Affairs in Utah Territory.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah Territory, September 14, 1859.

Dr. Lot Gibson, accused of the murder of James Johnson, and who escaped from jail in this city, has been captured by Sheriff Burton in Weber county. Gibson was dressed in women's clothes and mounted on a splendid animal. He is now in jail in this city, where he will probably remain a long time, for the prospect appears utterly hopeless of the courts accomplishing anything worth speaking of touching the administration of justice. If courts are to adjourn for weeks, keeping prisoners in jail an unnecessary length of time, when constitutionally and reasonably they should have a speedy trial, and if, when the courts do meet, they waste their time in endeavoring to try cases of long standing, with little or no testimony to sustain them, we have nothing to expect but an alarming increase of unpunished crime and an insupportable burden of taxation.

Judge Eckles, on opening his court at Nephi, manifested a disposition to expedite business and do something. But disregarding the Territorial laws which regulate the formation of juries, he took with him, from Camp Floyd, about two-thirds of his grand jury, composed of camp followers. The remainder of the pannel was made up chiefly of citizens. They sat five days, and were then discharged. What they accomplished has not transpired, further than the indictment of Mckenzie for forgery. It is worth noticing here, that one of the "State's evidence" again at him actually sat on the grand jury and indicted him.

It is said that McKenzie has been sentenced to pay fifty dollars fine and to be imprisoned for two years. Some of the Mormons allege that when the whole mystery of the forgery for which McKenzie was convicted is revealed to the public it will be shown to have been the result of a plan to get hold of certain persons who yet go free, and most likely ever will go free, for that the bait did not take. It is also alleged that McKenzie is a young and inexperienced man, easily deceived, and that at the time of his arrest Marshal Dotson took away from his shop engraved plates, paper, rings, silver spoons, belonging to private parties, many of the articles having been sent there to be repaired or engraved. Also, that a seal for the county of Green River was abstracted, which rightfully belonged to a private person.

Our city papers will have given you some particulars of the Indian difficulties in our northern counties. The troops led by a citizen guide, came upon the Indian wickeups at Devil's Gate, Box Elder Kanyon, about daybreak, while the Indians were asleep. A male Indian and a squaw were wounded; some Indian ponies taken; several soldiers wounded; soldiers retreated. An hour or two after, when they had returned from the Kanyon and reached the open valley, the troops came across a Piede boy, who had been raised from a babe in the family of Mr. Hunsaker, a citizen, and who was still in his employ. When discovered the boy was herding cattle, when the soldiers immediately prepared to fire on him. Perceiving their intentions, and speaking and writing English, the boy told them he was not an enemy. He was only twelve years old. He besought them not to fire, but finding them determined, he turned his horse to escape. Mr. Hunsaker told them the boy was in his employ, and was innocent; but all of no avail; for the poor fellow was shot and fatally wounded, dying in about six hours. This is a proper case for a grand jury to consider.

Lieutenant Gay, commanding, complains of being led into an ambuscade. An ambuscade! Marching into an Indian camp, where men, squaws, and papooses lay asleep! Fudge!

Since the above affray, the troops have been inactive, doing nothing to protect the emigrants or the settlers, or their property. The Indians say that a citizen piloted the troops to their wickeups, and have, consequently, made a descent upon the settlements in Cache Valley, killing or stealing horses, cattle, &c., to pay for it.

This foolish and cultying conduct of the troops promises to inflict untold loss on the citizens and emigrants; for, unless the Indians are promptly and decisively dealt with, and made to respect the whites, they will grow more and more daring, troublesome, and insolent.

The heavy trains of merchandise, and the large number of Pike's Peak emigrants who have passed through here on their way to California, and who have disposed largely of their supplies to the citizens, have reduced the prices of goods to an unprecedentedly low figure. Tea that formerly sold at $3 per pound now sells in the same places as low as $1.25; coffee that rated at from sixty to seventy cents per pound now brings thirty-five cents; sugar and dried fruit that sold for sixty-five and seventy cents per pound now sell at thirty cents; soap which sold as high as seventy-five and eighty cents per pound is now disposed of at twenty-five cents! In dry goods the change of prices has been equally marked. Whole trains of goods have been offered in the city at cost and freight—that is, fifteen cents per pound in advance of cost. Unbleached muslin that has been commonly sold at thirty-five and forty cents per yard, is now selling at fourteen and eighteen cents; best calico at fourteen cents, and lawns at twenty cents per yard. The emigrants have sold for whatever they could get, and a large portion of the citizens have obtained their supplies from them, which has compelled the merchants to lower their prices. I.
