I shall spread the manure on the surface, harrow thoroughly so as to mix it with the soil, then plow it under and drill in the mangles on the

Orchard and Nursery.

Nurserymen will soon commence to send out stock, and all who have to procure their trees from a distance ought to send their orders at once. If delayed until the trees are wanted, the stock of many of the best varieties will often be exhausted. When the trees arrive unpack at once, and if the ground is not prepared for planting out, heel in in a dry spot until needed. When ready to plant the tops should be cut back at least one-third, and the branches shortened, to compensate for the loss of roots in removing from the nursery. If any shriveled trees are found to bury the whole tree in the ground for a few days, and the the bark will usually assume its plump condition.

Girdled trees should be treated as recommended last month. Cherry and plum trees should be grafted earlier than apple and pear trees.

Continue to prune while vegetation is dormant, taking care to cover all large cuts with melted grafting-wax, shellac, varnish or paint. A good mixture for grafting-wax is with three parts beeswax, three parts rosin, and two parts tallow; melt and mix the whole well together.

Safe Cattle Tie.

A tie that is as safe as probably any tie can be made is one that we have used for cattle, both oxen and cows, for several years without any accident or mishap whatever. A ring or eye-bolt is securely fastened in the side of the stall above the level of the feed trough. Through this ring the rope is passed. One end of the rope is passed through One end of the rope is passed through a block of wood and knotted so that it can not be drawn out. The end hangs down below the ring. When the cattle are up the slock of the tie is drawn down by the weight of the wooden block, making it impossible for the animal to get its foot over it. When they are lying down the block is drawn upwards, but still keeps the rope safely out of the way. We have found this tie equally useful for horses.

With the return of spring comes the usual inquiries for a good whitewash. We have only to repeat the following directions given below, as follows: Take half a bushel of unslacked lime, slake it with boiling water, covering it during the process to keep in the steam; strain liquid through a fine sieve or strainer, and add to it a peck of salt previously well dissolved in water : hree pounds ground rice boiled to a thin paste, and stirred in boiling hot; half a pound Spanish whiting, and a pound of clean glue which has been previously dissolved by soaking it first, and then hanging over a slow fire in a small kettle inside a large one filled below him there was a murmur of with water; add five gallons of hot pathy in the immense crowd. water to the mixture, stir it well, and let it stand a few days covered from the and again fight the current, but seemed for this purpose it can be kept in a ket-tle on a furnace. Seventeen Cattle in the River—Men Drive them Over the Brink-A Bullock that Eclipsed Sam Patch. There occurred at the falls of the Gene see, says the Rochester, N. Y. Democrat, an incident which probably stands without a parallel. Shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon, a heavy freight train, whose cars were filled with western atthe. with western cattle destined to supply the butchers of New York and elsewas seen to bounce along in a very ir-regular manner. A rapid glance dis-closed the fact that a flange of one of its wheels was broken. Just as it passed upon the bridge it left the track and bounced along in a startling way until it reached the centre, when it broke down the railing along the side and plunged into the water below. The car short time. The frightened animals then crowded out into the stream. The river at this point is from three to four feet deep, the current is very strong, and the animals were badly bruised, several had been cut and were bleeding. Two or three had their horns broken. One poor thing floated hopeeasly down the stream and over the falls, and it is supposed that one of its legs had been broken by the accident. Besides this one, four others floated over the precipice and were engulfed in the foaming waters below. The re-maining twelve were crowded together just below the bridge. Depot master Knapp deeming it best for the railroad company that the cattle should be sold for whatever they would bring, quickly announced his determination to dispose of them. The entire seven-teen were sold on the spot for $250. The purchasers procured a number of ropes and attached one to each of the cows. A consultation was held among those present, and it was finally determined to draw each animal to the east side of the river, where the current is very strong, and let them be carried over the falls, it being well known that if they went over at the east side the whirlpool would throw the carcasses upon the shore, where they could be easily secured.

Everything having been prepared, one of the cattle was led, by means of the rope around its horns, along toward the east shore, until the current caught and swept it over the falls. It was indeed a pitiful sight to see the poor beast struggle against the current in its attempts to avoid the fall, but it slip-ped and went over. It had no strength to struggle with, in fact, for it had stood in cold water until it had chilled its blood. Then another and another was led along and sent over until the last one had passed from sight.

Below the falls a strange sight pre-sented itself. Of the first five animals which passed over, two escaped alive, the carcasses of the two others floated to shore, while the other two passed down the stream. These drew a motley crowd to the place. As the twelve steers were drawn into the current, they struggled very hard to avoid their fate, but all to no purpose. As they passed over the precipice, the eyes of the spectators could be seen turned their reappearance. with cheers; the animal was then taken out and led away. If the carcass appeared it was drawn ashore, and quickly subjected to the butcher's instruments. Out of the seventeen, five alone were saved, the remainder having been killed by the fall.

There were some curious incidents onnected with the event which deserve mention. Foremost among these was the action of one noble animal, which to breast the current, but slipped and cial gatherings, being admirably quali-was on the very edge of the precipice fied for the control of such assemblies. when he regained his footing. When he had gone upward about fifteen feet he again slipped and was carried back to the edge. He stood there in bold relief for some time, a noble-looking, large

The Late Ex-President Fillmore.

With the death of Mr. Fillmore an other of the few prominent survivors of the stormy period of our politics pre-ceding the war passes away. Millard Fillmore was born at Summer Hill, Cayuga County, N. Y., January 7, 1800. His ancestors were of English origin, but his great-grandfather, John Fill-more, from whom all of the name in the United States are descended, was born about the year 1702, in Ipswich, Mass., and was the hero of a remarkable adwhere, passed through the depot. One car containing seventeen head of cattle tured by pirates and kept for nine months upon their vessel, he, with two other captives, made an attack upon his captors, killed several, and eventually gaining possession of the ship, brought it into Boston harbor, where the surviving pirates were tried and executed. The grandfather of Millard fought as a lieutenant under Gen. Stark in the battle of Bennington; his father, an early turned as it fell and lay upon its side pioneer from New England to Western in the stream. It had been somewhat shattered, but not enough to allow the when it was yet a mere wilderness, and pioneer from New England to Western frightened animals to pass out. A party of railroad men lewered themselves to the car and wrecked it in a prenticed to learn the clothier's trade, but while thus engaged he was a dili gent reader in the village library, storing his mind from books of history, biography, and travel. Judge Wood, of Cayuga County, perceived the ca-pacity of the youth of 19, gave him a place in his law office, advanced the means for his necessary expenses, and enabled him to begin a course of study. To repay the small sums thus advanced, Fillmore taught school in the winter months; and it is related that out of $36 received for an entire season's teaching, he received but $6 for himself and applied the remainder to these obligations. In the fall of 1821 he removed to the County of Erie, and the next spring entered a law office at Bufwhere he sustained himself by teaching, and was admitted to the bar in 1823, beginning practice at Aurora in the same county. In 1826 he married Abigail, daughter of the Rev.

term he renewed the practice of his profession till the fall of 1836, when he was re-elected to Congress. He also served in the Twenty-seventh Congress, and there obtained the responsible position of Chairman of the Committee of Ways and Means,

In the Whig National Convention of May 1, 1844, Mr. Fillmore was a candidate for the nomination for Vice-President; in the fall of the same year he received the Whig nomination for Governor of New York, but was defeated by Silas Wright. In 1847 he was elected Comptroller of New York. The triumph of our arms in Mexico made 1876. Zachary Taylor the most available man in the nation to lead the Presidential ticket, and at the Whig National Convention of that year Taylor and Fill-more became the candidates, and were elected.
