IVY POISONING. -Sweet oil rubbed on the skin is said to be a sure antidote for ivy poisoning.

GARGLE FOR RELAXED SORE THROAT. Cayenne pepper gargle, five ounces; infusion of roses, one ounce. Mix.

Inguston of Hops.-Hops, two ounces; boiling water, quarter pint; soak for four hours. Dose, half a wine glassful. Like Bass or East India, ale this is a good tonic.

WHOOPING COUGH,-Take powdered cantharides, powdered camphor, of each one semple; extract of bark, three drachms. Rub these well together, and thought, her place of destination, but upon inquiry found that there were five divide into powders of eight grains each. Dose-one every three or four hours, hours ride by stage in store for her. This aunouncement quite nettled her, as To be used only in advanced stages of the disease.

THE BEST FOOD .- It may be interesting to know, says Dr. G. Moore in a recent work, that the best animal food is the flesh of the sheep, and the best of vegetables that of wheat. We have reason to believe that under divine instruc-tion these were both cultivated by the first human family, and we cannot doubt that their cultivation is still essential to civilization. The variety and proportion of the ingredients in a pound of wheaten flour will give us a clear idea of the value of wheat as food : Water, 2 onnees, 106 grains; gluten, 2 ounces, 21 grains; albumen, 126 grains; starch, 9 ounces. 242 grains; sugar, 385 grains; gum, 119 grains; fat, 84 grains; fiber, 119 grains; ashes (salts), 112 grains. These are exactly suited to furnish what is wanted to sustain the human body in health and

How to Fight the Army Worm.

The worms may be prevented, as a general thing, from passing from one field to another, by judicious ditching. It is important, however, that the ditch should be made so that the field of grain to be protected should be dug under. tree or shrub or flower to be seen in the About every three or four rods a deep hole in the ditch should be made, so that they can be killed by covering them the tears, while she begged the driver not with earth and pressing it. All along the ditch, on the side of the field to be protected, a space from three to five feet should be thoroughly dusted (when the dew is on) with a mixture of paris she alighted, tired and hungry, and the green and plaster of paris or flour, so green and plaster of paris or flour, so driver rapped away on the front doo that every worm which succeeds in with his whip, but received no response crossing the ditch will be killed by feeding upon plants so treated. This mixture should be in the proportion of one full of milk in each hand. Upon being part of pure paris green to twenty-five informed who the new comer was, the or thirty parts of the other materials farmer said: "Wal, now, that's tu bad named. If used in a liquid form, one We didn't think you'd come so soon tablespoonful of paris green to a bucket and my old woman has gone away; bu of water, kept well stirred, will answer the same purpose. Logs or fences over running streams should be removed, otherwise the worms will cross on them.

Keeping Poultry in Orchards.

Some farmers make it a practice to keep their poultry in their orehards from early spring until cold weather sets in ; and they find that it pays for doing so, A picket fence should be built around the orchard, high enough to prevent their flying over, with suitable buildings placed in one corner of the yard to shelter them at night. Thus situated, the poultry will thrive and prosper, keeping them in good condition, and the increase of eggs will be greatly augmented and their usefulness enhanced to their owners at least, on account of the myriads of insects and worms they destroy, and which will more A. jumped aboard, and she now dethan repay the cost and labor of building the fence. By keeping them inclosed of her life when she was once more seat in this manner, a large number of fowls may be retained in the orchard, and the continual scratching which is done by them will prove advantageous both to the soil and trees themselves, -Colonial Encher.

Wheat Weevils and Moths.

After wheat is thrashed and put away in the bins it is not safe from the attacks of insects. Perhaps the most common and destructive kind in this country is the red grain weevil. It is a small beetle of a pitchy red color, and attacks wheat after it is stored, eating out the inside of the kernel; hence it is not easily detected except by handling the grain or submitting it to a slight pressure, the shell readily breaking when touched. This weevil is sometimes exceedingly numerous about old barns in the Middle States, and considerable care is necessary to preserve seed wheat in good condition for sowing. Infested barns should be well cleansed every season before new grain is put in, even to fumigating with burning sulphur, as well as dusting the cracks about the bins with the same substance.

How to Manage Old Pointoes.

At this season of the year some farmers are at a loss to know how to dispose of their surplus potatoes, and for this reason many are allowed to remain in the cellars until spoiled and are then brought out and thrown away. I will inform them of a method long practiced by some of the best farmers in the country In June the potatoes are taken out of the cellar and carried into a shed chamber and spread on the dry floor, and allowed to remain through the hot weather. They shrivel, but do not rot nor sprout. In the hot part of the summer, when the feed becomes short, these shriveled potatoes are fed out to the cows; they increase the flow of milk very much and are preferred by the cows to new potatoes.

Things Worth Knowing. Keep tea in a close chest or canister.

Keep coffee by itself, as it's odor affects other articles. Keep bread and cake in a tin box or stone jar.

Cranberries will keep all winter in a firkin of water in a cellar. September and October butter is the best for winter use.

Oranges and lemons keep best wrapped in soft paper and if possible laid in a

The United States standard gallon measures 231 cubic inches. A barrel contains forty gallons or 9,420 cubic inches.

Corn Stalks as Manure.

My experience is that corn stalks are worth one dollar per acre to the land. Plow under for three years in succession one part of a field of clay ground, and burn the stalks on the other; the third year you can see the difference almost in the row.

A Difference.

"If you dare to play marbles for keeps again," said Mr. Hurtlescamp to his eldest boy, "I'll whip you within an inch of your life." And then Mr. Hurtlescamp went on 'change, and lifted up his voice at the call board, and raised his hand and shook it in the air, and got red in the face as he cried: "Sixtyseven! sixty-seven! for fifty thousand eash or July! Put up or shut up! Sixty-seven cents a bushel, cash!"
