Colds.-Hot lemonade is one of the best remedies in the world for a cold It acts promptly and effectively, and has no unpleasant after effects. One emon properly squeezad, cut in slices put with sugar, and covered with half a pint of boiling water. Drink just before going to bed, and do not expose yourself on the following day. This remedy will ward off an attack of the chills and fever if used promptly.

THE OIL MARKET,-The market, says the Titusville Courier of the 8th inst., touched bottom on Saturday forenoon last. In the afternoon there was an unmistakably better feeling, and at the close there was a good deal of firmness at every point, with an appreciation of five cents per barrel of crude oil. The amount purchased last week was large beyond any precedent in the history of the oil trade, for the same period of time.

THE commission appointed by Gov. Hartranft to propose amendments to our Constitution, met the other day and organized. They will consider the subject proposed to them and decide in the Fall what amendment to submit to the next Legislature. The best friends of the new Constitution begin to see its defects and will be among the foremost in curing them. This movement therefore is not in hostility to this organtic law. If it is was, the high character of the Governor's commission would be a sufficient guaranty that no harm could

"BRINLEY AND 46,"-The poem "Brinley and 46" that has been so extensively copied and read, more because it had Bret Harte's name at its head, than from intrinsic merit, has turned out to be a clever sell. It first appeared in the San Francisco open letter, and its history is as follows: One of the editors of that paper made the assertion that a poem written in the style of any well-known author, no matter how absurb it might be, would be copied throughout the length and breadth of the country. The point being disputed, "Brinley and 46" was written and sent upon its travels, proving the disputed assertion. Among the absurdities of the piece is the idea of an engineer freezing to death by the side of a blazing fire

SCIENTIFIC SHOOTING .-- The Warren Mail says: Last week we recorded the result of a shooting match at Jamestown, June 3d, between the champion shot of New York, G. W. Fowler, and Horace Warner of Ridgway, They shot four strings of 10 shots each at 40 rods, $100 a string and $100 for the general average, at a rest. Warner used a rifle of his own make, and Fowler used one of Billinghurst's. Fowler won as will be seen by the following strings: Fowler-1st string, 131 inches; 2d. 134; 3d, 124; 4th, 104; general average, 50 inches; average for each

Warner-1st string, 15 inches, 2d. 191; 3d, 144; 4th, 131; general average 62# inches; average for each shot, a trifle over 11 inches.

Their style of shooting may be very scientific, but what would Robert Miles, or Orren Hook of Zack Eddy or Dave Martin or Kim Russel or other old time crack shots say to the nonsense of screwing your rifle in a vise and calling it a shooting match? Why we once made a 11 inch string 10 shots at 20 rods with a rifle belonging to one of Berdan's sharp shooters in 1861. He was from Ridgway and we are not sure but it was Warner himself, we forget the name; and we had none of your vise rests or little flags and didn't brag about it either. The Jamestown Journal describes their "new fangled notions" thus:

To a novice their style of shooting seemed a little peculiar and unscientific, but we are assured that this method requires much more judgment and skill than the old "off hand" way and glancing through the sights at each shot. Mr. Fowler's gun was placed on a sort of a stand like vise, that permitted it to move only backward and forward, to allow for the recoil. Between the rest and target were placed at intervals small flags, to indicate the force and direction of the wind. The marksman securing a time when both wind and light are favorable glances through the sights and by one or two trials gets his gun perfeetly aimed, and secures it in that position. Then his whole attention and skill is directed towards the flags, firing whenever an opportunity presents. It was here that Fowler had the advantage of Warner, for though the latter had his gun on some such a stand, he was obliged to place his eye to the sighs each time before firing. Both contest-unts departed for their homes this
