Reese's Patent Coupling and Foreplate, FOR NAIL-PLATE AND SHEET-ROLLS, CAN NOW BE SEEN IN OPERATION at Messrs. Baily, Brown & Co.'s Rolling Mill, Pittsburgh, or the "Sharon Works," Mercer county, Pa. The advantages of my improvement are—that it obviates the necessity of stopping the engine or throwing off the belt to connect the top roll when scouring, as the top roll is connected and disconnected in an instant without respect to the engine, crab or anything else. The FOREPLATE is also constructed so simple and complete that it is placed or displaced in half a minute, without removing a guide, scraper, bolt, or nut. The last, though not least advantage of my improvement is, that by it you are enabled to secure the Rolls between beds, thus making a higher polish on Nail-plate and Sheet-iron than has ever been got out before. For further information, or a right to use the same, can be obtained of the inventor. JACOB REESE, Manager of "Clinton Mills," Pitt

KOSZTA AND SLAVERY.

THE DEBATE CONTINUED IN THE HOUSE.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 21.

The House then went into a committee of the whole on the state of the Union, on the President's Message.

Mr. Dean said, when he offered the resolution the other day, proposing a vote of thanks and a sword to Capt. Ingraham, he did not intend to debate it, but the remark of a colleague, (Gerrit Smith,) had induced him to say a few words on the subject. He regretted that his colleague had brought party into the discussion, and undertook to say that the entire American people have been represented by the conduct of this government.

The President is the representative of the whole people, and not of any party on this subject. He thanked the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Preston, for yesterday defending the conduct both of Capt. Ingraham and our own Government. His colleague said that although Austria is a despotism; yet this Government is a greater, and guiltier of oppression—that government of which he forms a part; and that this Administration owes its being and very existence to the slave power, and is pledged to its defence. Now, this Administration is not pledged to the slave or any other power, and this doctrine has been clearly understood for twelve years and defined in the resolutions of the National Convention. They adopted the doctrine that this confederacy is formed of independent States, and that slavery is a local and municipal institution with which Congress has nothing to do.

But his colleague had said this government is guiltier of oppression than Austria. If it were not for the gentleman's intelligence, as known not only in New York but throughout the country, if he were not an enlightened philanthropist and scholar, he (Mr. Dean) should be inclined to impute to him ignorance. If he had known the system which prevails in Austria, he never would have said anything of that kind. There the will of one man is law. The Emperor destroyed the constitution which the people compelled him to give them four years ago. No four men can there stand together without being arrested and thrown into prison. His colleague could not but know that women of rank and education are now pining in the dungeons of Austria, merely for political offences.

Mr. Dean read from a proclamation of Haynau, who ordered the execution of every Hungarian who dared to set up for a republican government, without distinction of age or sex. This proclamation proceeded from the Austrian government. We have only to look to Austria to day to see more of her tyranny. While the war between Russia and Turkey is progressing the latter striving for existence, Austria refuses to let the telegraph be used to communicate intelligence of Turkey's victories. No publication can be made there except in favor of the Government.

He now wished to call attention to the reasons which influenced him in submitting the Ingraham resolution. It was not for the purpose of glorifying Capt. Ingraham, or bestowing praise or blame on the Administration, but simply to do an act of justice to a man who, thousands of miles from home, boldly proclaimed the principle, that a man may expatriate himself and live where he pleases on the earth. It is to show that the rights of Americans are worth having, and Americans travelling wherever enterprise leads them, shall be defended by our flag. Congress voted a sword to Scott, Taylor, and others, and he knew of no more appropriate testimonial to Capt. Ingraham than that now proposed. If any argument in favor of this were needed, he would refer to the would-renowned correspondence between Mr. Marcy and Mr. Hulsemann. God made man before he made him a citizen, and one only has to appeal to the law to justify Captain Ingraham. He hoped when the resolution comes before the House it will be passed unanimously, that it may go forth to the world that an American Congress has sustained an American officer and a man in defence of American citizens.

Mr. Giddings said he should not have risen to address the Committee, being unprepared, had it not been for the remarks of the gentleman just taking his seat. It was due to himself and this body that imputations thrown out against that gentleman's colleague (Gerrit Smith) should be promptly met. Nothing else would have drawn him from his seat. When it is seen that the gentleman either deliberately, or for want of intelligence, misrepresents Mr. Smith, it was due that he should be set right. When the gentleman represents that this is a confederacy of States, and that Congress has no power not specifically delegated to it, he and the gentleman agreed. It is a State rights doctrine, for which he had for seventeen years contended: And in asserting that Congress has no right to interfere with slavery, he found that he and the gentleman stood together in 1848. At least it was said so, but he would not be certain. [Laughter.] He wished to meet the remark that the South had not called on the government to interfere with slavery, but unqualifiedly the opposite of this was the fact. We have been trying to wash our hands of slavery, and leave it where our constitution left it, with the States.

He called on Mr. Dean to stand up and point to one instance where the free democracy ever called on the government to interfere with slavery. Let the gentleman meet this question before the country, or slip out and dodge it. The country should no longer be deceived. When the gentleman votes to silence all agitation of the question, and maintains commerce in bodies of women, and refuses to repeal the laws under which women are bred for market, and when the commerce is carried on to supply the hells of New Orleans, and when the government authorizes and maintains this by every influence which can be brought forth, let it be known.—He declares we have no right to interfere with the accursed slave trade here, and is satisfied the commerce shall continue.

Mr Giddings understood that the South has laid down distinctly that the Federal Government had established commerce in human flesh. The gentleman talked of Austrian oppression, and of intelligent women being imprisoned; but look at yonder slave pen. Intelligent women are not only imprisoned there, but sold like swine in the market, and this is done by force of congressional enactment. This Government has not the Constitutional right to involve him in the turpitude or disgrace of the traffic. Any man who attempts to involve New York, or any other State, in that trade, is an enemy to the human race, and is vitally opposed to the Constitution and the free principles which Jefferson, Hancock, Adams and others, proclaimed.

Mr. Giddings then branched of on the Amistad question, and spoke against the payment of indemnity to the Spaniards who lost their negroes in that affair. He hoped when the committee on Foreign Affairs shall report a bill, that they will point to the exact article in the treaty on which the claim is based.

Mr. Bayly said he would be apt to do that.

Mr. Giddings resumed, insisting that there were flagrant misrepresentations in the report made in 1844 on this subject, by a gentleman from Philadelphia, and in conclusion said every man must take his position either for freedom or the oppression of his race.

Mr. Bayly said that Mr. Giddings' speech was full of errors, of law and fact, which, at the proper time, would be exposed.

Mr. Giddings remarked—don't threaten.

Mr. Bayly—I dont threaten—I assure the House I have examined the question elaborately.

Mr. Giddings—you pledge yourself to show what you assert?

Mr. Bayly—I do.

Mr. Chandler said he desired to take no part in the discussion, but the gentleman from Ohio, in the warmth of his remarks, which, it was to be presumed, were well weighed, said that a gentleman from Philadelphia, formerly a member of this House, made a wilful and deliberate misrepresentation in his report on the Amistad case.

Mr Giddings interposing—I said I regarded it as such.

Mr. Chandler resumed—the gentleman has attacked one of my constituents. Those who know him will deem him incapable of asserting what is not true. If there was a discrepancy he had too much discrimination not to observe it. He is a Democrat to be sure, rather unfortunate, [Laughter,] but I do not wish the impression to go abroad from a gentleman so old in legislation as the gentleman from Ohio, that my constituent is guilty of wilful misrepresentation.

Mike Walsh obtained the floor, when Mr Giddings asked, will the gentleman give way a moment?

Mr. Walsh replied, I believe I will shut the pan on that. [Laughter.] I intended to make some remarks at length on this question, but I have too much regard for the feelings of the already exhausted House, and too much respect for myself to indulge in a speech. When a gentleman comes in a pious way, when he is first commencing his simple career, he is taken kindly by the hand and prayed for, and encouraged and not repelled and repulsed, and when my Soft friend, Mr. Dean, who is in a chrysalis state of abolitionism, and is gradually softening, finds that the President's patronage is disposed of, he will melt into full-blooded abolitionism. It is at least impolitic, if not dangerous in the gentleman from Ohio, to make attacks on the Softs of New York, which are calculated to dissolve the coalition once formed. [Laughter.]

The other day (Mr. Walsh continued) a couple of gentlemen stood on this floor to vindicate gratuitously an Administration which has not been assailed in this House. They thought to draw the true men of New York from their position into an attack which was never contemplated on the Administration, but we proved ourselves too good tacticians for that. It was not a little strange or ominous, that a gratuitous and uncalled for defence of the Administration should have come from two men, one a Freesoiler and the other a Whig, who do not act on the principles by which Pierce was whirled into the White House.

Until the time comes for speaking, and he believed those who thought with him will be prepared to act with him, we will sit in our seats like orderly and respectable citizens, and quiet and sincere Christians, (laughter.) We have sat, watched and prayed, and the result must be a beautiful quarrel between the Abolitionists of the strongest grade, and the incipient Abolitionists—a quarrel which we have no disposition to spoil. He would tell the House, the Administration and the world, that when the time arrives for the true Democrats of New York to speak and express what they think of these, they will speak language which will admit of no two interpretations. Nobody will misunderstand. Until that happy day arrives, I return to my quiet and orderly position. (Laughter.)

Mr. Wright, of Pennsylvania, obtained the floor. The Committee rose, and the House adjourned.

IMPORTANT DESPATCHES FROM MEXICO.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Courier states that important despatches have been received from Mexico. A Message from Gen. Gadsden brings intelligence that Santa Anna's Government has entertained with favor his proposition to concede a Right of Way for a Railroad to the Pacific through territory south of the American boundary line. The suggestion of a grant of land for the same purpose, or the removal of the line southward so as to annex to the United States the districts now overrun by the Indians, is rejected. The messenger will immediately return to Mexico with additional instructions to our Minister. It would appear that our Government has followed the precedent set by Mr. Fillmore's administration, and demanded the literal fulfilment of the Garay contract or an ample indemnity to its assignees, who are American citizens. The demand for a specific performance will be abandoned, in consideration of the cession, for a more northern route of communication between the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific.

CHANGE OF VENUE.—The motion of the counsel of Messrs. M. F. and Robert Ward, Jr., for a change of venue was considered yesterday morning before the Jefferson Circuit Court, Judge Bullock presiding. The motion was resisted by the Attorney for the Commonwealth. Various affidavits were introduced by the counsels for the defendants to show that the excitement against them in Louisville and Jefferson is such as would be likely to prevent a fair and impartial trial, and the Judge decided that the change of venue should be granted.

The question then arose as to the county in which the trial should take place, the law providing that the county must be an adjoining one. A number of affidavits were submitted from citizens of Oldham, who made oath, that, in their opinion, an impartial trial could not be had in that county. Similar affidavits from citizens of Shelby were introduced to show that the same objection existed on a trial there. The Judge decided that the case should go to Hardin.—Louisville Journal.

REMITTING MONEY BY MAIL.—A very important case has recently come before the U. S. District Court at Richmond, Va. Chief Justice Taney presiding, in which the question arose whether money remitted by mail from a debtor to a creditor, such money being lost before it reached its destination, was a release of the debtor from obligations of the debt. The Chief Justice decided that the plaintiff having requested his debtor to remit the money, without specifying or directing how it was to be sent, and the defendant having complied with the request by remitting through the mail, as was the custom with others to do, the debtor would not be held obliged to make up the loss. The decision is in conflict with other cases involving the same principle, the Chief Justice holding that the former decisions were not correct.
