Pittsburgh Gazette.

A PARIS correspondent of the London Morning Post, says that the discontent of the native troops in India appears to have been known to foreign governments for some time past. The editor remarks, that it was more than known to certain foreign Powers; who were active in fostering the spirit of discontent:—

From the period of the second government of Lord Cornwallis, down to the period of the government of Lord Dalhousie, Russia has never been without civil, military, or trading agents in India; and it has ever been the business of these intriguers to say a bad word and to excite a bitter feeling against England, and to exalt to the tenth heaven the personal character of the Czar, and the greatness and power of the Russian arms. During the governments of the Marquis of Hastings, Lord Amherst, Lord William Bentinck, and Lord Auckland, Russian agents in India became much more numerous, their visits more frequent, and their intrigues more artful and unceasing, than at any antecedent time. Sometimes these persons appeared to be traveling for pleasure or instruction—sometimes in the interest of science or commerce—sometimes they affected to be studying the religion of the Hindoos; but their objects, however outwardly varied, were always really uniform—namely, to spy the nakedness of the land, and to send intelligence as to any faulty or assailable point to the Russian Chancery at St. Petersburg. The individuals selected for this Russian service in India were well chosen. They were men generally acquainted with the history and languages of the East, personally insinuating, flexible, and adroit.

There is abundant evidence, both in Fort William and Leadenhall street, of the proceedings of these Muscovites, and we should not be at all surprised if some of the Oude nobles and functionaries and some of the Brahmins were under agents in the pay of the paramount and superior practitioners who were immediately instructed by the Russian Chancery.

AT a recent meeting of the Historical Society at Boston, Dr. Loring read an interesting article on Hancock, and exhibited the vest, coat and breeches once worn by the great patriot. They were in excellent preservation. The coat is of scarlet velvet, with ruffled sleeves, and was used as a model for the coat to the statute of Warren. The vest was richly embroidered with lace and spangles, and the breeches are of olive silk plush. John Hancock would create quite a sensation by appearing in State street to-day, thus accoutred.

MORE HELP.—The Tamaqua Gazette, heretofore neutral, has come out for Wilmot and the Union ticket. A new paper recently established in the same place, called the Sentinel, also runs up the Wilmot flag. There are now about one hundred Wilmot papers in the Commonwealth, embracing all the political journals in the State that are not either Locofoco outright, or playing into the hands of Packer by the support of the Hazleton ticket.

END OF THE MOB PROCEEDINGS IN IOWA.—The Tipton (Cedar county) Advertiser says: Now, since the hanging of Soper and Gleason, that county is free from the gang of horse-thieves which infested it, and "no more mobs will assemble—all is quiet." It states that "there is no disposition to resort to violence," and that "law holds an uninterrupted sway, supported by the great mass of the people."

Law School of the University at Cambridge, Mass.

The Instruction in this School are

Hon. JOEL PARKER, LL. D., Royal Professor.
Hon. THEOPHILUS PARSONS, LL. D., Dane Professor.
Hon. ENOCH WASHBURN, LL.D., University Professor.

THE course of instruction embraces the various branches of the Common Law, and of Equity, Commercial, International, and Constitutional Law, and the Jurisprudence of the United States. The Law Library consists of about 14,000 volumes, and at the end of every year they are added, and every effort is made to render it complete.

Instruction is given by oral lectures and expositions, (and by moot-court arguments, in connection with them,) of which there are ten, viz: Two Moot Courts are held in each week, at each of which a case, previously argued out, is argued by four students, and an opinion delivered by the presiding Instructor. Review and moot-court are also held for the Class Courts and an Assembly is held weekly to practice in debate, and acquiring a knowledge of parliamentary law and proceedings.

The term commences on the first Thursday of each month, and continues twenty-four days. Students may enter at any time, which is most convenient to them, and pursue the study of the Law, either in the office of a practising attorney, or in the office of their own counsel, and attend the lectures as they shall see fit.

Students can obtain board in this city at from $2 to $3 per week, and can find a room for from $1 to $2 per week.

Students who are desirous of being assigned to any office, will please to make a note of it, when they shall arrive.

Arrangements are in progress, which it is hoped will materially diminish the expenses of living in Cambridge.

Applications for admission, or for Catalogues, or any further information, may be made to either of the Professors at Cambridge, Mass. Aug. 4, 1857—aug7:law4tw
