GREELY'S DEFEAT.

Before now every school boy in the land has heard of the overwhelming defeat of Horace Greeley, late a candidate for the presidency of the United States. The defeated editor of the Tribune himself admits, that "there is scarcely a parallel to the completeness of the route of the Lib-Rep. Dems. and the triumph" of the Republican party on Tuesday the 5th inst. It is quite evident, if we may judge from style of phraseology, and the use of common and well known epithets that there has not been a day, from the day that Horace Greeley received his nomination on the 3rd of May last, up to the present time when the New York Tribune has not borne upon its face the handwriting of its editor candidate for president of the United States; notwithstanding the declaration contained in a card published in that paper some six months since that Mr. Greeley would not be the editor figure head in its columns; that until otherwise ordered that would be the business and work of one Whitelaw Reid. The Daily Tribune of the 6th inst., the morning after the election, is perhaps in many respects quite as interesting edition of that sheet as has been issued since it fired its first campaign gun. To begin we have a paragraph of twenty four lines and two words, in laudation of the candidate editor's good behavior during the canvass, how modest he was, what great wisdom and prudence he displayed, how carefully selected were all his utterances, public and private, just as though he had not made his famous copperhead speech at Pittsburgh, and his bidding for votes speech at Jeffersonville, Ind. This paragraph of fulsome self praise he uses this language, "Mr. Greeley has made no bargains, he has sacrificed no principle; (we concede the latter statement, for where there is nothing of the kind on hand, there can be no sacrifice of the article,) he has in no way compromised his self respect, or used doubtful utterances to win votes."

All this says the defeated editor, and more is conceded, by Democrats, by Liberals, by those who feared his indications, and even by enemies. He concludes this dish of flat self praise as follows: "The difficulties of his position were enormous, and next to the victory, which was not to be attained, we rate the honesty, dignity, and wisdom with which he passed through them."

It is also very evident that Horace is not just as highly gratified with the result of the election as he would have been had it been different. Nor are the efforts made by his Democratic and Liberal supporters on that day quite up to his standard and notions of support, if we may be permitted to conclude from his own statement of his appreciation of the help that was afforded him, but we'll let Horace speak for himself on the subject.

"Democrats have vied with Liberal Republicans in contributing to it, some of them by voting directly for Grant electors; many more by neglecting to vote at all."—Tribune Nov. 6th 1872.

Not even thankful for small favors to say nothing of proportionate gratitude for larger ones. But Horace has an idea that the Lib-Rep-Dems. were too poor to elect HIM president of the United States, and again we'll let the would be President of the United States do his own talking, he says: "The Liberal movement was at one time formidable, and had a prospect of success. Had not millions been expended to arrest its progress in the State elections of the last three months, might even have swept the country, though all the money raised in its behalf would at best have been pence balancing pounds," now mark, here is a formidable movement, this "Liberal movement," a formidable movement with a prospect of success, this "Liberal movement," so formidable as to sweep the country, though, it is true, its working cash capital was as "pence balancing pounds" compared with the working cash capital of the Republican party, yet a few millions spent in hiring Democrats and "Liberals" to either vote for Grant or not vote at all, swept it from the field of politics to be known hereafter as a thing of the past only; for it must be borne in mind that Mr. Greeley makes the charge that "Democrats have vied with the Liberal Republicans in contributing to it, (this result of Tuesday 5th inst.)" some of them by voting directly for Grant electors; many more by neglecting to vote at all. What a formidable movement, what a hold upon the public mind its principles must have had, to let a few paltry millions so utterly demolish it. It must be comforting to Democrats who did not vote for Greeley to be informed that they "would not eat crow" when they could get $5 to $20 each for not eating it."

To say the least and best that can be said of Mr. Greeley's leader in the Tribune of the 6th, it is the outgushing of a heart insensible to gratitude but as he now proposes to make his wisdom and prudence the better part of valor, and never again be a candidate for office, he perhaps concluded that an indulgence of this kind, might not perhaps be out of the way.

In another article of some considerable length in the same issue of the Tribune, Nov. 6th, Mr. Greeley attempts the old folly, of making the world believe that the Tribune was not a party "organ" but a "news paper," simply advocating him, its founder and for 32 years its editor, after he was nominated for the presidency, a nomination in which he, Greeley had no agency or solicitation; but chaffing still over his defeat he consoles himself that the incorporated wealth of the nation was brought to bear adversely upon him, and therefore his sore discomfiture. Mr. Greeley may thank his vanity, his vacillating course as a public man, his thorough unsoundness in every principle of good government, for his defeat on the 5th inst, and not the millions of money by him alleged to have been expended to secure that end.

WOODHULL-CLIFFIN CASE.—The examination in the case of Luther C. Challis against Victoria Woodhull, Tennessee C. Claffin, Col. Blood and others, for alleged libel published in Woodhull & Claffin's Weekly, took place to-day in the Second district police court room. The room was crowded. Among these present were Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith and George Francis Train. Challis testified to libel, and stated that he was introduced to Temple C. Claffin at a French ball in the Academy of Music last winter. He denied all charges against him in alleged libellous article. Several witnesses were examined to establish the publication of the article referred to. The examination will be resumed to-morrow.

ever dreamed of electing Horace Greeley President of the United States to say nothing of the strength or weakness of the Liberal movement in the public mind. How the Mules Were Got Into the Mine. The three mules employed in the 1,100 foot level of the Belcher Mine, since September, 1871, are to be hoisted out. They were needed at that time to haul cars loaded with ore up an incline to the Yellow Jacket hoisting works. A new incline has been completed, and ore will no longer be hauled up the old one. These mules, before being taken down the shaft, were thrown down and tied, bound up in sacks and sent down sideways. They will have to undergo similar treatment in being hoisted out. It is not expected that they will be brought up under a week or ten days, as, in case of accident, their services may be required. Singular as it may seem, these mules are as fat and sleek as any in the country. Their stable is at the junction of the Crown Point and Yellow Jacket, where a free current of good air is always blowing. When they are raised, they will require to be blinded for about a week, in order that their eyes may get used to the light of day.—Virginia City (Nevada) Enterprise.

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF MAJOR GEN. MEADE, THE HERO OF GETTYSBURG!

The nation is called to mourn the death of our our most distinguished soldiers who died in Philadelphia, at 6.30 o'clock yesterday evening, of pneumonia. A braver and more loyal citizen America never possessed, and when the death of Gen. George Gordon Meade is announced throughout the length and breadth of the land, it will send grief to every true heart, and elicit tears from every manly eye.

George Gordon Meade, a major-general in the United States army, was born at Cadiz, Spain, in 1816, graduated at West Point, July 1, 1835; entered the regular army as second lieutenant of the Third artillery; served in the Florida war against the Seminoles Indians, 1835-6; resigned his commission in October, 1836, and lived in retirement for six years. He was appointed second lieutenant of Topographical Engineers, May 19, 1842, and in that capacity served in the Mexican war, during which he distinguished himself at the battles of Palo Alto and Monterey, and after passing through the intermediate grades attained the rank of major in June, 1862, and that of brigadier general of volunteers in August, 1862. General Meade took part in the battles of Mechanicsville, June 26, of Gaines's Mill, June 27, a few days after which he was wounded, but not seriously; of Antietam September 17, in which he was again slightly wounded, and had two horses killed under him; and of Fredericksburg in December 1862, when the Union forces, under General Burnside, were defeated, with much slaughter. Two days after this disastrous repulse, he superseded General Butterfield in the command of the Fifth army corps; was appointed commander-in-chief of the army of the Potomac, June 28, 1863; and on July 1-3, 1863, fought the battle of Gettysburg, for which, on January 28, 1866, he received the thanks of Congress. On July 3, 1863, he was raised to the rank of brigadier general in the regular army. He took part in the engagement at Bristoe Station, October 14, 1863, and the many less important conflicts of the same year, including the operations at Mine Run, November 26 to December 3, During the Richmond campaign, as commander of the army of the Potomac, he signally distinguished himself, taking a prominent part in the battles of the Wilderness, May 5-6; Spotsylvania, May 8-20; North Anna, May 23-26; Cold Harbor, May 31, and June 1; and the assaults on Petersburg, June 18-18. On August 18, 1864, he was made major-general in the regular army, and in July of the following year, was assigned to the command of the Military Division of the Atlantic, and in 1866 to that of the East, with his quarters at Philadelphia. General Meade has been a member of Historical Society of Pennsylvania since 1863, and of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences since 1865. The degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him by Harvard college, Mass., in 1865.—State Journal.

The Major Generalship. WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—It is rumored in army circles that Brigadier General O. O. Howard will be promoted to the grade of Major General, vice Meade, deceased, and retired immediately with the full grade of Major General, on account of long and faithful service, and wounds received therein. The retirement of Gen. Howard will still leave a vacancy in the list of Major Generals, which as said yesterday, will probably be filled by the promotion of General Terry or General Canby, and thus reduce the number of Brigadier Generals to six. Though there is no direct official authority for this statement, it nevertheless finds credence in well-informed army circles, and is very generally thought to be fully correct.

Ayer's Hair Vigor, For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by this application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pesty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make many preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern medicine, few are of more real value to mankind than this effective remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best physicians, of all classes, establishes the fact, that Chronic Bronchitis, and all other diseases of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs, such as Consumption, Croup, and Whooping Cough, are cured by this preparation, are public knowledge, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the formation of more serious disease, it secures unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, and the decreasing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, Cherry Pectoral is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centered on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer from common influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured. Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toll is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied on as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing a cure as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.
