PREPARED GLUE.
SPALDING'S
PREPARED GLUE!
"A STITCH IN TIME SAVES NINE."
ECONOMY! SAVE THE PIECES! DISPATCH!
As accidents will happen, even in well regulated families it is very desirable to have some cheap and convenient way for repairing Furniture, Toys, Crockery, &c.
SPALDING'S PREPARED GLUE
meets all such emergencies, and no household can afford to be without it. It is always ready and up to the sticking point. There is no longer a necessity for limping chairs, splinteredveneers, headless dolls, and broken crockery.
It is just the article for china, shell, and other ornamental work, so popular with ladies of refinement and taste.
This admirable preparation is used cold, being chemically held in solution, and possessing all the valuable qualities of the best of animal glues. It may be used in the place of ordinary mucilage, being vastly more adhesive.
"USEFUL IN EVERY HOUSE."
N. B. A brush accompanies each bottle.
PRICE TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
Wholesale Depot, No. 48 CEDAR Street, New York.

Lord Renfrew's suite, as it is called, consists of his tutor, the Hon. Major General Bruce, who resides with him at Oxford, and has him completely in charge; also of the Duke of Newcastle, Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, and of Earl St. Germans, Lord Steward of Queen Victoria's Household. During part of Lord Renfrew's tour in Canada and the West, he was occasionally accompanied by the Marquis and Marchioness of Chandos, and by Viscount Hinchenbroke, but these visited this country on their own account.

The visit of the Prince of Wales to British North America being, in a manner, a State affair, it was considered proper that he should be accompanied by the Colonial Secretary. The Duke of Newcastle, who now holds that office, was born May 22, 1811; was married to Lady Susan Harriet Hamilton-Douglas, only daughter of the late Duke of Hamilton, and divorced from her in 1850, after they had four sons and a daughter; and succeeded his father, the fourth Duke, in January, 1851. For several years before that event, he bore the courtesy title of Earl of Lincoln, and sat in the House of Commons, first for South Nottinghamshire, until 1846, when he vacated his seat by acceptance of the Chief Secretaryship for Ireland, under Sir Robert Peel's second Administration. The late Duke, his father, a Tory of unbending principle and obstinacy, who had never forgiven Peel for granting Catholic Emancipation in 1829, was greatly irritated at his eldest son's joining his banner when "Free Trade" was inscribed upon it. When Lord Lincoln went down to his native county, for re-election, he was met by a letter (dated February 17, 1846,) from his own father, addressed to the inhabitants of South Nottinghamshire, in which he strongly urged them to reject his son [the Earl of Lincoln] because he was going against Protection to Agriculture. A contest ensued, and a Mr. Hildyard was returned. Immediately after, through the influence of the Duke of Hamilton, his father-in-law, Lord Lincoln was elected from the Falkish district of burghs, in Scotland, and continued to sit for them until he went into the House of Lords, in 1851, as 5th Duke of Newcastle.

He was educated at Oxford, where Peel and Gladstone also eminently distinguished themselves. Entering Parliament in 1832, as a Tory, immediately after the passing of the Reform Bill, Lord Lincoln naturally attached himself to Sir Robert Peel, the Conservative leader. In December 1834 when Peel accepted the Premiership out of which he was driven in the following April, he made Lord Lincoln, then only in his twenty-fourth year, a Lord of the Treasury. Peel returned to office in the autumn of 1841, and appointed Lord Lincoln to the Chief Commissionership of Woods and Forests, the salary of which is $10,000 a year, frequently with a seat in the Cabinet. His subsequent appointments were Irish Secretary, then $27,500 a year, from February to July, 1846; Secretary of State for War and Colonies, $25,000, in the Earl of Aberdeen's Administration, from December 1852, until the offices were divided, in 1854, when he took the War Department, which he resigned in 1855, in consequence of popular clamor on account of the bad equipment of the army, during the Crimean War, which it was alleged, he should have provided against. In June, 1859, when Lord Palmerston resumed the principal administration of public affairs in England, he replaced the Duke of Newcastle in office as Colonial Secretary, salary $25,000 a year.

Well born, wealthy, highly educated, and in succession to one of the highest titles of nobility in England, (for though the Dukedom of Newcastle was created, by George II, so recently as 1756, the Earldom was granted by Elizabeth, in 1572, and the extinct Barony of Clinton was created by Edward III, in 1367,) Lord Lincoln entered public life with unusual advantages. Under the absurd practice which admits future members of the peerage to sit in the House of Commons, he was a member of Parliament at the age of twenty-one. In those days, too, he was considered very well-looking, and Peel, who never brought forward a dull man, early gave him reputation and prestige by giving him office before he was twenty-four years old. Subsequently Lord Lincoln showed considerable administrative power in higher offices—he has twice been a Cabinet-Minister—and though he never had the name of being eloquent, speaks with considerable ease. His defence of himself, when he resigned the War Secretaryship, in 1855, was that of a man unjustly held responsible for the faults of a system which he had no power to change, and showed that he could be an orator, had he a stirring theme upon which to speak. From 1846 to 1851, the last five years of his House of Commons' life, and before he succeeded to the Dukedom, he served on several Parliamentary Committees, and showed great diligence as a shrewd and practical business man, and considerable tact in examining witnesses. He possesses vast estates, chiefly in Nottinghamshire, and has a great influence, as landlord, in the boroughs of Nottingham and Newark. His father, when taunted with compelling his tenants to vote as he wished, uttered the remarkable reply, perverting the meaning of the text, "Cannot I do what I please with mine own?" The first Duke of Newcastle (of the present line) was Prime Minister under George II. and III., and was excessively incompetent. His ignorance was great. At one time, while he was in office, Lord Ligonier having suggested to him the propriety of defending Annapolis, he replied, "To be sure: Annapolis ought to be protected. Oh! yes—Annapolis shall be defended! Where is Annapolis?" This reminds one of the old lady who exclaimed, when her son read a newspaper paragraph commencing—The Dutch have taken umbrage, "Dear me! Taken Umbrage! At this rate, we soon won't have a town left!

The Earl of St. Germans, now Lord Steward of Queen Victoria's Household, with a salary of $10,000 a year, has filled much higher offices, and, indeed, is a man of considerable ability. His titles are comparatively new, but he represents an old family in Cornwall, where his extensive estates are, Port Eliot, near St. Germans. One of his ancestors, Sir John Eliot, distinguished himself in the time of Charles I., as one of the managers appointed by the House of Commons to manage the impeachment of the Duke of Buckingham. For this and his subsequent opposition to the Court he was fined and confined, and died in the Tower, a State prisoner, in July 1632. One of his descendants, then M. P. for the County of Cornwall, and a staunch supporter of Mr. Pitt, was by him called to the Upper House, in 1784, as Baron Eliot, St. Germans, Cornwall, and his son again, the Second Baron, was created Earl St. Germans, in 1815. The gentleman now with Lord Renfrew is third Earl.

He was born in 1796, and is nearly connected, through his mother, with Mrs. Stowe's and the Black Swan's Duchess of Sutherland. He was some time attaché at the Hague, and subsequently Secretary of Legation at Lisbon, in 1824. After this, he entered the House of Commons, with the courtesy-title of Lord Eliot; was a Lord of the Treasury, successively under Canning, Lord Goderich, and "the Duke," from April, 1827, to November, 1832; Secretary of Legation at Madrid, in 1833, and Ambassador to Spain in 1834-5; concluded the "Eliot Convention," respecting the treatment of prisoners during the Spanish civil war
