THE MONEY MARKET.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7, 1857.

The sales of stocks continue to show a decline in prices, in almost every kind of shares except those of the Reading Railroad Company, which have advanced 1¼. Somebody frightened a few of the stockholders by publishing an extract from a law, which, from its wording, appears to have been the combined production of two ingenious legislators, one of whom wished to introduce individual liability for debts, other than bonds, into an act passed for the relief of the Railroad Company, and the other to defeat the first, not by voting his section out of the bill, but by adding to it a string of provisions to render it meaningless. The purchasers at the advanced rates must certainly take this view of the case, and the scared holders are rapidly recovering their equanimity. The section has been under discussion in private circles, and has been in print for some days, but we did not deem it sufficiently important to reprint it, and only do so now at the request of some of our readers. It is as follows:

"SECTION 5. The stockholders of the said company shall be jointly liable, as partners trading together in business, for all the debts of the company hereafter contracted; and such debts may be sued for and recovered in the same manner that the debts of partners trading together in business may now be sued for and recovered: Provided, That the provisions of this section shall not apply to bonds which may be issued by said company, in lieu of, or in exchange for bonds which said company may, under existing laws, legally issue; or to engagements which said company may, under existing laws enter into: And provided further, That suit ...

... afloat. Oats are wanted, and about 3,000 bushels good Southern have been taken at 41½@42c., the latter for prime lots, afloat. Rye is more in demand, and scarce at 70@72c.; the distillers offer the former price. The cotton market continues at a stand, and a small business only going on at from 14 to 16½c., for both Uplands and Gulf, cash and time. Groceries are unchanged, but the demand for all kinds is limited. In Provisions there is nothing doing to establish a price, and the stock is very much reduced. Seeds are inactive, and prices about the same. Whiskey dull, and a small business only to note, at 21½@23c. for bbls., and 20@21c. for hhds.

LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

[Correspondence of The Press.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 7, 1857, 5.20 P. M.

The money market was more stringent to-day, and men hitherto confident and hopeful, were rather gloomy and desponding. The best I can say is, that things are not worse, but they are not better. Many failures are spoken of, but I forbear to give the names until I learn positively that the reports are true. A rather sanguine looker-on would say the market was "dull and heavy;" one less hopeful would say, there was a "depressed feeling."

I am of the former opinion, but in candor I must say that I observed discouragement to-day where I have never seen it, and long faces and doleful exclamations ...
