SENATOR WOLCOTT STICKS TO PARTY

Though a Silverite, He Will Support McKinley and Hobart.

THE SENATOR STATES HIS REASONS

Says That He Is as Ardent as Ever for Free Silver, but He Declines to Indorse the Rest of Bryan's Platform--His Statement in Full.

Denver, Col., Aug. 2.—On Thursday evening Senator E. O. Wolcott stated his political position. He is for McKinley, and he gives his reasons as follows:

"The people of Colorado are entitled to know at such a juncture as this the views of their representatives at Washington. Among the greatest privileges we enjoy under republican institutions are freedom of conscience and freedom of speech, and if I should hesitate on this or on any other occasion to declare my belief and my convictions on any public question I should despise myself even more than I despise those incendiary newspapers and hysterical individuals, who assume that threats and vituperation can choke the utterances of any self-respecting citizen of Colorado who has an opinion to express or a principle to declare.

"The silver question is most vital. International bimetallism at the former ratio would, of course, be the most desirable method of restoring silver as a money metal, because the disturbance of values which might follow the inauguration of free coinage by the United States alone would be avoided and the question as to the exportation or hoarding of gold would be eliminated. In my opinion, however, the United States alone could, under wise and conservative guidance--such guidance as should deserve and receive the confidence of all classes of our people—open its mints to the unlimited coinage of silver and successfully maintain that metal at a parity with gold, at the ratio of 16 to 1 independently of the other nations of the world. During the seven years of my public service in the senate I have always held this view; my vote on all questions affecting the currency has been identical with those of the other senators usually known as 'silver senators,' and while my utterances on the silver question may not have been as frequent or as long as those of others, I share their views nevertheless. My record on this subject is clear and consistent, and the views I hold I expect always to maintain.

DISLIKES THE GOLD PLANK.

"The financial plank of the national Republican platform is, in my opinion, far from satisfactory, and those members of the party who believe, as I believe, will struggle earnestly and hopefully for the full and complete recognition and adoption by the Republican party of the humane principle of bimetallism, animated by the belief that the party which, on every other great question involving human freedom and the welfare of mankind, has stood for all that was uplifting and ennobling, will yet realize that a continuance of the gold standard means only further impoverishment and suffering.

"The platform contains, however, a most important statement, pledging the party to the furtherance of bimetallism by international agreement. To the good faith of this pledge the history of the party on other questions requires the fullest credence. The overshadowing importance of the silver question makes it certain to my mind that every effort will be earnestly made by the Republican party to secure to this country the blessings of bimetallism, and it is my sincere conviction that silver will again be restored to its place as a money metal, at the old ratio, and that when this restoration comes it will be accomplished through the action and efforts of the Republican party.

Except on the money question,no man in Colorado who believes in the protection of American labor and American products and American industries, and who loves his country, can read the platform without hearty approval, and no man doubts that Major McKinley will bring to his high office every quality needed by a president of this great people.

REFERS TO MR. BRYAN.

"Mr. Bryan has been nominated for the presidency on three separate platforms—by the Democratic party, the Populist party and the Silver party. The last named party, the Silver party, does not deserve serious consideration. Most of its members were present at its recent convention at St. Louis, and the newspapers report the convention hall as being less than half full.

"The Democratic party nominated Mr. Bryan upon a platform, the financial portion of which was everything that could be desired, and the rest of it everything that is, in my opinion, undesirable and hostile to the interests of our country. I decline to stand upon this platform and vote for this candidate, even with the alluring free-coinage plank. I cannot do it. I am a believer in protection and shall not abandon that belief. The supreme court of the United States is a pure and able tribunal, the highest judicial tribunal in the world. I will not help smirch it. This government must be enabled to pay its running expenses, and whenever my vote is needed for that purpose and I fail to vote it supplies to keep alive, and I shall consider that I violate my oath as senator.

"The 'recent Republican congresses' have been neither wasteful nor extravagant, and I must decline to certify to a statement I know to be untrue.

"When, some months ago, the great railway strike at Chicago got beyond control, and innocent lives were being sacrificed and millions of dollars' worth of property was being destroyed by lawless men, when the sheriff was powerless and the governor failed to perform his duty, the president of the United States, with federal troops, under sanction of law, saved further bloodshed and destruction, and thereby deserved the thanks of every man who values our liberties and believes that the rights guaranteed us by the constitution ought to be sacredly guarded against every form of lawlessness.

"The recent travesty at St. Louis, the Populist convention, has but illustrated the elements which naturally gravitate toward the candidacy of Mr. Bryan. Every cranky quirk, every incongruous and ludicrous and misshapen idea which the 'wheels' in the brains of men could evolve, buzzed and whirled through days of talk, but the net result was Bryan. Government ownership of railroads, telegraph and telephone lines, initiative and referendum, silver money and more money had their advocates, and, at the end, on assurances that all who voted for Bryan would be equally recognized, Mr. Bryan was almost the unanimous choice of the convention.

"Because, therefore, I believe that free coinage will come through the efforts of the Republican party, and because the Democratic and Populist platforms, except on the money question, are odious and hostile to the welfare of the country, I shall not cast my vote for Mr. Bryan.

"I hold my commission from the Republican party. Many of its members, including some of its leaders, in the exercise of their judgment have announced their intention of leaving the party. I shall stay. My loyalty to the party which has honored me is entirely consistent with my loyalty to the highest and best interests of the state I represent in the senate of the United States, and I know no reason why I should abandon my party or desert its colors.

"There is to my mind no reason why it was not as much duty to vote for Weaver four years ago as for Bryan today. The Omaha platform declared for free coinage, and was no more objectionable than the Chicago platform, and Bryan is vouched for by leading Populists as being 'as good a Populist as lives.' The Populists have not changed in the last four years. It is we who are expected to join this aggregation. Others may find it wise or expedient, but I won't do it. Whenever the course of events could make it possible that I should speak from the same platform as Tillman or Waite or Ignatius Donnelly, in advocacy of the same presidential candidate, I know there must be something wrong with me.

THE NEEDS OF COLORADO.

"What we need in Colorado is less hysterics and more common sense. We have glorious resources, yet in the infancy of their development we are suffering from the imposition of a mistaken financial policy, which it is our natural and proper desire to see overthrown as speedy as possible. We are one of forty-six states in the union, each free and sovereign. Within our borders live about one hundred and fiftieth of the people of the United States. We live in a republic where the majority rules. The vast majority of the people of the United States are honest and of high average intelligence, and devoted to the perpetuity of free institutions. Our great desire is to induce a majority of the people of the United States to believe as we believe. The way to the accomplishment of this result is not by vituperation and abuse. The press of the country, east as well as west, is largely responsible for the bitter sectional feeling now sought to be provoked. It is for us, who do not own or control newspapers and are not in the business of throwing mud, to remember that the millions of people who will cast their ballots this fall nearly all are as patriotic as we are, and, with us, equally desirous that this republic shall live and not die. The people of the east are our brothers—we sprung from the same loins, we have a common country, a common faith and the same dear flag. This gospel of hate which is now being preached should find no follower among sane men, no welcome among good citizens.

"We who believe in the free coinage of both gold and silver at our mints, at the ratio heretofore existing, will secure the adoption of our views when we are able to induce the majority of our fellow-citizens to spare our belief, when the people who do not now agree with us shall be led to agree with us, not alone because of our arguments on finance, but because our views on other great questions entitle us to public confidence and respect. Free coinage will never come, in my opinion, out of the jumble and folly of the Chicago platform, nor will it be heralded by the cap and bells of Populism.

VICTIM OF GERMS.

Dr. Park Stricken With Typhoid Fever as a Result of Experiments---Over-Work Weakened His Constitution.

New York, Aug. 2.—Dr. William H. Park, the bacteriologist in charge of the laboratory connected with the Willard Parker hospital, has fortunately, but narrowly, missed becoming a martyr to the cause of scientific research. Dr. Park is now lying dangerously ill in the Presbyterian hospital, suffering from typhoid fever, which he contracted through experimenting in the interests of science with typhoid fever germs. Since last March Dr. Park has been studying the mysteries of the disease with which he himself is now afflicted and has experimented with the toxin in the effort to ascertain a means whereby the disease might be checked.

While it is said that Dr. Parks's discoveries will undoubtedly be productive of beneficial results, it is none the less certain that his own malady was caused by the unremitting application with which he devoted himself to his work. About two weeks ago Dr. Park was first confined to his room, and for two or three days it was thought that he was suffering from nothing more serious than overwork, but typhoid fever quickly developed, and subsequently he hovered between life and death.

At the Presbyterian hospital yesterday a Tribune reporter was informed that the patient had safely passed the crisis and that each hour showed a continued improvement in his condition.

For the moment Dr. Park's colleagues in the laboratory are unable to say just how he contracted the disease. They are well aware, however, that since Dr. Park has been laboring in his laboratory on the germs, he has allowed his desire to master the problem he set before himself to overcome his discretion, and in consequence of this his health ran down greatly. He was continually coming in contact with the typhoid germs, and it is generally agreed that his weakened condition, occasioned by overwork, was sufficient to make him an easy prey to the disease.

Dr. Park is recognized as one of the best authorities on the subject of typhoid fever in this city. He has studied it in its various stages and forms, and for experimental purposes has obtained toxin from patients of all classes and ages. During Dr. Park's illness the work in the laboratory has not been delayed, the various tests and experimenst in operation having been continued under the supervision of Dr. Lambert, the assistant bacteriologist.

THOMAS PLATT WILL STEER THE SHIP

The Management of the New York Campaign Is in His Hands.

HE MEETS CHAIRMAN MARK HANNA

They, with Hobart, Hackett and Lauterbach, Have a Long Talk--All Heartily Agreed--Stump Campaign to Open at Once--Executive Committee Not Filled Up.

New York, Aug. 2.—Chairman Mark A. Hanna of the Republican national committee and ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt met yesterday afternoon just before 3 o'clock in the rooms of the national committee and were in consultation for an hour and a half. According to arrangement, Chairman Hackett of the Republican state committee and President Lauterbach of the county committee accompanied Mr. Platt.

Briefly stated, this was the result of the conference:

Mr. Hanna said that he had intended all along that the state committee should have full control of the campaign in this state. He had always admired the thoroughness of the organization of the New York state machine and it is said he jokingly referred to the fact that he had wanted to be a Platt man in New York when he was looking for McKinley delegates. Since coming to the city he has been more than ever impressed with the effective organization of Mr. Platt's political machine and the absolute loyalty of its members to their chief. He had long been convinced that the ticket was to have some of its most effective helpers in the leaders of the New York organization. Mr. Hobart had told him of the wonderfully good work Mr. Platt had done in former years, not only in getting votes, but in raising funds for national campaigns.

Mr. Hobart repeated his former assertions on these points. Finally Mr. Hanna said that such experienced campaigners as Mr. Platt and Chairman Hackett knew what was best to be done in this state, and he proposed that the conduct of the national campaign here should be turned over to the state committee absolutely, and that all matters relating to the state campaign which may be brought to the attention of the national campaign managers shall be referred to Chairman Hackett.

The latter assured Mr. Hanna that all persons referred to him on matters pertaining to the campaign will be courteously received and that their suggestions will be duly considered.

MONEY THE CHIEF ISSUE.

The issues of the campaign were talked over. Mr. Platt and his friends said that the money question is the chief issue here, and Mr. Hanna coincided with them. Mr. Lauterbach said that the tariff issue had settled itself. It has been demonstrated, he said, that the present tariff does not raise enough revenue for the purposes of the government, and that one which will can readily be drawn to afford ample protection to American industries.

The subject of holding a big ratification meeting as an opening gun of the campaign in the state was brought up. Mr. Hanna vetoed this proposition some days ago when he heard of it, but the clamor of the business interests has convinced him that the stump campaign must be begun at once, and he said so. Mr. Hackett said he would telegraph to ex-President Harrison without delay and ask him if he can speak at a meeting this week. General Harrison had almost agreed to speak at a meeting to be held this week when Chairman Hanna asked that the matter be delayed. Mr. Hanna talked with General Harrison about the matter when the latter came down from the Adirondacks last week.

This meeting which is to be held will not be non-partisan. Mr. Hanna is in favor of non-partisan meetings, and of assisting such meetings by national, state, and local committees, but meetings held under the auspices of such committees he believes should be absolutely partisan in character. This is the idea of ex-President Harrison, which he expressed when last in the city.

Another subject discussed at the conference was the appointment of the ninth member of the executive committee. There is some opposition by Warner Miller and his friends to the appointment of National Committeeman Gibbs, of this state. Candidate Hobart is practically the ninth member of the committee now. It was determined not to make an appointment for some time yet. Meantime, however, Mr. Gibbs, who has an office just under Mr. Hanna's room, will be at 1 Madison avenue every day, and will have more or less to do with the work of the campaign.

Mr. Hanna's visitors were greatly pleased with the manner of their reception and the directness and frankness of the national chairman. Mr. Platt has known Mr. Hanna as a good business man, and his only former experience with him in a political way was when Mr. Hanna was skirmishing for national delegates. Whenever Mr. Hanna had anything to say yesterday he always talked to the point, and did not mince matters or beat about the bush. Chairman Hackett said later that the comparison with his experiences with the national committee of 1892 was most agreeable. In 1892 Mr. Hackett visited national headquarters just once, and then he was compelled to wait two hours to see Chairman Carter. The character of his reception was such that he never went again.

WHAT CAUGHT MR. PLATT.

Chairman Hanna's direct way of doing things caught on with Mr. Platt and his lieutenants.

Mr. Lauterbach said after the conference:

"Mr. Hanna is a good politician. He has that in him which would make him a first-class district leader in this city. I couldn't pay him a higher compliment as any one who has tried political leadership in an assembly district knows. Oh, yes; we had a most agreeable time. It could not have been more satisfactory if Mr. Platt, Mr. Hackett, and myself had sat down and arranged it all by ourselves."

Mr. Platt said:

"There is very little to tell. We met Mr. Hanna by appointment; had a very pleasant chat, and everything is arranged for the conduct of the campaign by the state committee. I shall probably call and see Mr. Hanna at national headquarters frequently."

After his visitors had retired, all smiling as when they came Mr. Hanna received the newspaper reporters.

"Well, boys," said he, "what is it? Or am I to answer the questions? Well, we had a long and pleasant talk, during which we thoroughly arranged the plan of campaign in this state. The state and county committees will have the conduct of the campaign with the supplemental aid of the national committee. The active work will be begun in a few days. I understand that it is the desire to open the campaign here with a speech by General Harrison. The general has the proposition to speak under advisement. It is a good arrangement, and General Harrison's utterances will carry great weight."

An effort was made to get the chairman to say something about the McKinley league and their position in the matter, but Mr. Hanna simply smiled a broader smile and said the reporter who asked the question:

"Bait your hook again, young man."

While Mr. Hanna was talking Colonel Lovell H. Jerome, one of the organizers of the McKinley league, sat by, and his was the only face in the room which did not wear a grin.

The decision of Mr. Hanna to permit Mr. Platt and his organization to run the campaign in this state without hindrance was advised by many anti-Platt men, including Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the national committee. It will not be a handicap to the organization forces in securing delegates to the state convention.

WILL BRYAN IGNORE THEM?

Story That He May Give the Populists the Marble Heart.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 2.—Mr. Bryan no longer speaks of his nomination by the Populists as if he intended to make any further statement to the public. The assurance that the unpleasantness involved in his nomination in St. Louis with Watson would be adjusted speedily to the satisfaction of everybody was not accepted with much confidence, and the feeling is growing that this statement had about as much meaning as Mr. Bryan's telegram to Senator Jones declining the Populist nomination.

As the days go by, Mr. Bryan seems less and less inclined to discuss the Populist entanglement. It is asserted by some of the candidate's friends that he has a surprise for the public, and it is intimated the surprise will be a declination of the Populist nomination. Up to the present moment Mr. Bryan has never refused any kind of a nomination for any kind of an office, and it is not easy to believe that he will begin now.

Mr. Bryan's plans up to Sept. 1 are now arranged, and so far no provision has been made for either the silver or Populist notification. From what Mr. Bryan has said to intimate friends it is gathered that he still believes the best course is to continue silent and have no notification. Mr. Bryan had a quiet day. There were few callers, and he spent nearly twelve hours in his library.

CHARLES WOODBURY BOLTS.

The Old War Horse of Massachusetts Can't Go Bryan.

Boston, Aug. 2.—Judge Charles Levi Woodbury attended the meeting of the gold-money Democrats on Friday, and while there made a statement of his position. A reporter called upon him this afternoon at his office.

"I do not care to be interviewed," he remarked. "It is not my intention to go into a point-by-point declaration."

"Your position, then, in politics can be regarded as one of a bolter?"

"I do not know what you call a bolter," remarked the judge. "I am where I have always been. There are things in the Democratic platform that I have been fighting against all my life. I cannot support such a platform. I have not been struck by lightning. My end of the schooner is anchored, and it is not my intention to follow in the footsteps of the men who are trying to place this patent medicine. I don't think it will effect a cure. I am where I was on January last, and on the twelve months previous, and even as far back as when I was a boy in 1834."

BOARD-WALK RAIL GAVE WAY.

Three Women Hurt and Many Shaken Up at Atlantic City.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 2.—A crowd of people were standing on the boardwalk at the foot of Missouri avenue yesterday afternoon, watching efforts being made to revive a man who had been nearly drowned while bathing, when the rail of the boardwalk gave way. A score or more persons fell fifteen feet to the sand below.

Three were seriously hurt and several were badly bruised. Belle Schermer, of 103 Day street, Philadelphia, had her leg broken. Mamie Fisher, of 1130 Rose street, Philadelphia, had her shoulder dislocated. Lizzie Springer was cut on the head.

Robert Hart, 22 years old, of 116 East Cmberland street, Philadelphia, ventured beyond his depth, and was rescued in an unconscious condition by Life Guards Neel and Loder. The rescue was witnessed by many persons from the boardwalk. They pushed and jostled each other in the effort to see Hart. The pressure of the crowd upon the temporary wooden rail broke it.

There was a momentary panic on the boardwalk, and the crowd broke and fled, fearing that the whole structure was about to fall. The injured women were taken to the already overcrowded Sanitarium, where their injuries were dressed. Hart recovered in about forty minutes.

STORY ON GARFIELD.

Had Only Thirty Dollars the Day After His Nomination.

From the Chicago Record.

General Garfield had more money a few day after his nomination than he ever had at any other time in his life. He reached Cleveland from the Chicago convention with just $30 in his pocket. That represented all the wealth he had in the world, except his mortgaged home at Mentor. Knowing this circumstance, Sylvester T. Everett, the well-know leveland banker, in whose house he was a guest, started out one morning with a little subscription paper, and came back with ten $1,000 checks, one of which bore his own signature. He fixed up a bank book with a package of blank checks, put them all in an envelope, and at the first opportunity handed the package to Garfield with a remark that there was a little pin money for his personal expenses during the campaign, and an explanation that not a peny of it was to be spent for political purposes. When the general realized the amount and the nature of the gift he fell upon Everett's neck and wept like a child. He said that the greatest load he had to bear had been taken from him, for he had been lying awake nights wondering how he was going to meet his personal expenses during the campaign. He said, too, that he never had so much money before in his life.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Death, when I die, I pray thee let it be
In autumn, when across the spiky furze
There floats the film of silver gossamers;
In early autumn, when the cherry tree
Is touched with flame; the beech with russet gold,
And o'er the fallow field and purple lea
The starlings scream, while swallows put to sea
And woolly mists hang light on wood and wold.
Now when no sound is heard, unless it were
The thud of acorns on the wrinkled earth,
While thoughts of summer linger in the air,
Sweet with the smell of apples; now when Mirth
Is still as Grief and Peace is everywhere,
Bring me, O Death, into the arms of Birth!
