THE SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. FRANCIS J. GRUND.—The community was shocked, yesterday morning, upon the announcement of the death of this gentleman, who had so recently left the Democratic party to espouse the cause of the Union. Mr. Grund had delivered a beautiful and patriotic address on Monday night, at the Union League House, on Chestnut street, and while the Union masses of Philadelphia were congratulating themselves upon so valuable an acquisition to their holy cause, it is no wonder that the sad tidings of his death shocked them to their very hearts yesterday. The circumstances attending his death are peculiar; some of them fell under our immediate notice.

A serenade was suddenly improvised for General McClellan, who had arrived in this city at 6 o'clock on Tuesday evening. The General had gone to the residence of his mother, on Spruce street between Nineteenth and Twentieth. A few minutes before 11 o'clock, the serenaders, to the number of perhaps a thousand, with the Philadelphia Band at their head, passed up Chestnut street, thence to Spruce, and thence westward to the residence of Mrs. McClellan.

About half a square in advance of the procession there was a crowd of from two to three hundred, who moved along in mob form, crowing, and making night hideous with their caterwaulings. One could very well suppose that "hell had broken loose, and all the fiends were here." This crowd, on reaching Spruce street, suddenly gave many yells, and made a grand rush to the door steps of the houses, got on them, while others stood scattering over the street in front thereof. Quite a number of them struck matches, and by the light thereof examined door-plates and bell knobs, to ascertain who lived in the houses. We infer this from the fact that the crowd seemed to be anxious or uneasy, and several exclaimed, "Where does he live? What house does he live in?"

Thus things remained until the band at the head of the procession reached Spruce street. The procession did not stop, but kept on at a moderate pace. Many were walking in the street between the curb-stones. The music at this time had ceased. From the general appearance of the entire scene, a stranger would very readily have supposed that a tremendous riot was about to be inaugurated. As the band moved on westward, the advance crowd that had congregated on door-steps and along the fronts of houses gave a mighty yell, much louder than before, and then went pell-mell on a grand rush up the street. We never saw such a demonstration as preliminary to a serenade of anybody.

This was about fifteen minutes before eleven o'clock. Within two or three minutes of eleven o'clock, Mr. Grund arrived at the Chestnut street station house, on Fifteenth street, below Walnut, being about four squares from his residence; showing that from the time he took the first mode its appearance on Spruce street, less than fifteen had elapsed by the time he reached the station for assistance. He had retired for the night, and therefore, in this short space of time, had dressed himself and gained the station house. For the more interesting circumstances attending his death we present the statement of Sergeant Britton, of the police division of the district.

SERGEANT BRITTON'S STATEMENT.

I was lying down on a settee in the local tele graph room, when a man came hurriedly into the main room, where prisoners are generally first taken; he made such a noise that I thought some officer was bringing in a drunken man, and therefore paid no particular attention to it at the moment and lay still; the man seated himself on a settee, in the south side of the room, and, as I learned from Mr. Hall, the turnkey, got up again and crossed the room and took a seat on the north side; heard him say "I am sick; they are mobbing my house." Mr. Miller, the night telegraph operator, was present; we removed the vest of the stranger, and partly unbuttoned his pantaloons. I asked him if he was subject to heart disease, and he replied, "No; I have a very bad cold; won't you send for a surgeon? I must be bled; I am dying." Immediately hastened to Dr. Dutton's residence, southeast of Fifteenth and Walnut streets; he had just entered his house. I told him that a man was dying at the station house, and asked him to go at once. As I was returning to the station-house, I met Mr. Miller, who told me the stranger was bleeding from the mouth; while I was absent he had fallen off on the floor. We picked him up, and laying him on the settee, he kind of gurgled out that his name was Grundy, or some such a name as that. He asked him where he lived, and he replied, 709 Spruce street. He was as near as we could make out. I immediately despatched Officer McIntyre to hunt the residence; he found it; he sent for the family of the stranger, and telling him of the circumstances, he came at once with the officer to the station-house. I took the watch, eye-glass, and purse—contained little or nothing over $13—from his pockets just as the doctor arrived; I placed them on the desk; the next moment I asked the doctor to examine the things, so as to see they would be all right when the man should recover; he replied, "give yourself no uneasiness; he is dead." This occurred in presence of Officer McIntyre, was hearing the station-house; it was announced by another officer that the "man was dead;" the son fell instantly to the floor; there was a sound disturbed the solemn stillness of the moment. Presently the voice of Union (F sharp) came from the bosom of the stream. Then a flurry of the croakers joined in, with Curtin; then the combined sounds, of Curtin, Union—Union, Curtin, and on and on, in infinitum infinite time. One old fellow, weighing a 300 pound, proclaimed his sentiments clear and bold, Man, man, man—Bill Mann, Bill Mann! then the chorus in full, of Curtin, Curtin—Union, Union.

Thus, the concert of the frogs, the very voices of the Neck, had a patriotic tone. The curtain of night, soon after this, rolled up into the broad glare of day, and all was calm and serene. The happy frogs having done their morning patriotic lay, retired to their cozy retreats, no doubt satisfied with having done a good thing.

BAR MEETING—THE LATE JUDGE ROGERS.—A meeting of the members of the bar was held in the Supreme Court room yesterday morning to testify their respect for the memory of the late Hon. Molton C. Rogers, formerly one of the judges of the Supreme Court. Feeling addresses were made by several gentlemen, and the following resolutions adopted:

Resolved, That the bar of Philadelphia, in assembling to pay the customary tribute of respect to the memory of a deceased fellow-member, recognize in the State Molton C. Rogers, formerly a judge of the highest State tribunal, a man distinguished for his great industry and energy, sound and varied legal learning, eminent ability, and unwavering integrity and honesty of purpose. He was the survivor of a court which, under a judicial system that has now passed away, acted an important part in the formation of the jurisprudence of Pennsylvania, and did much to exalt the character of the judiciary for learning and independence.

Resolved. That this bar tender to the family of Judge Rogers their sympathy in his loss, and as a mark of their respect for his character will attend his funeral in a body.

DEATHS AT ARMY HOSPITALS.—The following deaths were reported at the Medical Director's office yesterday:

Chester—E. Moore, second lieutenant, Company D, 38th North Carolina; Wm. Cauley, Company F, 59th Georgia.

Chestnut Hill—John Farren, Company C, 72d Pennsylvania, died July 7.

Chambersburg—John Govel, 3d Georgia; Christian Helprick, 5th United States Artillery.

SIGNOR BLITZ, as a ventriloquist, is original and extraordinary; his dialogues and rapid change of voices produce great wonder. The illusions he introduces in magic are equally unaccountable and pleasing. Blitz's popularity is celebrated far and near, and it affords us much pleasure to recommend his entertainments, at the Assembly Building, Tenth and Chestnut streets, as deserving the patronage of our resident citizens and strangers.

THE NATIONAL FINANCES.—The subscription agent reports the sale of $1,101,050 five-twenties on Wednesday. Deliveries of bonds are being made to Sept. 28th. The sale yesterday is the heaviest for two months, and indicates renewed interest in Government securities in all parts of the country.

FIRE.—The alarm of fire about 11 o'clock yesterday morning was caused by the burning of the roof of a couple of old shanties located in the rear of St. John street, above Front. The fire originated from the furnaces of Mr. Sparks' shot factory.

FRAUDULENT NATURALIZATION.—A Mr. Snowden was engaged in naturalizing aliens yesterday in the Supreme Court room, there being no judge upon the bench at the time.

THE POLICE.

[Before Mr. Alderman Dougherty.]

Disorderly House.

Samuel and Ann Lovett were arraigned yesterday morning on the charge of keeping a disorderly house at No. 3 Cromley's court, in the Sixth ward. Five persons, of both sexes, who were found within the house, were bound over to keep the peace. The accused keepers were required to enter bail, in the sum of $800 each, to answer at court.

Scarce.

Police items were exceedingly dull yesterday. There was not a single case of any moment heard at the Central Station.

LEGAL INTELLIGENCE.

Court of Oyer and Terminer and Quarter Sessions—Judge Ludlow.

FEBRUARY CASE.

John Bond was acquitted yesterday of a charge of perjury. It was alleged for the prosecution that in the trial of a feigned issue, in the District Court, he had sworn falsely as to the ownership of certain cattle levied on by the sheriff under an execution. The defence set up that the statement of the circumstances attending the sale and purchase of the cattle were calculated to produce the belief that the cattle really belonged to the defendant in the execution and not to the claimant; and that the claimant himself had admitted that the defendant on the execution had an interest in them. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty. John Goforth, Esq., for prosecution; Daniel Dougherty, Esq., for defence.

The other courts in session were principally engaged in conferring naturalization upon a number of applicants.
