THE FOURTH AT KANE.—The 97th anniversary of the Independence of the United States was celebrated in almost every city and town in the country, but in no place was there a more quiet or successful celebration than at Kane, where the birthday of American Freedom was made a day of rejoicing, to every one who participated in the festivities of the day as conducted by the C. T. B. Society of that little village upon the mountain. The morning hours were wet and gloomy, causing many to put on long faces, predicting a rainy disagreeable day, but at nine o'clock the rain began to abate, and at this time the Silver Cornet Band from Ridgway put in an appearance, and a fairer prospect was presented, at 10 o'clock the sky began to show itself through the clouds, and the society convened at the church, where the procession was formed and headed by the Band marched to the residence of Gen. Thos. L. Kane who for once was surprised in his own camp, captured, and marched through the woods and streets of Kane as unresisting prisioner. The beautiful grove near the Kane hotel was the scene of the festivities. The ceremonies were opened by music, followed by the reading of the Declaration of Independence by Gen Kane, who delivered a brief oration. After this formal opening of the day everyone gave themselves up to pleasure. Those inclined to trip the light fantastic toe formed on the platform erected for that purpose in the grove, and music, dancing, and feasting were the order of the day. The ladies of the society prepared a tempting array of eatables toward which many a longing glance was cast until the command was heard, "fall in for rations," which was obeyed with alacrity, and justice done to the provisions, but great injustice to the stomachs. Dancing continued in the grove until evening, when all adjourned to the spacious hall in the Kane hotel, where were convened the bright, gay, and beautiful, in sufficient numbers to fill to overflowing the large ball room which was generously thrown open for the occasion by Gen. Kane. This dance was the crowning event of the day, and a more joyful sight to behold than the smiling faces of that happy company, is seldom seen in this vicinity. The floor managers were kind and obliging, and excellently performed their part of the work, and until past the small hours of morning the dance continued; when at last the company dispersed it was with the kinliest feelings toward the society, which by its excellent management bestowed so much unalloyed enjoyment. In short Kane enjoyed a truly glorious Fourth. The Ridgway Band added greatly to the enjoyment and success of the day, their excellent music and bright dashing uniforms, pleasing both ear and eye. The society, under whose auspices this celebration was held, realized a handsome sum to be applied toward the advancement of the truly noble work in which they are engaged. May they enjoy many happy returns of the "day we celebrate." X. T. Yty.

Kane, July 5th, 1873.

FIRE AT EMPORIUM.—Last Tuesday afternoon, Cook's block, opposite the Biddle house was entirely consumed by fire. The Cameron Herald office was located in this block and is a total loss. The cause of the fire is not known to us. Loss from $10,000 to $15,000. Insurance about $2,000.

CORNER-STONE LAYING.—Sunday, the 29th ult., was a memorable day in the history of the Lutheran church of this village, as the corner-stone of the future church edifice was that day laid with the usual imposing ceremonies of such occasions. The services were opened in the morning by German services conducted by the Rev. J. Breneman, assisted by Rev. Prof. Roth of Tiel College. At 3 o'clock, p. m., service in English and an eloquent discourse by Rev. Roth, after which all repaired to the site of the proposed church on South street, where the corner-stone ceremonies were conducted by Prof. Roth, before a large and deeply interested audience. In the evening services in German and English were held in the Court House, and the people of Ridgway, seldom if ever, listened to so eloquent and practical a discourse as that delivered by Prof. Roth. The day was all that could have been wished for, and we congratulate the Lutherans of Ridgway on the happy commencement of a work of so much interest to themselves and to the people of Ridgway.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT EDINBORO STATE NORMAL SCHOOL.—On Thursday, June 26th, it was our good fortune to be present at the commencement exercises of the Edinboro Normal School. The day was all that that could be desired for such an occasion, and with boquets, white dresses, and beaming faces the scene was one that will be carried with those present, especially those graduating, as a bright memento. At 10 o'clock a. m., the exercises, consisting of orations and essays by the members of the graduating class, interspersed by vocal and instrumental music, began, and continued until noon. At two o'clock p. m., the exercises were resumed and continued until half past four. The graduating class, consisting of ten ladies and ten gentlemen, with few exceptions, acquitted themselves well. After conferring of degrees, Prof. Cooper, principle of the school, invited the graduates to his house, where they were regaled with an excellent lunch, consisting of ice cream, strawberries, cake and cold chicken. The Edinboro Normal School is an honor to the State, and increases in usefulness each year under the management of Prof. Cooper.

Letter from Washington.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday Evening, July 5, 1873.

The Fourth was celebrated here according to the usual custom, there being no formal public display. Private picnics, excursions down the Potomac by steamer and trips to the country towns lying at the different railroad lines there were without number. There was a general rush for cool and shady places. Every possible mode of conveyance was called into requisition. Those who objected to spending the day on board crowded steamers found other methods of getting out of town. Some bore with the inconveniences of crowded railroad trains till they could reach some quiet village, near which they found shady woods and soft grass-plats; others went to the country in carriages and omnibuses and ambulances and express wagons; others took the street cars and rode out to the suburbs in the neighborhood of the Soldiers' Home, Mount Olivet, Uniontown and Georgetown Heights; others took row-boats and pulled up the river to Table Rock, the Chain Bridge or to Little Falls; others went on foot and others contented themselves by going no farther than to some of the splendid parks with which our city abounds.

Though there was a general exodus from the city early in the morning it was by no means a quiet day. Exactly at twelve o'clock the guns at the Navy Yard and at the Arsenal belched forth their deafening roar in honor of Independence Day, and Uncle Sam was poorer to the extent of a good many hundred pounds of gunpowder. Exactly at the same instant the fire-bells and the church-bells rang out, filling the air with the voices of their hundreds of tongues. And last, but not least in making a noise, were our boys—God bless the boys, we envy them the fine sport they have on the Fourth. Well, our Washington boys are like all other boys, and they have been making it lively here for a week past, much to the discomfiture of timid and nervous people. Last night was especially an important event to them, as "the Fourth of July comes only once a year." The sky-rockets, the Roman candles, the grass-hoppers, the devil-chasers, the pin-wheels, the red lights, the blue lights, the green lights and the white lights with which our streets were lighted up and our ears stunned were to these lads the source of such immense fun that one cannot help but feel that such moments come but seldom in one's lifetime. And not only to the boys were such things a source of enjoyment. The streets were crowded with little girls who clapped their hands and shouted in very joy. Even larger folks seemed to like it, as every door step and balcony was crowded with young men and maidens whose pleasant faces testified that they were not insensible to what was going on about them. Even older folks looked on with countenances denoting an interest in the proceedings. Here and there were fathers and even grandfathers out in the middle of the street surrounded by groups of little fellows to whom they imparted instructions as to how to manage their most complicated toys. Take it all in all the Fourth of July is a great day with us, and it is well we have such a day, the scenes of which quicken our blood and cause us to love more and more the institutions of a free and glorious country.

Although much attention has recently been attracted to the order of the Patrons of Husbandry, which has become quite an important element in the political and economical affairs of the country, but little has hitherto been known as to its origin. But now that it is so well established its founders have concluded to make public the circumstances of its origin and of the rise and growth of an organization which numbers among its members hundreds of thousands of farmers throughout the land. The people of this city were as much astonished as anybody to be told that it was started only a few years ago by a few government clerks. In 1866 a Mr. O. H. Kelly, at that time connected with the Department of Agriculture, was sent on a tour of observation through most of the Southern States. While considering the state of agriculture in that section and throughout the country he formed a plan for organizing a society having for its object the general interests of agriculture, and on completing his tour retired to his farm in Minnesota to perfect his plans. In November of the same year he returned to Washington and obtaining a clerkship in the Post Office Department began to look about for some one to cooperate with him. Most of those whom he addressed on the subject had little confidence in the scheme and took no interest in it. After a time, however, he succeeded in finding a few who engaged heartily in the movement and in August, 1867, the first meeting of the order was held. Prominent among those engaged in the infancy steps were Mr. William Saunders, superintendent of the experimental farm belonging to the Agricultural Department; Mr. William Ireland, chief clerk of the Finance Division of the Post Office; Captain John R Thompson, an intimate friend of your correspondent, and others. Mr. Saunders started immediately for a tour in the West and on the 12th of August established a grange in St. Louis, Mo. He also aroused the interests of a number of leading agriculturists in the West. The National Grange was organized in December, 1867, in Washington at the office of Mr. Saunders and circulars were sent out announcing the objects of the order. The next spring Mr. Kelly started out to organize granges in the various States, and though at first he met with indifferent success he kept at work and in 1871 finding that the order was growing rapidly he came to this city to reside. Being the secretary of the National Grange his house is used as headquarters and business office for the same.

From the statistics that have been published it will be seen that the strength of the order is mainly in the West and South, New York having but five granges, Pennsylvania but three, Vermont twenty-three, while in Iowa there are 1,600, in Illinois 823, in Nebraska 236, and so on. The membership is variously estimated at from 500,000 to 2,000,000. The granges are composed of both men and women, and there are seven degrees, three or four of which are taken by the wives and daughters of the farmers. The object is, in great part, to counteract the monopoly of the railroad companies, the cost of transportation of produce to eastern markets being so great as to absorb the profits of grain raising in the West. But the order takes account of all the general interests of agriculture, and is also a sort of co-operative association, one object being the purchase of supplies for its members at low rates. It is not intended to be a political organization, though of late it has acted with effect in Illinois, but it is presumed that its members will prefer to exert their political influence outside of the association, except when a great wrong against them is to be remedied, as for example, when a great monopoly gets possession of a legislature.

Judge Joseph Sherrard and wife, of Winchester, Va., celebrated their golden wedding a few days ago. The clergyman who married them and the two gentlemen who acted as groomsmen, fifty years ago, all still survive.

A BROKEN-HEARTED young thing writes to a weekly paper as follows:

"About three years ago I became acquainted with a young gentleman; and, although he never paid me any particular attentions, he would often accompany me to and from church, &c. But lately I have noticed a great change in him. He avoides me as much as possible, and starts if I address him. Can he have ceased to love me?—for I know he did, though he never said so. If I thought he had, it would break my heart."

Perhaps we ought not to interfere in this little matter; but, as we know exactly what should be done with the young man, we feel as if we ought to speak out. Do not attempted to reason with him or cajole him or pacify him. The next time he calls take a monkey-wrench, fasten it securely upon his nose, lead him off to the dining-room, and ask in a firm voice what he means. If he won't answer, twist the wrench three or four times, and butt his head up against the stove or the mantlepiece until his gloom is dispelled. If he says he has ceased to love you, let your fingers dally with his ringlets lovingly for a few minutes, and then suddenly lift out a couple of handsful, and have an Irishman at hand to come in and sit on him awhile and knock out his teeth and jump up and down on him, and be sociable. Then let him go, and commence your arrangements to rope in a fresh man. You cannot afford to waste your young life upon such a wretch as this; and where heart will not throb to heart, or soul respond to soul, the best thing to do is to conture the nose at once.—MAX ALDER, in Sunday Dispatch.

The fruit growers of Delaware held a meeting at Dover the other day, at which the estimate of the peach crop of 1873 was given at 2,183,830 baskets. This estimate is over 100,000 baskets more than that of last year, when the yield was 500,000 baskets more than the estimate. With an equal margin the crop this year will be very large.
