MEDICINAL.

MRS. WINSLOW,
AN EXPERIENCED NURSE AND FEMALE Physician, presents to the attention of mothers her
SOOTHING SYRUP
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING, which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation; will allay PAIN and spasmodic action, and is SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.
Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves and relief and health to your infants.
We have put up and sold this article for over ten years, and can say, in confidence and truth of it, this is say of any other medicine, NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE, TO EFFECT A CURE, when we know an instance of one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and commendation of its magical virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after ten years' experience, and place our judgment of what we here state, against the world. In no instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found within an hour after the Syrup is administered.
This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERIENCED NURSES in New England and has been used with never-failing success in THOUSANDS OF CASES.
It not only relieves the child from pain, but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve GRIPING IN THE BOWELS AND WIND COLIC, and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it the best and most remedy in the world, in all cases of DYSENTERY and DIARRHŒA IN CHILDREN, whether it arises from teething or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints—do not let your prejudices or others, stand between you and your suffering child, and withhold from it a remedy that will be SURE—yes, ABSOLUTELY SURE to follow the use of this medicine, if done for pains will accompany, unless the fact of the outside wrapper, signature of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on each bottle.
Sold by Druggists throughout the world.
Office, No. 13 CEDAR Street, New York. jy9-1y
Price 25 cents a bottle.

Mr. David Masson, Professor of English Literature on the University of London, and author of "The Life and Times of John Milton," lately issued a highly interesting contribution to Belle Lettres, in the form of a book upon "British Novelists and their Styles: being a critical sketch of the History of British Prose Fiction." It has just been republished by Gould & Lincoln, of Boston, who also placed the first volume (all yet completed) of his Life of Milton before the American public. The subject of this work upon British Novelists is so comprehensive that one would not be surprised at its consideration occupying a large volume. Professor Masson, however, in consequence of being fully master of the subject—for deep Knowledge is concentrating, while superficial Knowledge is diffusely wordy—has brought his well-arranged and thoroughly-digested materials into the small compass of 312 pages 12mo. Originally delivered in the form of Lectures, the work has been revised and adapted for appearance, as a whole, in its present shape. It is divided into four parts, which sufficiently divides the work. First, we have "On the Novel as a form of Literature, and on Early British Prose Fiction." This brings us down to Aphra Behn, and the novelettes of the Restoration, and includes an account of the origin and history of early British fiction. Next, "The British Novelists of the Eighteenth Century," starting with Swift and Defoe; treating of Richardson, Fielding, Smollett, and Sterne; passing on to Johnson, Goldsmith, and Walpole, and concluding with the minor novelists of the latter part of the last century. To this succeeds, what we consider the best portion of the work, a chapter upon "Scott and his Influence." Mr. Masson suggestively begs his readers to remember specially that it was prepared for an Edinburgh audience—an apology for its being so Scotch. However, it is more general and less national than might have been expected under these circumstances. For it contains not only a review of Scott's wondrous library of fiction, but a notice of the progress of British prose fiction in the quarter of a century preceding the publication of Waverley. This takes in from 1780 to 1814, and among the writers discussed or glanced at are Godwin, Mrs. Radcliffe, "Monk" Lewis, Maturin, the Misses Porter, Harriet Lee, Dr. Moore, Miss Austin, Hannah More, Charlotte Smith, Amelia Opie, Mrs. Inchbald, Mrs. Brunton, Maria Edgeworth, Mrs. Hamilton, and Lady Morgan. Lastly, there is a most interesting chapter upon the "British Novelists since Scott," including these now living. It is difficult for a critic and historian to deal satisfactorily between the public, whom he addresses, and the contemporaries about whom he may have to write. Mr. Masson, we think, has succeeded in conquering this difficulty, and public and authors ought feel indebted to his good taste, no less than his impartiality. No novelist of any note, contemporary with, or subsequent to, Sir Walter Scott has been overlooked here, but the commanding genius of a few merits, and has obtained, some particular and distinctive notice. Mr. Masson calculates, from data taken from the catalogues of the British Museum, that the annual yield of British novels has been quadrupled since the time of Scott's death, as compared with what it had been when he was in the middle of his Waverley series—and that the same average, of 100 new novels a year, has been kept up since Scott's death. About 3,000 novels, counting about 7,000 separate volumes, have been produced in Great Britain and Ireland since the publication of "Waverley," in 1814. The novelists to the consideration of whose merits or peculiarities Mr. Masson gives most space, are John Wilson, Miss Mitford, Theodore Hook, Sir Bulwer Lytton, Charlotte Bronté, Dinah Maria Mulock, Mrs. Gaskell, Chas. Kingsley, Mr. Disraeli, Mrs. Trollope, Mrs. Gore, W. H. Ainsworth, Mr. Mozier, Mr. Maxwell, Captain Marryat, James Hannay, Charles Lever, Mrs. Shelley, G. P. R. James, J. G. Lockhart, Wilkie Collins, Thomas Hope, John Galt, Charles Dickens, Douglas Jerrold, and W. M. Thackeray. A considerable portion of this last chapter is devoted to an examination of the comparative merits of Thackeray and Dickens, the conclusion being that "Thackeray is a novelist of what is called the Real School;" while "Dickens is a novelist of the Ideal, or Romantic School." It seems to us that this is only partially correct. There is scarcely any romance in Thackeray's characters or incidents. He is cynical, and strips away the gentler illusions of life. Dickens, on the other hand, is as much Realist as an Idealist. The charm of his stories is that he brings before us real flesh-and-blood men and women, and real they remain, whatever they may say and do. Therefore, as taking a double line, Dickens is a better novelist than Thackeray, with his eternal sneering at every thing and every body, and his apparent belief that society is altogether composed of rocks and pigeons, knaves and fools, with a sprinkling of women, who are either downright bad at heart or not overbright in intellect, in the rare cases where he makes them good for any thing. Mr. Masson has some remarks upon religion in novels, which we commend to the serious attention of the writers of that particular and remarkable description of prose fiction. The work, taken as a contribution to literary criticism is valuable, and will probably have a great sale in this country. All who read prose fiction, and how few are not in this class, will be gratified, as well as instructed, by perusing it. We may add that Mr. Masson confines himself to British prose fiction. Will not some well-qualified writer among ourselves do as much, with equal knowledge and impartiality, for American novels and novelists? Executed with even moderate ability and in a just spirit, it would be sure of extended popularity.
