HANDSOME FEMALE BURGLAR AT WORK IN MONBOR COUNTY. A bold attempt to burn the County Court House in Stroudsburg by a prisoner was discovered early last Friday morning in time to prevent a great loss of property and probably of life, The prisoner was a woman, named Frances Stanard, who was placed in the Grand Jury room on Monday last to await trial on a charge of larceny, the jail being in course of reconstruction. She had several times made threats that she would burn the building down if she was not released. About 3 o'clock on 4:45 P: M Friday morning the janitor's wife was 2 25 P. M awakence by smoke in the building, and 9:25 A. M upon investigating the same, discovered 8:20 P. 5:40 P. M flames bursting out of the door of the 8:20 A. M prisoner's room. She at once gave the > alarm, and by great effort the fire was extinguished. Nearly all the floor was burned away and several of the beams. It was at first supposed the woman had pertshed in the flames, but latter it was tearned that she had escaped by a window in the room. It was also discovered that she had removed the door from a large base-burning stove in the room, and upsetting it on the floor, had piled the beding and furniture upon it. No trace of the escaped incendiary has as yet been discovered. She is a stranger in the vicinity. She appeared in Jackson township Monroe county, about two weeks ago and professed to be a peddler of notions, visiting the houses in that section to dispose of her wates. About 1 o'clock on Monday morning last a farmer named James Stien, hying in the above township, was awakened by the presence of some one in his room He jumped from his bed and captured, the intruder who was about escaping from a window, and who fired a pistol shot at the farmer. It provid to be this woman. He had made a purchase of her the day before and she had no doudt noticed that he had a large amount of money in his pocket-book. She nad secured the farmer's pantaloons containing money, and had them in her posses-

The Titusville Courier of Wednesday contains the following:

Our readers will remember the application for the pardon of D. D. Williams was made some time ago, but notwithstanding there was at evident disposition to grant the request it was very tardy. Not long since, the writer was in company with a gentleman who resides in Councautville, and the conversation naturally turned to that subject and prospect of William's pardon.
