One Day Later from Europe.

Arrival of the City of Baltimore.

The steam steamship City of Baltimore, Captain Patten, which sailed from Liverpool at noon on the 4th, and from Queenstown on the 5th inst., arrived at New York yesterday.

Her news has been mainly anticipated by the Vanderbilt, but we subjoin the following, telegraphed to Queenstown on the 5th inst.:

THE LEAVITT TRADE.

No further features of importance are announced. The Times remarks that the break-up is simply the result of undue credit having been granted to a single firm which has made a multitude of smaller ones to keep up a constant system of extension. Hitherto, the bankers, as a body, have always stood well for prudence and safety, and it is believed that the position of the firms that have avoided speculation, and carried on only legitimate operations, was never more healthy and independent than at this moment. It is said that one of the firms which failed in connection with Messrs. Strat-field & Co. are not expected to pay more than one shilling in the pound, their chief business for some time past having consisted in accepting bills.

STATE OF TRADE.

The Herald says the effects of the bad weather and the general sluggishness of trade during the season are gradually, but slowly, affecting the situation of a number of small establishments—two firms in the branches connected with Manchester have been compelled to seek the indulgence of their creditors, one with debts amounting to £10,000 or £11,000, and another to the extent of about £9,000. It also appears that the quantity of bills returned through the Clearing House is increasing, though they were chiefly associated with the second and third class.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Times says that Mr. Gladstone's intentions with respect to the paper duties are said to be to reduce duty upon paper of foreign manufacture, to the same amount as the excise duty now levied upon paper of home manufacture. The Times adds that this is obviously neither more nor less than a bounty upon the introduction of French paper.

Garibaldi has written to a friend in London, asking if it would be possible to obtain a couple of steamers armed with Armstrong guns, as he is in great want of a flotilla.

One of the sufferers by the Tottenham Railway accident has obtained a verdict of two thousand pounds damages.

The city articles in to-day's papers generally describe yesterday's corn market as inactive, at Monday's decline of 2s.

The Times, referring to the second report on the packet contract, anticipates that the session will not come to a close without at least one more interesting debate.

A notice from the Commander-in-Chief's office states that the military operations will receive ladies and gentlemen on Tuesday next.

The Channel fleet has been ordered to Plymouth Sound.

There is no decisive news from Naples. The effect of the King's concessions is very uncertain.

The rifle shooting at Wimbledon continues to excite great interest. The number of prizes had been increased by Miss Coutts; who offers one of fifty guineas, open to all comers with any description of rifle. Several contests remained undecided, on account of ties.

The shooting off of one of these ties attracted great attention yesterday. It was between M. Morrion, the crack shot of Switzerland, and M. Frechi, a Swiss also. Mr. Edward Ross, beat Wilson, the best shot at Bythe, and Mr. Ingraham, of Glasgow, each had to fire one shot at 300 yards. Wilson was first thrown out and the others were still equal. Morrison, Ross, and Ingraham were the three final ties. The Swiss made a blank. Ross sent his shot plumb into the bull's eye and scored two and Ingraham only scored one, and of course Ross was the victor.

WEDNESDAY, 9th.—Her Majesty and the court left Buckingham Palace for Osborne this morning.

At the 35th half-yearly meeting of the Colonial Bank to day a report was adopted and a dividend declared at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, free of income tax.

The competition for the prizes offered by the Queen and Prince Consort commenced at Wimbledon this morning.

A Cabinet Council has been held this afternoon.

THE STATE OF WAR WITH CHINA.

This morning was issued an estimate of the sum required to be voted towards defraying the expenses of naval and military operations in China, beyond the ordinary grants for army and navy services for the year 1860-61, including a repayment of £443,896 to the Government of India, for advances on account of former expeditions to China. The sum in question is £3,800,000.

AUSTRALIA.

It is reported that news has arrived via Panama, to the effect that the colony of New South Wales has granted £75,000 as a subsidy to an English line of steamers to run from Australia to Panama; and that the British Government have agreed to take possession of the Fejiee Islands.

VERY LATEST.

[By City of Baltimore.]

No additional failure of importance has occurred in the leather trade.

The State of Naples.

[Correspondence of the London Times.]

TURIN, July 1.

Naples at the present day presents the strange phenomenon of a country, or rather of a town, without government or anarchy. The King is at Portici—some say even fled on board one of his vessels ready to sail for Gaeta. The royal troops are at least three to one against the people at Portici. The former Cabinet has withdrawn; the new Ministry have neither a mandate nor a programme. The troops have neither leaders nor bond of union; the populace, if they are religious, are at all events far from think of nothing but fight; the lazzaroni panting for nothing but plunder; government is at an end, but revolution is still dormant. Can any man doubt the results of such an anomalous state, in such a society, if Naples be any longer left to itself? The troops will either fire on the town without orders, without motive, without object, or they will come down from the forts, they will "fraternize," and that means join hands with the rabble, and murder, arson, and robbery will rage beneath Mt. Vesuvius till ait the volcanic matter has burnt itself out.

The old government is at an end, and there is no one at hand, in the town and country itself, to substitute a new instead of the old order of things. If any person feel inclined to dissent from the gloomy views taken by men well acquainted with the country about Neapolitan affairs, let him turn to Sicily, and say what would have become or what would even now become of the island without the miraculous prestige of Garibaldi. Those southern people could not have freed themselves by their unaided strength. There is not a better set of gentlemen, with brighter intellects or more noble characters than these Sicilian exiles with whom I am in daily contact, and most of whom have gone back to their native island, to bring, if it be practicable, order out of chaos. I have seen, before they started, such men as Ferreri, Cordova, Michele Amari, Pasi, Pettineni, and others, all shook their heads when friends wished them success, like men by no means sanguine. Of their ascendency would prevail over the barbarism into which that ruthless Bourbon government has for so many years plunged their ill-fated countrymen.

Without Garibaldi, it is very clear Sicily could neither be politically nor militarily organized. What, then, will become of Naples if left to its own devices? Naples, where the degradation arising from long tyranny has sunk so much deeper into the needy and lazy populace, and where even the better classes, although by no means deficient in mental capacity and acquirements, are far inferior to their Sicilian brethren in their sense of manly dignity, in moral courage, and in high feeling of honor? Garibaldi has done wonders, and so limit can be set to his ability to accomplish new prodigies. A book has just been published, intitled, Ten Decisive Days, by Francesco Carrano, a Neapolitan, and one of Garibaldi's own companions, showing forth the character of the hero, both by his deeds and by some autobiographical sketches, revealing the finest traits of his character, by which it is impossible not to make out the true power on which the prestige of the man rests. A Genoese by descent, although a native of Nice, Garibaldi is a countryman of Columbus; he has the first Genoese faith, the deep melancholy of the great navigator, and exercises on his followers that charm which sentiousness and singleness of mind, silent and meditative habits, gave the discoverer of America over his mutinous crew.

Wherever Garibaldi is there are order and discipline; troops and crowds range themselves under him as if by instinctive subordination. Garibaldi has been the saviour of Italy and the redemption of Sicily. Will he equally rescue and reorganize Naples? It is important for him to make haste; and his presence is urgently wanted on the mainland before it can at all be said that the Italian Parties, it would seem, are running high in Sicily, and are only held under control by the mild and gentle, but silent, serious, inflexible temper, the iron face, and commanding brow of Garibaldi.

Madame Mario and her husband are at Palermo, and the lady has taken the military hospital under her management. Mazzini is said, I know not with what foundation, to have landed at Palermo on the 25d. On the other hand, La Farina is still in Sicily, though living in retirement. There is, in short, no lack of discordant and dissolvent elements, and the Sicilians have harbor against each other shows forth in the several organs of the Piedmontese press, and in the various clubs professing to set in Garibaldi's name. Bertani informs the public that he has negotiated a loan of 50,000,000f. with the house of Bellinsagli at Milan, and in favor of the Dictator of Sicily. Four English steamers are advertised as plying regularly between Genoa and Palermo. The Prince of San Giuseppe, on his way to London as Sicilian envoy to the Court of St. James's went through Turin yesterday. Ossano, at the head of the third expedition to Sicily, is expected to leave Genoa to morrow (Monday.)

THE PATTERSON-BONAPARTE FAMILY.—The Paris correspondent of the Courrier des Etats Unis, in his last letter to that journal, says: "It is rumored that the death of Prince Jerome will furnish to his son by his first marriage with Miss Elizabeth Patterson an occasion to revive his claim as sole heir of the sequel deceased. This is really the time for him to have his rights, if he has any, formally decided. It is true that the decision which would emanate from an imperial family council would not be very dubious, although certain members have, it is said, shown themselves favorable to the cause of the American lady. Jerome was a minor when he was married to her by Bishop Carroll, and it was upon this plea of minority that Napoleon broke the union. To prove that the young marine officer had been enticed into the match by a premeditated scheme, testimonials were produced to show that Miss Patterson had laid a wager that she would captivate and secure the brother of the man the fame of whose exploits had already filled the two continents. She won that wager, but only gained thereby a premature widowhood, and the grief of losing, while still living, the man whom she believed at first sincerely to love for life."
