REPITTING AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

BY THE BARD OF TOWER HALL.

The mansion of the President,
Where "Honest Abe" is resident,
Has just been decked out newly:
The satin hangings, golden trimmed,
And pictures, by great artists limned,
Look most palatial truly.

Curtains of lace, from Switzer looms,
And carpets whereon gaily blooms
Full many a gorgeous flower;
Gilt cornices that sunlight shame,
And more fine things than I could name
Half over in an hour.

And much that has this splendor wrought
From Philadelphia was brought,
And in this city made.
By Philadelphia skill and taste
The various ornaments were placed,
And gloriously displayed.

And every Philadelphian, who
In Washington has aught to do,
Will certainly take care
To show himself at the levee
In one of Bennett's suits, that he
May do us credit there.
