PENROSE ASKS FOR TARIFF RESTORATION

funds be realized for an urgent national preparedness for defense and for the upbuilding of American industries and the restoration of prosperity. Senator Penrose is now engaged in drawing up a tentative tariff revision bill which he says can be enacted in a few months if partisanship is laid aside for patriotism.

Need Restoration of Prosperity

His statement in full follows:

"I have been in communication with a great many people, business men, wage-earners and manufacturers of various political affiliations, with a view to forming an opinion as to what ought to be done in the present crisis. Every one from Florida to Maine with whom I have talked is of the opinion, regardless of party, that a decisive step must be taken to bring about a restoration of prosperity.

"Moreover, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the several harsh and severe restrictions placed upon business by acts of Congress during the first two years of the present administration. Not only is it necessary to restore the protective tariff, but it is equally necessary to modify these laws which have paralyzed all enterprise and initiative in the business world.

Protection Supreme Necessity

"But, after all, tariff is the main issue where it constitutes the keystone of our prosperity. Life-long Democrats in the South expect to continue to vote the Democratic ticket in their States, but are praying for a return of Republican control, with its accompanying tariff legislation in Washington. It is evident to all men that a protective tariff is more a supreme necessity now than ever in the history of the country.

"If it had not been the unexpected occurrence of the war in Europe, we would have had hard times in comparison with which the depression and labor troubles in Cleveland's second administration would be insignificant.

War Orders Temporary Work

"Just as the catastrophe was commencing the war occurred and offered a measure of relief. The war has acted in the first place in a way to protect the American industry because ocean commerce has been suspended. Then the enormous orders for munitions of war have furnished temporary employment in certain places.

"But the people have not forgotten the condition of disaster and depression that was impending over them, and it is realized that with the cessation of the war which may occur at any time, the bottom will drop out of whatever business activity may now exist. Even the mere discussion of peace in Europe will bring about a depressing effect.

"After the war several millions of men will return to productive pursuits, glad to get any wages they can. Europe will necessarily be greatly curtailed, it is reasonable to expect that the products of the cheap labor of Europe will be dumped upon the American market, which is, of course, the best market in the world and has been opened up by us to all the world without any consideration in return.

Government Faces Great Deficit

"When Congress meets the country will wake up to a realization from the fact that the Government faces a very great deficit in revenues as compared with the expenses. This deficit will have to be provided for in some way. The present war tax, so-called, was a temporary measure and will expire in December. This war tax will have to be re-enacted notwithstanding the fact that it was declared to be only a temporary measure and notwithstanding the fact that the nation is at peace, provided that there shall not be some other method of providing revenue devised.

Need of Preparedness

"But a still further consideration has arisen of great moment. It is evident that the United States must make preparation for reasonable national defense. It appears that the leaders of both parties are in favor of such preparation.

"No one advocates militarism or any war of aggression, but the fact remains that while we are potentially the most powerful nation in the world, we are practically defenseless. We must build up a great navy, and we must have a moderate army of sufficient size, with a system of miltiary training and discipline for the people and a system of reservists.

"Above all, however, we must have the machinery of war—the great guns, stores of cartridges and powder and other materials, all of which will cost a great deal of money, but not such an amount as cannot easily be borne by the nation as a premium of insurance.

"The necessity of having money for national preparedness adds, therefore, another serious complication to our national deficit. The country can ill-afford any more direct taxes, without any more direct burdens or to increase the income tax, already unpopular, will cause a revolt.

Will Assure Large Revenue

"The only way to solve the problem is to restore those tariff duties of a protective nature in force before the present Administration and which furnish ample revenue. Thus prosperity will be assured and a large additional revenue acquired.

"The revenue from the duty of sugar alone, foolishly given up by the present Administration for some unaccountable sentiment, would go a long way toward this end.

Will Appeal to Democrats

"With those objects in view I intend to call on the Democratic Administration and the Democratic majority in Congress to be broad enough and patriotic enough to drop their principles in favor of free trade and direct taxes and look at the matter in a broad national spirit, so that they will join with the Republicans in restoring protective tariff to the statute books, bring about a return of prosperity, wipe out the deficit and enable the nation to immediately prepare on an adequate scale for the national defense.

"Therefore, I intend to offer a tariff bill as soon as Congress meets in regular session with duties adequately protected and adjusted to present Congress. Some of the duties may be lower than in the Payne bill and others may be higher and new duties will be added, as in the chemical schedule, where it is evident that this country has become dependent upon German trusts and syndicates for dyestuffs and several hundred chemical staples used in agriculture and the arts so that hereafter we may be industrially and commercially independent.

Suggests Brief Hearings

"Brief hearings will be had upon the measure and the schedule submitted could of course be modified as might be found necessary. Such a measure could be passed, if partisan prejudice could be overcome. Such a bill could be enacted in less time than was required to pass either the Dingley or the Payne bills if all parties were united and no undue obstacles were placed in the way.

"Two or three months ought to see the bill of the statute books. If an extra session of Congress shall be called for other reasons this legislation could, of course, be taken up immediately.

"I am having a number of experts who have advised the committees of both branches of Congress in the past on tariff legislation go over the matter with very great thoroughness and I am in consultation and in correspondence with a large number of people representing the industries affected by the various schedules who are furnishing the best information possible resulting from recent experience."
