PITTSBURGH GAZETTE

THE WAGE OF SCANDAL.—Mr. Wilberforce relates that at one time he found himself chronicled as "Old Wilberforce" in an appealing journal, and the following is given as an instance of his Pharisaism:—"He was lately seen," says the journal, "walking up and down in the Bath Pump Room, reading his prayers, like his predecessors of old, who prayed in the corners of the street to be seen of men." "As there is generally," says Mr. Wilberforce, "some slight circumstance which perverseness turns into a charge of reproach, I began to reflect, and I soon found the conscience of the calumny. It was this:—I was walking in the Pump Room in conversation with a friend; a passage was quoted from Horace, the accuracy of which was questioned; as I had Horses in my pocket, I took it out and read the words. This was the plain bit of wire which therefore malignity sharpened into a pin to pierce my reputation." How many ugly pins have been manufactured out of even smaller bits of wire than this!
