MEDICINAL.
MRS. WINSLOW,
AN EXPERIENCED NURSE AND FEMALE Physician, presents to the attention of mothers her
SOOTHING SYRUP
FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,
which greatly facilitates the process of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation; will allay ALL PAIN and consequently SPASMS;
SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.
Depend upon its mothers; it will give rest to yourselves and
RELIEF AND HEALTH TO YOUR INFANTS.
We have put up and sold this article for over ten years, and can say, in confidence and truth of it, that we have never heard any other medicine NEVER HAS ONE INSTANCE, YET FAILED in a SINGLE INSTANCE, to effect a speedy and timely cure. Never did we meet with a disatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with it, and speak in terms of highest commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "what we do know," after ten years' experience, and pledge our reputation for the fulfilment of what we here declare, in almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.
This valuable preparation is the prescription of one of the most EXPERIENCED NURSES in New England, and has been used with never-failing success in THOUSANDS OF CASES, not only relieves the child from pain, but invigorates the stomach and bowels, corrects acidity, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. It will almost instantly relieve GRIPING IN THE BOWELS AND WIND COLIC, and overcome convulsions, which, if not speedily remedied, end in death. We believe it the best and surest remedy in the world, in all cases of DYSENTERY AND DIARRHŒA IN CHILDREN, whether it arises from teething or from any other cause. We would say to every mother who has a child suffering from any of the foregoing complaints, do not let your prejudices, nor the prejudices of others, stand between your suffering child and health. It will be SURE—yes, ABSOLUTELY SURE—to follow the use of this medicine, if directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.
Sold by Druggists throughout the world. Principal Office, No. 13 CEDAR Street, New York.
Price 25 cents a bottle. jy25-1y

Bulwer's New Poem.—Part 2.

In the January number of Blackwood's Magazine appeared the first part of a poem, by Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, called St. Stephen's—a pen portrait gallery of the illustrious men who from Elizabethan to the Victorian reign, have lived and breathed, and had their being, as orators in the British Parliament. That first portion of the poem concluded with a sketch of Lord Chatham, and said

To colder lips he left the words that teach:
He awed and crushed—the Æschylus of speech.

Blackwood for February, which we received a few days ago from Mr. Zieber, agent for the New York republishers, gives us the second part of "St. Stephen's." We can say of it that it is not inferior to the first. The English orators in this department of the gallery are Fox, the younger Pitt, Wilberforce, Dundas, the Grenvilles, Sheridan, Windham, and Burke, with glimpses of Reynolds, Garrick, Boswell, Johnson, and Goldsmith.

A comparison is ingeniously instituted between English Fox and French Mirabeau. Then the poet proceeds to describe the characteristics of Fox, as an orator:

Our Fox's voice rolled no melodious stream—
It rose in splinter, and went off in scream.
Yet could it vary, in appropriate place,
From the sharp stile to the rumbling bass.
Such sudden changes when you'd least expect,
Secured to dissonance a stage effect,
Strikes you now much more than talk-like ease
Slid the wild music down the creaking keys.
The action? what Quintilian would have shocked;
The huge fist thundered, and the huge frame rocked.
As clattering down, immense ore, went
Splinters and orts of crashing argument:
Not for neat reasonings, subtle and refined,
Paused the strong logic of that rushing mind;
It tore from out the popular side of Truth
Fragments that the larger because left uncouth—
Hands, if less strong, more potent than his own.
Perfect the statue, his hewed forth the stone,
And in the rock, his daring chisel broke,
Hewed the bold outlines with a hasty stroke.
But on this force, with its disdain of rule,
No safe good sense would like to found a school;
And (drop the image) he who leads mankind,
Must seek to soothe and not to shock the mind.
The chief whose anger all the angry cheer,
Thins his own ranks—the temperate disappear;
They shake their heads, and in a sober fright
Groan, "What a passion he was in to-night!
Men in a passion must be in the wrong;
And, heaven! how dangerous when they're made so strong!"
Thus is it strange, with all his genius, zeal,
Sophistical to argue, and such heart to feel,
That his wild Wit, amidst immense applause,
Scared off his clients, and bewildered his cause—
Undid Reform by hauling revolution,
Till cobblers cried, "God save the Constitution!"
That by deserters in his own approaches
He fled; his followers fill'd their home coaches.

This estimate of Fox may appear severe, but we suspect it to be true. The Whig party in England, after Burke seceded—into pensioned patriotism—were compelled to give political canonization to their best man, who was Fox. Gambler, spendthrift, and roué as he was, they had no abler leader. The Whigs of the present day swear by his memory, and Lord John Russell has dedicated his intensest dullness, to keep him, as a sort of mummy, in a mausoleum constructed of four volumes of a heavy biography. Every Whig is expected to buy this Life of Fox; but to read it is a punishment so enormous that Mercy has invariably interfered to prevent its being carried into execution. But, to proceed. Next, we come to Fox's successful rival:

All that contrasted, foil'd and undermined
His rival chief, the younger Pitt combined.
Proud self-esteem, decorous, and austere,
Strict self-control, not Zeno's more severe;
Like some s'd Chaldee, from his throne high,
O'er human errors scarcely stooped his eye;
Still on that eye shone unobserved no star,
And still that Pharos guided fleets afar.

From birth to death, through pomp, ambition, strife,
Serenely strenuous pass'd that stately life.
Why marvel that the beardless hierarch sprung
At once to power?—the hierarch ne'er was young,
And ne'er was old, but, dying in his prime,
Stands forth completed while vouchsafed to time.

Men praise or blame in Pitt the iron will.
Well, steel, though supple, is of iron still.
Thus will in Pitt could bend to ward the stroke;
It was by bending that it never broke.
The time exhibits such dazzling contradiction;
His wise reform, his policy restriction!
His game for Peace so wary to the last;
His warlike vigor when the die was cast.
As were the wind, so shifts the pilot's art;
Who saves the ship may well rest the chart.

Pitt was a bachelor, but his house was kept by his eccentric niece, Lady Harriet Stanhope, who retired to Syria after the great man's death, and long survived him. Thus the poet indicates both facts:

The lone proud man! for him no graces smiled,
No love the same from pride's hold could beguile;
No twilight tryst exchanged the youthful vow;
No tender lip kiss'd trouble from that brow!
His sole Egeria (O supreme caprice!)
A cold, unchanny, warwhich of a niece,
Who, at his death, the mourner stands alone
Replace the lost grand desert she had known.
For rule in wastes by previous empire fit,
Had she not ruled a lonelier world in Pitt?

Very graphic is this description:

The form, the face, the bearing of the man
Became the Bayard, firm against the van
Of hosts standing on the perilous arch,
And singly staying armies in their march.
We see him still, the front with labor paled:
The eyes that rarely glowed, but never quailed,
Within disdaining, without the host of foes;
What grand contempt sustained his calm repose!
Gives the dread sneer that withered Erskine down
And leaves the brow scarce ruffled by its frown.
We hear the elaborate swell of that full strain
Linking long periods in compelling chain,
Staying the sense, from sentence sentence grows,
Till the last word comes clinching up the close.

Wilberforce is overrated, we think, in this sketch. Dundas (afterwards Lord Melville) is brought in as a contrast:

See it in Dundas.
Timing the hour as truly as its glass.
Office was made for him, and he for it;
He felt the truth, and lived his soul to Pitt.
No shrewder minister e'er served a throne,
Or joined his country's to terest with his own.

That wonderful man, Sheridan—of whom Byron said that whatever he did, and he did much, was always the best—is hit off with great tact and truth:

If eloquence can find its sur est test
In the degree to which it thrill the breast,
And not the enduring thought, which after oil m
Retains, then thine the sceptre and the palm:
For never Fancy shot more sparkles out
Nor left air duller when it died away.

He did not rule opinion, shape a creed,
Control a council, or a nation lead:
These make the power that sage and statesman claim,
But to the orator applause is fame.
Viewed at his best, while yet the nerves were strung,
While silvery yet the clear keen accents rung;
While yet erect and lithe the sprightly form,
And the eye lightened o'er the words of storm,
What power, before Humanity arraigned,
(Guilty of empires, though to England gained,)
Stood the grand Verres of the East; not then
Had Tully's self more fired the souls of men.
Before that lengthen'd train of ills, which have
Of splendor dwindled Fox's disc of light,
And Burke's was paled; as when the irregular
Comet shoots flaming over the fixed star.
Seen then, heard then, what could Ambition hope
Or Statesmen bestow, that seem'd beyond his scope?
He whose wild youth had courted "random's frown,
Deserved her sneer, and then laugh'd it down;
He whose ray forces seemed, if not too light,
Too laxly disciplined for serious fight;
He who had known the failure, felt the sneer,
Sat bunting brows in muttering, "It is here!"
He now one hour the acknowledged lord of all,
Hears Pitt adjourn the agitated hall,
That brain may cool, and heart forget to swell
And dawn relax the orchestra's midnight spell.
But upon Time! the years roll on, and lo!
The broken wand, the falcon Prospero!
O shreds and rays of that once gorgeous soul!
O priceless peal dissolved amidst the bowl!
Hide—hide the vision; let our awe forbear
To note the trembling limbs, the glassy stare—
To count the sparks which through the gathering shade
Start from chur'd embers, gleam on wrecks and fade—
To hear of half fa wrangling round the bed;
Hush, and uncover!—Homage to the dead!

Upon Burke a discriminating opinion is passed. We are told that

As poets color all that they regard,
And among statesmen Burke stands forth the bard;
By his own genius both obscured and fired,
At times inebriate, and at times inspired;
His Truth ten sides, he must invent the eleventh,
And quit the earth to gain a heaven—the seventh!

To the question, was not Burke called "the dinner-bell?" because when he rose to speak, the members, conscious of his tediousness, would rush out to dinner, Bulwer replies:

Friend, if some actor murder Haml
