COMMERCIAL COMBINATIONS.

The Mania for Association, and What It is Doing.

It is interesting, and not a little curi-ous, says the New York Times, to notice how rapidly our people are develop-ing plans for consolidation, co-opera-tion, and combined interest. There are combinations of producers and combinations of consumers. The railroad companies make a ring to keep up rates ers make another ring to compel lower charges. Working men combine to force higher wages and fewer hours of labor; master mechanics form an association to protect themselves against what they consider to be extravagant demands. Laborers out of employment organize an industrial society to pro-duce and sell the work of their hands ; consumers associate themselves to gether to buy what they want at whole-sale prices. Exactly where this is to end none can tell. It is pretty evident

Each o gauization is taking advantage of the public necessity, and the result in each case only illustrates the general principle, which, f universally carried out, would bring is into inextricable confusion. When labor, in all its branches, is thoroughly organized on one side, capital will be as effectually associated on the other side. The producers will be opposed by the combined consumers ; the buyers will constitute one well-guarded phalanx, and the sellers will be organized into another. Society, industrial and com-mercial, will be divided into hestile camp3. Of course, there are certain laws of trade and political economy that will prevent such a disaster ; but it is only necessary to indicate the drift of things to show how false is the principle on which most of these latter-day combinations are formed. In a higher state of life than we have now, monopolies, rings, and "corners" will be im-possible. Meantime it is the duty of every honest citizen to be careful as to all such combinations. Mutual confidence is the basis of all social prosperity. It will be a bad day for all of us when we find society armed against itself and associated in cliques for aggressive purposes rather than for counsel, mutual support, and rational ezchange of opinions.

A COLLEGE PRANK.

What Came of It-The Son of a Prominent Indiana Family a Convict in a Penitentiary.

An affecting incident occurred recently in the Jeffersonville penitentiary. A lady from the central part of Indiana had accepted an invitation to take a stroll through the prison. In company with several others she was shown the various departments, and as the party proceeded, occasionally an allusion would be made by the guard to the more notable of the prisoners within the high walls.

In going through one of the rooms, a young man in full convict costume was observed standing over a box which had just been opened. One of the party re-marked that the box contained a tempting lot of cakes, jellies, and confections. Seeing the general surprise he exfrom the city in which she resided. As soon as they were taken into custody, the property stolen was given up uninjured. The trial came off at the ensuing term of the Criminal Court, and the indictments against them were all quashed, except that against their leader. The jury could, of course, return no other verdict than guilty, al-

Allow only three or four blackberry canes to grow, and pinch these off as soon as they reach a height of five or six feet, and stop the laterals when eighteen inches long. Allow the fruit to 16main on until thoroughly ripe when for family use; for marketing pick before fully ripe.

Cut out the old fruiting canes as soon as they have finished bearing, and apply a dressing of manure, forked in between the rows.

Remove the mulch from the old strawberry beds, and take out all weeds. and cut off all runners not needed for for newly plants. The best manure for newly planted beds is either woodashes, or ground bone raked in ; if stable manure is used it should be well rotted, or else it will bring in an abundance of weeds.

A sure cure for a setting hen-put her on live clams instead of eggs. As the clams begin to get warm they open their shells, and the hen don't get on that nest the second time.

To Take the Odor Out of Milk.

One of the difficulties the milkman and the cheese factory have to contend with is the "cowy" odor in freshlydrawn milk. It is worse even than the animal heat, or rather more troublesome to get rid of. It is much more perceptible in hot weather than it is in cold and varies in intensity with the health and condition of the cow. To remedy this, an inventor has contrived the following: it is a tin pail, the bottom of which is perforated with one or two rows of holes. The milk is turned through a strainer fastened over the top, and it comes out through the holes. It starts in streams, but before it gets down a foot or 15 inches it is separated into drops and all aerated. All know what a deodorizer pure air is. Almost any farmer can get up a simple arrangement which will serve the purpose very well; or, if he can't do it himself, he can go to the tinman and get him to punch holes in the bottom of a pail and punch holes in the bottom of a pail and hang it over a can or other vessel, so that in dropping down through the air it will be thoroughly aerated; but it must be in pure air. The air of a filthy cownease will not do it cow-house will not do it.

THE HAT .- There is probably nothing else on earth that will roll like a hat. A guest of wind gets under your tile, and before you realize the extent of the catastrophe, you see it striking a bee line for the nearest puddle of water, into which it settles, with an indifference that is highly exasperating. No man ever yet caught his hat until it got ready to stop, which is, when it brings up under the fence, or when he drives it into the mud with his foot.

"Lettin off sleep," is a little boy's definition of snoring.

A Poor Time to Find Them.

It is a town on a railroad running out of Detroit, and it never had a paper. A man went up there to start one. Upon his arrival he found a great absence of sidewalks, a hotel where the patrons helped themselves, and the only signs of life on the main street were a lame horse and two children playing in the road. He had been recommended to several citizens, who were anxious for the paper, and who would assist in starting it, and after searching around the hotel for a while he tound a bey mending a horse blanket in the ladies' sitting room. "Where's Mr. ---?" inquired the editor, mentioning the name of the first citzen on his list. side, and the dog-bites heal. 'Gone to the dog-fight," answered the "Same place," answered the lad. There was one more name on the paper, and the editor waited a moment and in-hack driver and began a series of moquired for its owner. "Saw him to the dog-fight," answered the boy. "See here, bub," said the irritated editor, "can you tell me if there is any resi-dent of this town who didn't go down to that dog-fight ? I've got important business with the head men, and I want to find 'em." The boy shook his head in a solemn sort of way and replied : "It's a poor time to find the head men of this town when old Mt. Clemmens sends her fighting dorg down here to head a moment, and said : " Och, and clean our prize anamul out ! You'd bet-ter call to-morrer !" it is the circus you want to go to; and bedad and why didn't you say so ?"

A Mother's Holy Love.

The excitement that existed in Phi'a delphia concerning the case of the kid-napped child, says Max Adeler, extended to all classes, and every mother in the city was for a time so wrought up upon the subject that she could hardly be induced to permit her children to go out of her sight. Gillespie lives on Tenth street, in the same row with Mrs. Maginnis. He moved in a few days ago, and Mrs. Maginnis had not had an opportunity to become ac-quainted with him. He is very nearother afternoon, he thought he saw his boy playing in the gatter, and he ap-proached the youngster with the intent o pick him up and carry him into the house. The fact, however, was that it was Mrs. Maginnis's boy, and that esti-mable woman was watching him with one eye while the other one rested upon the second story window which she was washing. When she saw Gillespie seize the child she knew at once that the kidnapper had come, and as Gillespie walked off with the booty under his arm a red-haired woman, in a condition of frantic excitement, might have been seen shooting down stairs and through the front door with the velocity of light. Gillespie discovered his mistake ust as he caught sight of the infuriated Maginnis approaching him, and, appre-hending trouble, he dropped the child and ran. By the time they had gone around the block twice, Gillespie had not only Mrs. Maginnis and six policemen at his heels, but 1,800 other people and half a hundred dogs. At last he darted up an alley and endeavored to jump over his back fence, but just as he reached the top the avenging Maginnis arrived and caught him by the legs, and before he could explain himself the policemen had hammered him considerably, and four of the dogs had bitten chops out of his legs. He is in bed yet, and will probably not be around again till the bumps on his head sub-

He knows less about the French language than he does about the man in the tions that looked very much as if he had performed the geometrical problem of squaring a circle, and was trying to demonstrate it to "cabby." He healed himself with this specific before he offered it to the world. He introduced it with a simple statement o' the manner in which he had discovered its vege table ingredients and been cured, while wandering, sick and poor, among the California tribes. He stated what the preparation had done for himself, and a few sufferers from dyspepsia, biliousness, rheumatism, lung diseases, and many other prevalent disorders, believed him, tried the new restorative and were more than satisfied with the results. In this way the sale of the Vinegar Bitters began, and we mention the fact as an evidence that in this age of intelligence and inquiry, nothing that is really valuable to mankind can prove a pecuniary failure-even though it may lack the help of capital and have to fight its way against powerful op-posing interests. Within two or three months after its introduction, the article became self-supporting, and it now yields a magnificent annual reveue.-Com.
