PENNSYLVANIA ITEMS.

WARREN COUNTY.—MORE OIL.—A company of Warren men have an oil well near Titusville which runs, without pumping, twelve barrels every twenty-four hours, and it is expected that when they get their pump at work, as they soon will do, the supply will not be less than forty-five or fifty barrels per day. Mr. D. M. Williams, of Warren, who is the practical operator in the company, deserves great credit for the energy and perseverance he has shown in this matter. Last fall he commenced boring for oil, and after reaching a depth of about three hundred feet, he was obliged to abandon that hole. Not discouraged with his ill success, he commenced again, and now has, probably, the best oil well in existence. The "Williams well," as it is called, has created a great excitement in the oil region. The contractors, Messrs. Struthers & Wetmore, have again commenced upon the railroad bridge, which is to cross the Allegheny at Warren. The timber having been all framed last winter, it was necessary either to house it or to put up the bridge, and the S. & E. R. R. Co. have wisely concluded to adopt the latter course. The abounds which reach us from the oil-boring companies in Tidioute, in this county, are very encouraging. Several rich veins of oil have been reached, and in a few weeks large quantities of the spectacle oil will be shipped to market.

ALLEGHENY COUNTY.—The suburbs of Pittsburg seem to have increased in population very fast. The Birmingham and south Pittsburg are computed by the prosecutors to have ten thousand inhabitants, more than quadruple that of the last census. In East Birmingham more than two hundred and fifty buildings have been commenced this season, and several manufacturing establishments have been erected, and all the new buildings have been occupied as fast as erected. The other boroughs are also rapidly increasing in extent and population, and property is fast rising in value. The population of the Second ward, Allegheny, is 5,628. In 1850 it was 3,583—an increase of over 2,000, or about 60 per cent.

LAWRENCE COUNTY.—The Coal City Chronicle says: "John Ferguson, Esq., president of the Bank of Lawrence County, and formerly a banker on his own account, lodged an information on Wednesday last, upon which a warrant had in a few hours issued, against ex-Commissioner Marmadukes Wilson, of Wilmington, this county, charging Mr. Wilson with having forged the name of his brother-in-law, Ritzner Gibson, as endorser for the payment of the sum of $1,000, by Wilson & McKinley. Mr. Wilson disposed of the note, it appears, to Mr. Ferguson, for value received, some time in May or June, 1859. He has not been heard of for several days, although the most anxious inquiries have been made for him by Officer Cook."

GREENE COUNTY.—The Senatorial conferees representing the counties of Greene and Washington met in Prosperity on last Thursday, and after due deliberation nominated, with perfect unanimity, George V. Lawrence, of Washington county, for the State Senate. Mr. Lawrence has served his county two or three terms in the State Legislature, and proved a diligent and efficient legislator.

There is cheering news of good crops in almost all parts of the county. In fact, a few over-grumbling farmers in this community are already deploring the prospect of such an abundance as will reduce prices to a ruinously low rate.

LUZERNE COUNTY.—SINGULAR CASE.—A man named Solomon Hamburger, a citizen of Wilkesbarre, was bitten in the hand by a dog, about four weeks ago, and the wound giving him but little pain, apparently healed in a few days. About a week ago he took some meat home, and while cutting it with a butcher knife felt what seemed but a slight wound on the same hand, the whole arm in a few days becoming very painful, and after intense suffering he died on the 14th inst. Whether his melancholy death was caused by the virus generated by the bite of the hound is not known. At all events, the dog has evinced no signs of hydrophobia.

CENTRE COUNTY.—A melancholy accident happened during the latter part of last week, which resulted in the death of a young man named James Leathers, whose father lives in Mechanicsville this county. This young man has been engaged in boating for some time, and, while on his homeward trip, the tiller of the boat caught one of the sills of a low bridge across the canal, at Lock Haven, and tore it away from its foundation, and the falling of the timber crushed him to death. His remains were deposited in the family burying ground, on Sunday, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

MONROE COUNTY.—SAD ACCIDENT.—On Friday morning, 13th inst., Frederick Hammond came to his death in the following melancholy manner: His horses took affright, and in endeavoring to stop them he was struck by some portion of the wagon and instantly killed. The deceased was about fifteen years of age, a nephew of Mr. John Bonshoeff, of New York city, and resided at Goose Pond, in this county. He was killed about one mile south of the latter place. His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. McFarland, of Philadelphia, on Sunday, the 15th.

THE HARVEST.—The farmers in this vicinity are busy in cutting and housing the wheat crop, which is likely to prove this year an excellent yield. The weather has been very favorable for securing the crop in the best possible condition, and we can now safely look forward to a very considerable overplus of breadstuffs above home consumption, and to an era of cheaper and better bread and more money. Throughout the State, as well as the whole country, the reports of the crops are highly favorable.

MONTOUR COUNTY.—FATAL AT LAST.—Frank Ir Fenstermacher, of Reach township, who recently had his left foot severed by a mower to such an extent that amputation was deemed necessary, has since died with the lockjaw. He was buried in the Presbyterian grave yard, at Danville, on Sunday morning last. His remains were followed to their final resting place by a large concourse of relatives and sympathizing friends.

The Altoona Tribune says the population of that place proper, is 5,000; but that, if the adjoining village of Loudonsville and other places contiguous be included, it would be much nearer 6,000. No doubt; and if we were to include Gaysport, Duncansville, Frankstown, Williamsburg, Martinsburg, and other places outside of our borough limits, our population would reach 10,000, more or less.—Standard (Hollidaysburg) 25th.

INDIANA COUNTY.—FATAL MISTAKE.—On the 11th inst. Mrs. John Myers, of Rayne township, who had been in delicate health for some time previous, went out to gather a plant of which she intended to make tea; but mistook some other vegetable for the plant she wished, and boiling the mess a decoction, which she drank. It unfortunately proved poisonous, and caused her death.

LEHIGH COUNTY.—PATENT.—A patent has been granted to Charles Rose, of Allentown, for an improved device for straining scrull saws. It consists of a combination of a lever, link, hook, thumb, and noddle iron, in compact shape, and attachable to any machine whereby saws of scroll sawing machines are conveniently connected and disconnected, and strained up in the gate.

INDIANA COUNTY.—A valuable iron-ore bed was discovered by Captain John Peters, last week, on the Conemaugh, near Blairsville.

IMPORTANT DECISION AS TO ENDORSEMENTS BY A CASHIER.—The Cincinnati Gazette calls attention to an important decision by Judge Lowe, of the United States District Court of Ohio (concurred in by Judge McLean.) The Chillicothe branch of the State Bank of Ohio sent $30,000 in commercial bills to Ludlow, cashier of the Ohio Life and Trust Company Bank, at New York, for collection. Ludlow, instead of holding the paper until maturity, as was his duty, sold it and used the proceeds. Before the bills fell due, the Trust Company failed, and subsequently the holders of the paper, who bought it of Ludlow, sued the Chillicothe Bank as endorsers, the makers of the bills having been enjoined by the Ohio Bank from paying the same. The bills were endorsed by the cashier of the Chillicothe Bank, "Credit my account, J. B. Scott, Cashier." Yet the court decided was sufficient notice to third parties that Ludlow had no authority to negotiate the paper, and upon this ground the plaintiffs were non-suited. Had it been endorsed in the usual way as negotiated paper, the defendants would have lost their case. Mr. Scott's caution in this particular saved his bank $50,000, and the establishment of the principle may prevent in the future a great deal of roguery similar to that practised by the bold and reckless Ludlow.

The Taunton Gazette relates a ludicrous disappointment in a "love affair," which has offered an unfeeling topic to the gossips of a neighboring village. It appears that a moneyed old bachelor of sixty, who as heart had hitherto proved invulnerable to the shafts of Cupid's arrows, at length surrendered to the fascinating charms of a young and penniless girl, scarcely out of her teens. The damsel's parents smiled approval, and Cupid's bark floated gally on with its loving inmates, the fair Cinderella meantime appearing in silks and jewelry, and her fond lover exchanging his shaked cotton and cowhide boots for unexceptionable linen and French calf. The affair had assumed the importance of a nine days wonder, when it was discovered, that the fickle damsel had suddenly taken passage for New York on a bridal tour with a young gentleman of a neighboring city, to whom she represented her veteran adorer as her wealthy and indulgent father. Here was a denouement dreamed of by nobody. The father and fatherly lover have served in pursuit of the deceitful damsel; but, as chains of silver and fetters of gold could not hold her, love at threescore may as well hang his harp on the willows.

ALABAMA CORN CROP.—The Montgomery (Ala.) Mail, of the 17th, says: "Yesterday we were conversing with an esteemed and very intelligent friend, who has a good knowledge of the country northeast of this. His representations of the miserable prospects of the corn crop—or, rather, the crop that should be growing—and the heavy indebtedness of the people already incurred for breadstuffs, are very disheartening indeed. We are satisfied, from reliable sources, that the crop of eastern Alabama and western Georgia will fall far short of the needs of home consumers; and if there should not be a heavy crop in south Alabama, backed by low prices in the West, there cannot but be immense suffering for the 'staff of life.' In all probability, corn will reach $2 by next Christmas, with little money in the market to purchase."

THE other day a young man, having fallen in love with a damsel residing in Boyd Oak, Michigan, and finding some difficulty in obtaining the favorable countenance of the father, eloped with her, making his way to Detroit, and taking passage on a steamboat for his future home. Just as the boat was about to start, the infuriated father rushed on board and proceeded to threaten the abductor of his daughter with a caning. Blinded by his passion, he did not remark that the plank had been hauled ashore, and he was accordingly carried off, thus presenting the unique spectacle of a family elopement. It is understood that the father was induced to give away his child with a good grace, in consideration of which he was paid his return passage money by the son-in-law.

THE German papers relate that recently there arrived at one of the first hotels of Berlin a most elegant traveller, fresh from California. After affecting for half an hour or so the most aristocratic of airs, and altogether behaving like a Rosalind beguiled with thousands of serfs trembling at his back, he disclosed himself to the wondering waiters as one of their former co-operators in the service of the establishment. A few years ago he had been "boots" at the hotel. He had left for California, and come back as the millionaire that he pretends to be, or at least with money enough to pay his bill handsomely.

The Spirits in London.

[From the London Spiritualist Magazine.]

Mingling with those interested in witnessing evidences of spirit power, I gladly accepted an invitation to meet a few friends on Monday, the 7th of May, 1860, at a house in the West End. At a quarter after eight o'clock, we went into the adjoining back drawing-room, and sat down at a loo table. There were nine of us—Mr. Hume being one of the number. Immediately, the table commenced vibrating and gently lifting itself off the floor. I say lifting itself, because no human beings in human clay were the actors. Nothing occurred for a few minutes, during which conversation was kept up, and then the table gradually rose up off the floor about four feet, or rather more than a foot beyond our outstretched arms, the hands of which had rested gently on the table before its ascent. It then descended.

The accordeon was asked for by the raps. Mr. Hume took it in his right hand, by the rim at the bottom of the instrument, leaving his left hand on the table, and then were played some beautiful voluntaries, exquisitely attenuated, yet clear and melodious. They then came out, gradually fuller, and yet more full, till the room seemed filled with the volume of sound like a pealing organ; still no false note. A friend sitting next me, forgetting himself, exclaimed, "My God, how wonderful!" and, after a breath, asked "If they would give us some air, we know?" and having asked for "God save the Queen," it was played at once.

A lady present, whose little boy had recently died, had indications of her son being in the room; and the accordeon commenced playing a well-known air, which on earth the little boy was very fond of, as tallying with his mamma's name. Reader, was not there a truth of light and love in the incident? The mother thought so, and her tears betrayed her thoughts.

The detonations on the table, and sometimes under my hands, were as sharp, and as clear, and as loud, as if struck vigorously with the edge of a penny-piece.

It was then rapped out by the sounds—"Go to the window;" we rose and moved the loo table to about eighteen inches from the window (may in passing state that the room was about thirty-seven feet long by about twenty-five wide, and about fifteen to the ceiling, bountifully supplied with the usual drawing-room furniture. We sat down again, but more closely, so as to allow a vacant space at the side of the table opposite the window. The sounds then gave out—"Put out the lights," which was done. We found that though the room was dark, yet the light from the window was sufficient for us to faintly see each other. The window blind then commenced moving up and down—no one near it—evidently to tone the light; and while we were remarking the singularity of the phenomenon, and how high it went, all looking at it—suddenly it sprang up to the top, and then came gently down to its original position.

Mr. Humo felt something on his head, and found it was a leaf. Suddenly the leaf of a geranium was taken and dropped into the lap of a lady sitting at the table. We heard the snap, as if breaking off the stem of a flower, and immediately came down past the left ear of my friend, and on to his knee, a sprig of geranium; while he held it up for us to see, I expressed a wished to have one, when a sprig came past my right ear on to my knee. I picked it up, and while showing it, another came past my face, as if from the ceiling. The geranium plant was in the room several feet from any of us, and the sprigs came down both on the right and left of me.

After a pause, Mr. Hume said he felt as if he were about to be lifted up; he moved from the table, and shortly he said "I am rising"—but we could not see him—"they have put me on my back." I asked, "Will you kindly bring him, as much as possible, towards the window, so we may see him?" and at once he was floated with his feet horizontally into the light of the window, so that we all saw his feet and a part of his legs resting or floating on the air like a feather, about six feet from the ground, and three feet above the height of the table. He was then floated into the dark, and he exclaimed, "They have turned me round, and I am coming toward you." I then saw his head and face, the same height as before, and as if floating on air instead of water. He then floated back, and came down and walked up to and sat on the edge of the table we were at, when the table began to rise with him on it.

He asked a lady to sit on the table, and perhaps the spirits would take them both up; the table moved a little, and then was still. Mr. Hume was then taken behind to the settee near to me; and, while there, we heard sounds several times as of some one giving utterance to a monosyllable in the middle of the room. Feeling a pressure against my chair, I looked and saw that the other gentleman had been brought along the floor about six feet, no one touching it, and close to Mr. Hume. He said, "I suppose it is for me to rest on." He lay down, and the ottoman went back to its original position. "Oh! I am getting excited, some one come and sit with me." I went and sat beside him; he took my hands; and in about a minute, and without any muscular action, he gently floated away from me, and was lost in the darkness. He kept talking to let us know where he was.

We heard his voice in various parts of the further end of the room, as if near the ceiling. He then cried out, "Oh! they have brought me a cushion to sit upon—I am sitting on it—they are taking it away." Just then the tassel of the cushion of another ottoman in the room struck me on my hair and forehead, as if coming from the ceiling, and the cushion was deposited at my feet on the floor, falling as if a snow flake. I then saw the shadow of his body on the mirror as he floated along near the ceiling. He said, "I wish I had a pencil to make a mark on the ceiling. I have made a cross with my nail." He came down near the door, and after a pause he was again taken up; but I did not see him, but heard his voice as if near the ceiling. Again he came down, and shortly returned to the table we were at, and the sounds on the table bade us "Good night."

NOTICES.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 17, 1860.

PHILADELPHIA LETTER BAGS.—Agreeably to the authority conferred by the 10th section of the act of Congress of 1st March, 1859, entitled "An act to reduce and modify the rates of postage in the United States, and for other purposes," it is hereby Ordered, That all the avenues, streets, lanes, alleys, courts, and places, in the compact part of the City of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, lying within the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth Seventh, Eighteenth, and Twentieth wards of said city, and that part of the Twenty-fourth ward not included within the limits of Bushey and Kinnazzaink Post Offices, be, and they are hereby, established as post roads. This order to take effect 1st August, 1860.

(Signed,)

J. HOLT, Postmaster General.

POST OFFICE, PHILADELPHIA, PENNA., July 26, 1860.

The above Order is published under instructions from the Post Office Department, for the information of all concerned.

The Act of Congress of 15th June, 1860, having limited the carrier fee to the delivery of letters to one cent, it has become necessary for the Department, in order to sustain the carrier system, to take charge of the whole business of letter carrying in this city.

Therefore, in promulgating the above order of the Postmaster General, I am instructed by the Department to state that it is his determination rigidly to enforce the laws against any and all private carriers or expressmen in and adjacent to this city, from and after the 1st day of August next.

jy30-1mwtuul N. S. BROWN, Postmaster.

NOTICE TO BUILDERS.—The Board of Commissioners under an act of Assembly entitled "An act providing for the erection of Public Buildings in the City of Philadelphia," approved April 8, 1860, hereby invite plans and estimates of cost for the building proposed to be erected. These buildings are designed for the accommodation of the courts of justice, and their appropriate offices, and the several offices of record of the county, and also for the accommodation of the several departments and officers of the municipal government of the city of Philadelphia.

They are to be placed on Penn Square; the buildings for the courts, &c., on the northwestern section, and those for the municipal government on the northeastern section of said Square.

A statement in detail, of the extent of accommodation required for the respective departments and offices to be located in these buildings has been printed, and may be obtained on request; plans are hereby received for copies to any of the Board of Commissioners.

Ground plans, sections, elevations, and perspective views of each building will be requisite, accompanied with clear and full explanations

The estimates are to be accompanied by complete specifications, and with explanations of the whole so clear, concise, and full that they may be readily comprehended by persons not specially instructed in architecture.

The said plans, estimates, and specifications to be directed to the President of the Board, and furnished before the first day of September, A. D. 1860.

Each person submitting a plan must indicate the materials to be employed in constructing the buildings under his plan.

No compensation will be awarded or paid by the Commissioners for the plans to be submitted, as any by invited, until the means of carrying the said act of Assembly into effect shall be provided, in accordance with its terms.

ALEXANDER HENRY, President.
JAMES R. LUDLOW, Secretary.

FAIRFIELD SEMINARY.—This large and flourishing institution is located at Fairfield, Herkimer county, N. Y. The faculty consists of twelve thoroughly and experienced teachers, four of whom are College graduates. The libraries number over 3,000 volumes. The cabinet, philosophical, and chemical apparatus are extensive and complete. There are two regular graduating courses of study—one of three years, and one of five, and also a commercial course. Upon the completion of either, parchment diplomas are conferred, and, if possible, positions secured. Schools desirous of well qualified and excellent female teachers, whose ability and success will be unsurpassed, can procure them by addressing the principal. Fall term commences August 22d.

Tuition from $4 to $6 per term of fourteen weeks. Board washing, and room rent (furnished room) per term, $27 50. For catalogues, or to secure rooms, address
