CASS ON NATURALIZATION.—The following important official document has been for some days before the public:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, WASHINGTON, May 17, 1859.

To Mr. Felix Legare, Memphis, Tenn:

Sir—Your letter of the 13th inst., has been received. In reply I have to state that it is understood that the French Government claims military service from all natives of France who may be found within its jurisdiction. Your naturalization in this country will not exempt you from that claim if you should voluntarily repair thither.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant.

LEWIS CASS.

The late Know Nothing party was often reproached by citizens of foreign birth because of the invidious distinctions it made "in favor of those who had come into America with their breeches off, and because they could not help it, and those who had come into this country with their breeches on, and because they wanted to come."

But the late Know Nothings never avowed any doctrine so invidious to those citizens of foreign birth as that in the letter above, which the venerable Democratic leader announces as the policy of the Government. The Know Nothing party, professedly, at least, regarded American citizenship as so valuable a boon that it should not be lightly conferred. But this gift once made, the American citizen was sacred. And the Know Nothing creed had no article more popular than that which recognized the distinctness of American nationality, and sought honor and respect for the American flag. The Know Nothing party would have America a power as well as a name among the nations.

But the Democratic Policy, laid down in the letter above given, is as odious as it is pusillanimous. It abridges the rights of every citizen of foreign birth. It says to him: "So long as you stay in the United States, you are under the protection of the Government. You may have fled from despotism to freedom, because in a land of slaves you dared to be free, and here you are safe. We admit you as a brother, and give you protection against the despotism that would crush you. But the moment you go abroad and return, either for business or pleasure, to your native land, you are an American citizen, and entitled to American protection, no longer."

"Let a few sailors of British birth, and not yet American subjects, be "impressed" by English men-of-war, and we will have a war about it. But one who has been a foreigner, and has become one of us, we will not protect, outside of our own land."

This is the Democratic doctrine. And can any thing be more monstrous? Why, the war of 1812 was to assert the principle, that a man could choose his allegiance for himself, and that when he renounced his allegiance to Great Britain, and became a citizen of the United States, Great Britain had no longer any claim upon him. The act of naturalization cancelled the claims of the government under which he was born. Daniel Webster, with compact logic, established the same point some twenty years since. And the praises showered upon Captain Ingraham, who protected Martin Kosta, not a naturalized citizen of the United States, but one in prospect, have not ceased to ring.

This principle, no dear to the heart of every American, General Cass renounces and abandons. The ground which was peculiarly our own—for we first forced its recognition as a part of international law—the Nestor of the Democratic party relinquishes, of course the party will follow. Having professed an especial love for citizens of foreign birth, having been their champion, the Democratic party carried into power by votes of naturalized citizens, strikes the deadliest blow ever aimed against their rights!

And the blow is not against their rights only. It is also aimed against the nationality of the United States. It is the surrender of a point which we had gained as a nation. And after what we have said and done in the matter, it is about as melancholy a spectacle of word eating as we have ever seen.—Cin. Gaz.

SUDDEN WHITENING OF THE HAIR.—A correspondent of the Medical Times having asked for authentic instances of the hair becoming grey within the space of one night, Mr. Dr. Parry, staff surgeon at Aldershott, writes the following very remarkable account of a case of which he says he made a memorandum shortly after the occurrence:—"On February 14, 1858, the column under General Franks, in the South of Oude, was engaged with a rebel force at the village of Chanda, and several prisoners were taken; one of them a Sepoy of the Bengal army was brought before the authorities for examination, and I being present had an opportunity of watching from the commencement the fact I am about to record. Divested of his uniform, and stripped completely naked, he was surrounded by the soldiers, and from the first apparently became alive to the dangers of his position; he trembled violently, intense horror and despair were depicted in his countenance, and, although he answered the questions addressed to him, he seemed almost stupified with fear; while under observation, within the space of half an hour, his hair became grey, on every portion of his head, it having been, when first seen by us, the glossy jet black of the Bengalee, aged about 24. The attention of the bystanders was first attracted by the sergeant, whose prisoner he was, exclaiming, "He is turning grey," and I, with several other persons, watched its progress. Gradually, but decidedly, the change went on, and a uniform greyish color was completed within the period above named."

THE CHINESE REBELLION.—A correspondent of the Boston Traveller at Singapore, under date of March 15th, has collected much information in regard to the rebellion headed by Tai-ping, and represents it had wrought incalculable injury to interests of every description—reducing large tracts of territory to desolation, depopulating cities, and destroying trade. He concludes as follows:

"The revolution, hopeful [illegible] ...pinning ...

THE OPENING OF THE CAMPAIGN.—Austria has missed fire. The weather has not suited the delicate constitution of her army. She has got wet in the feet. Her valor has caught cold. She has stuck in the mud in Piedmont. She is in a mess. She has had no footing for fighting. She must wait till it gets dry. Yet, like the poor Ophelia, she has had "too much of water," nevertheless she has been doing nothing but dabbling in rivers, crossing the Po, and recrossing the Po, crossing the Sesia, and recrossing the Sesia. She has occupied places and evacuated them.—She has advanced and retreated, advanced and retreated again. An invader, she has taken post behind a river, and thrown up defensive works. She has been within easy reach of the enemy, but acts as if she had no business with him, nothing to do with either Piedmontese or Frenchmen, except to keep out of their way. She might as well, or better, have stayed at home. But the rains are to account for all. Is it not, however, perfectly well known that May is a wet month in Piedmont, and, knowing what was to be expected, might not Austria have waited for a more favorable season, and at the same time have spared herself the obloquy of a move putting her in the wrong in the opinion of the world? As it is, Austria has with curious infelicity incurred all the moral penalties of the first blow without any of the military advantages. In fact, she is the sufferer, for while her troops have been perishing from the weather, the Piedmontese and the French have been quietly proceeding with their preparations and assembling their forces. Altogether there is something absolutely ludicrous in the contrast between what was expected of Austria and her performances. Europe looked for the opening of a great tragedy, and it sees a laughable farce. A great Power goes forth with all the pomp of war on a work of aggression, gets caught in the rain, and the double headed eagle becomes as bedraggled as a wet fowl, to borrow the French phrase. The Emperor Francis Joseph is not like the Eastern potentate, Lord of the Umbrellas. His Mars is not water proof.—London Exam.

EXPLORATORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.—The steamer Belfast has made a trip this season up the Minnesota to the mouth of the Yellow Medicine 446 miles from St. Paul, much higher than any boat had before ascended the river. The Belfast took up supplies for the Winnebago and Sioux Indians, whose Reserves are near the head waters of the Minnesota River. The river was in a good stage, and no serious obstruction was found. The Indians were astonished at the "fire canoe," the first that had invaded their territory. The steamer Freighter, Capt. Davis, on her way up to test the possibility of reaching the Red River of the North from the Minnesota River, was met on the return trip of the Belfast. The machinery of the little boat called the Anson Northrup was hauled across in sleighs from St. Cloud to Red River, last winter, and is probably now running as pioneer craft of the North-West.

THE GINSENG FEVER.—A new fever has broken out in Minnesota, which seems likely to make quite as much excitement as the discovery of a new gold mine at Pike's Peak. It appears that the root called Ginseng grows in the greatest abundance in the "Big Woods" of Minnesota. It is exported to China, where it is highly valued as a medicine. The market price of ginseng at the "diggings" is from six to ten cents per pound when green, and from twenty-five to thirty cents when dry. A Faribault paper says that upwards of six tons were brought into that town in one week. It is estimated that five hundred tons will be gathered this year, which will net the diggers about eighty thousand dollars. The Minnesota Journal also says that a company of Virginians are now erecting store houses at various points in the woods, fitted up with the necessary apparatus for curing the root.

THE OHIO COUNTY BONDS.—The Wheeling Intelligencer says:—"The County Court of Ohio county, Va., has decided not to make a levy for the payment of the warrants and coupons due and becoming due during the coming year, for the interest on the bonds of Ohio county issued to the Hempfield Railroad Company. The Court made an order appointing a commission to ascertain from the holders of the bonds for what sum they will surrender the same for cash, onlor before the first day of May next."
