulpit, and took for his text the following passage from Job: Oh! that I knew where I might find him." The boy, who had just come in supposing the horse be still the burden of thought, cried out:

"I know where he is. He's in Deacon Smith's barn."

Tom presented his bill to his neighbor Joe.

"Why, Tom, it strikes me that you made one pretty round bill here, eh?"

"I am sensible it is a round one," quoth Tom, "and I have come for the purpose of getting it squared."

A MAN with one eye laid a wager that he (the one eyed) saw more than the other. The wager was accepted.

"You have lost," says the free; "I can see two ros in your face, and you can only see one in mine."

A DRUNKEN Scotchman returning home drunk was a fair fell asleep by the roadside where a pig found him, and began licking his mouth.

"Who's kissing me now? Ye see what it is to be well liked by the lasses."

"THOMAS," said one Irishman to another go give up the horses."

"Pat," replied the other "an can on do it?"

"Yis, be sure."

"Well, then be jabers do it yourself."

A LADY was urged by her friends to marry a dower, and as an argument they spoke of his beautiful children.

"Children," replied the lady, "are like toothaches. A woman wants her own.

"WHAT are you doing?" said a father to his son, who was tinkering at an old watch.

"Improving my time," was the witty reply.

KITCHEN CRYSTAL SOAP.
THE GREAT
Renovator & Renewer
This justly celebrated article is designed for scrubbing, scouring and polishing purposes, as well as for many other uses; and is warranted to contain nothing that will injure anything to which it is applied.—For scouring knives and forks, or polishing tin, copper, brass, and all metallic surfaces, it dispenses entirely with the use of the brick, destructive silver or emery sand, or the more tedious and expensive bath-brick, whiting, tripoli or pumice and all powders and preparations intended for that purpose. For cleaning paints it is infinitely superior to all other soaps; no need of using a brush or scrubbing or beating the water; thus the body and brilliancy is retained. Better than the best window polish for cleaning windows or glassware; also for washing china, porcelain, earthen, marble or stone. Excellent for shelves, benches, tables and all plain work. For the hands, it is the best soap ever produced; will remove all pitch, paint, tar, varnish, wheel grease, printers' ink, writing ink, and every trace and vestige of dirt or stain of whatever kind, and leaves the skin soft and smooth, firm and fine. Best thing in use for all persons who use machinery, or any person engaged in any work that soils or stains the hands.
Kitchen Crystal Soap will perform more labor of every kind (washing Clothes excepted), than any or all other soaps in use. A single trial will convince the most incredulous.
Very cheap. Sold by all grocers.
