PITTSBURGH:

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JAN. 23, 1861.

STAND FIRM.

What have the people of the Free States done that they are asked to surrender their deliberately expressed convictions in the face of insult or threats, as the price of the preservation of the Union? Is the Union such an indispensable necessity to them, and is it of so little value to the border Slave States, that while the former are constrained to sacrifice their honor, manhood and principles for its preservation, the latter can afford to treat it as a matter of secondary importance, a thing to be preserved or destroyed as caprice, or whim, or party pride may dictate? Is the conservation of slavery to be set above the national will and even the Constitution itself?

This is a pretty time indeed to talk about making compromises and concessions, when half a dozen Slave States are in open rebellion against the authority of the government and in the daily commission of outrages against the most clearly expressed constitutional rights of our citizens. Do not those who are advocating this policy, a policy as pusillanimous as it is unwise—see that every movement of this kind only encourages the lawless rebels who have brought this trouble upon the nation, and instituted a reign of terror in the South? Do they not know that every demonstration of this moral weakness on the part of the North renders it impossible for the conservative men of the South to make a stand against the madmen in their midst? It is not plain that, had a set of resolutions gone out from Allegheny county indicative of a backing down on our part, a roar of exultation would have risen from the camp of the Secessionists:—"See! See! those fellows are scared! Press forward—the day is ours! We shall soon have every thing our own way! Down with all Southern Union traitors!"

We are in the midst of a conflict in which our only safety lies in calmness and courage. Sustain the Constitution, vindicate the majesty of the laws, and let our watchword be—"The Constitution as it is:" for this is no time to throw it into the crucible to fuse it, to alloy it, to render it contemptible by making it the guardian and minister of bondage, while at the same time we pretend that it is the palladium of freedom. If we would not blow our admirable system of government into fragments, and render our Constitution a contemptible thing, to be spit upon and trampled under foot, let us not put the word slave or slavery into it. Madison refused to admit the word in its softest form. Let us follow his example.

THE REACTION.—It is evident, from the various items of news now daily coming from the South, that the Secession fever has passed its critical stage and that the reaction has set in. The warlike spirit is not near so strong, as it was; the anxiety to avoid collision with the government is hourly growing stronger; and the general tone and temper, although still very bad, is much improved.

The conspiracy, it is plain, has gone too far. The leaders are appalled at the danger before them. All the calculations on which they based their scheme have turned out fallacious, all their expectations have been baffled, and all their hopes of frightening the North into submission have been disappointed.

Hence the necessity which stares them in the face of checking the attempted revolution midway. They relied firmly upon Buchanan either to co-operate with them or to withhold his hand from opposing them. They did not anticipate what has taken place—that the indignation of the North would drive him into some sort of resistance to them; and as the day of Lincoln's advent draws nigh, with the certainty that he will administer the law fearlessly, and use all the force of the government against them, they must see the gulf that is opening before them. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that they shrink from plunging into it; and we look for growing evidences, from this time forward, of a desire to patch up a peace and escape from the perils of their position.

NO COMPROMISE.—We enter here, as promptly as we can, our decided and emphatic dissent to the ground taken by Senator CAMERON, on Monday, in favor of the Crittenden-Bigler compromise. We are unyieldingly opposed to all efforts at compromise, under existing circumstances, come from what quarter they may, and in this we are backed by the almost unanimous sentiment of the Republicans of Allegheny county and of Western Pennsylvania; and we think it would be assuming little to say, of nearly the whole State of Pennsylvania.

We have so often, before, in these columns, given our reasons for opposing these delusive attempts at "concession" and "compromise," that we need not now repeat them. We have only to add that every day's developments but strengthen our convictions in this regard.

We feel convinced, however, that Gen. Cameron, in taking this course, has acted from the impulse of what he feels to be his duty. He is undoubtedly actuated by the best of motives, and forms his judgment from the facts and circumstances about him. But while doing him this justice, we desire to put on record our decided dissent to his views. The more we look at it the more we are convinced that this is no time for compromises of any kind. If this government is worth a straw it must demonstrate that fact by showing that it has vitality enough to vindicate itself and to put down the rebellion against its authority. Compromises with rebels and concessions to traitors are not only unexampled but unwise and unjustified by any reasoning we have yet seen.

NORTHERN OPERATIVES.—We understand that a number of Southerners, who lately stopped in the city and passed through its workshops, were utterly astonished to see our operatives all at work, happy and contented. They had been told that the workingmen in the North had nothing to do and were up in open rebellion crying "Bread or blood!" and they averred further that, if they told the people at home the true state of the case, they would not be believed, so thorough had become the conviction in the South that the Northern workingmen were suffering the deepest distress on account of the secession of South Carolina.

JUDGE SMALLEY.—The Judge Smalley, of New York, who has, with true devotion to the Constitution, charged the Grand Jury that any one who now sells arms or ammunition to the South is guilty of treason, is not, as some suppose, a "Black Republican" Judge, but a Judge of the U. S. District Court, and a Democrat. He was chairman of the Democratic National Committee from 1856 to 1860, and chairman of the Committee of Arrangements at the Democratic National Convention which met at Charleston in 1860.

KENTUCKY.—The Senate of Kentucky on Friday adopted, unanimously, a joint resolution calling on Congress to order a convention for proposing amendments to the Constitution. The Governor is instructed to transmit the resolution to the Legislatures of other States, inviting co-operation. The House will concur.

FROM WASHINGTON.

No expectation is entertained here that Fort Sumter will be attacked by South Carolina troops. They know its strength, and Jefferson Davis, who is military and political authority with them, has advised against the experiment, as one which will involve a large loss of life, and must fail in the object if hazarded by raw troops. Consequently the stars and stripes are likely to float unmolested.

The prompt manner in which Governor Pickens followed the advice of Messrs. Davis, Hunter, and others, by allowing Major Anderson access to supplies, exhibits a reactive tendency there. This concession yields the point of treating him as a public enemy, which has hitherto been the case.

An intelligent gentleman, just returned from an extended trip through North Carolina, reports the Union sentiment to be immensely in the ascendant, and that the planters and others near the South Carolina line are selling out at sacrifices and moving away.

Some apprehension is entertained lest snap judgment should be taken on Virginia. The election for delegates to her Convention is ordered for the 4th of February, and the meeting dated for the 15th. It is doubted whether the necessary notice can be served in remote counties, with irregular and infrequent mails, and where the Union feeling is strongest, in time to call out a full expression of the popular sentiment. The Secessionists live in towns, and along lines of railroad, and can readily concentrate their strength. It was more than a month after the Presidential election before the returns of several distant counties could be received, which decided the political complexion of the State.

Mr. Seward's speech is now freely circulated under Southern franks, to disabuse the false impressions which some of those very men excited against him and the Republican party, by deliberate and wicked misrepresentations.

About forty cannon and mortars were seized by the rebels at Pensacola, some of which may be found more dangerous in the rear than in front. They also appropriated 112,000 pounds of cannon powder, 4,000 pounds of musket powder, 60,000 thirty-two pounder shells, and large quantities of other sizes.—N. Y. Trib.

Late letters from Springfield, Illinois, authorize me to state that Mr. Lincoln has not made any tender of a Cabinet appointment to the Hon. Salmon P. Chase, of Ohio. It having been telegraphed from different points that Hon. J. Kennedy Moorehead, Representative in Congress from the Allegheny district, and Hon. Thurlow Weed, editor of the Albany Evening Journal, had both started on a visit to the President elect, it will be proper to add that they are supposed to be engaged in an effort to reconcile the difficulties growing out of the recent unequivocal offer of a place in his Cabinet, by Mr. Lincoln, to Mr. Cameron.

Secret and confidential agents of the Treasury Department left this city on a few hours' notice, this morning, for the purpose of investigating some alarming defalcations South and West. What next?

Great rejoicing is manifested at the withdrawal of Senator Iverson, who will no doubt vacate his seat to-morrow, on account of the act of immediate secession, passed by the Convention of his State.

An officer of the navy, just in from Key West and Pensacola, who passed through Charleston and reached here last night, informs me that the people of Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida are secretly against secession, but they are controlled by South Carolina politicians, who lead in their councils, and must, therefore, submit for the time. He found Charleston in arms and eager for the fray—troops parading and blue cockades abundant.

It, having been announced that Judge Hemphill, of Texas, intended to deliver a conservative speech, he expressly authorized a contradiction thereof. He has heretofore been a conservative cooperationist, but has been drawn into the secession vortex.

Continued secession does not seem to affect the new loan, and, if another be made, it is thought that it will be taken at a rate a trifle above par.

It is understood that the Postoffice department will exact the same rigid obedience to postal laws, on pain of a withdrawal of the postal service in those States that have seceded, as in the case of South Carolina.

A letter from an officer at Fort Sumter states that after Gov. Pickens' demand for a surrender on the 11th, Major Anderson called a council of war. It was unanimously voted "SEVER."

This puts an end to the reports in the Post and other journals about the Major's being a secessionist and the likelihood of his leaving the Fort until he is ordered to.—N. Y. World.

Col. Aldrich, M. C. of Minnesota, received a letter to-day from a member of the Minnesota Legislature, stating that upon the receipt of the news of Major Anderson's gallant exploit in changing from Moultrie to Sumter, the Legislature passed an act changing the name of Toombs county to that of Anderson.

Letters received here from Charleston give gloomy accounts of affairs there. Slaveholders who formerly had to pay a tax of seventy-five cents on each of their slaves are now taxed sixteen dollars on each. It was in this way that ex Gov. Aiken was taxed fifty thousand dollars, which he informed the authorities he could not pay, because he had not the money. The reply to the excuse was that he could sell his niggers; and it is reported that he sold part to pay the tax, and moved most of the others to Virginia, and left for Europe himself. Another statement is that two booksellers were taxed one thousand dollars each. They refused to pay. The reply was: "Your books are worth the money." "They are worth a great deal more," responded the dealers. They packed up their stock and left Charleston, passing here a day or two since, en route North.

Senator Hunter has determined to retire from the chairmanship of the Committee on Finance. He will announce his withdrawal in a few days.

It is understood that the President will strike the name of Capt. Armstrong from the list of the navy as soon as that officer's official report is received.

There is no doubt that instructions have been sent to the commander of the Gulf or Home squadron for a speedy return of some of the vessels, on that station, their presence there still being required since the success of the liberal party in Mexico.

Chase has not been offered a place in Lincoln's Cabinet. This is asserted upon the best authority.

Cameron has not surrendered the invitation of Lincoln to a place in his Cabinet, nor is he likely to at present.

THE NEW BASIS OF COMPROMISE.—The Washington correspondent of the Herald telegraphs as follows:

The new project for purchasing all the slaves in the States of Delaware, Maryland and Missouri for ninety-one millions of dollars, and making them free States, as suggested in my dispatch in the Herald of the 14th inst., is attracting much attention here, and is being freely and favorably discussed by the leading presses of the country. The Republican view it as feasible; and although they are, as a body, opposed to recognizing property in man, yet they seem willing to yield that point. Many of them add to the above named States those of Arkansas, Texas and Louisiana. I have heard a large number of Southern gentlemen discuss the subject favorably, hesitating only as the mode of disposing of the slaves after they are free. Many Northerners reply:—Let them remain, and pay them for their labor, and teach them the principles of self-reliance. Others say:—Let them be emancipated gradually. Another class, embracing slaveholders, democrats and republicans, say:—Colonize them in Central America, upon the plan proposed by Mr. Blair, of Missouri, and Senator Doolittle, of Wisconsin.

The last proposition is fast becoming popular. But the proposition suggested in the resolutions introduced by Mr. Fullerton, in the New York Assembly, on Friday last, to gradually emancipate the slaves of the border States, in a manner that will prove satisfactory to the slaveholders, and send them to Hayti or Liberia, and that the general government remunerate the owners satisfactorily, is very well received here; and either that or Senator Doolittle's proposition, alluded to, will soon be presented in some form in one or both branches of Congress.

DUTY MUST BE DISCHARGED.—Daniel Webster, in the closing passage of his great argument in 1833, demonstrating that the Constitution is not a compact between the States—the same topic of which Mr. Madison wrote to him, "it crushes nullification, and must hasten an abandonment of secession"—held this solemn, deliberate language:

"Disorder and confusion indeed may rise; scenes of commotion and contest are threatened, and perhaps may come. With my whole heart I pray for the continuance of the domestic peace and quiet of the country. I desire most ardently the restoration of affection and harmony to all its parts. I desire that every citizen of the whole country may look to this Government with no other sentiments but those of grateful respect and attachment. But I cannot yield, even to kind feelings, the cause of the Constitution, the true glory of the country, and the great trust which we hold in our hands for succeeding ages. If this Constitution cannot be maintained without meeting these scenes of commotion and conflict, however unwelcome, they must come. We cannot, we must not, we dare not, omit to do that which, in our judgment, the safety of the Union requires. Not regardless of consequences, we must yet meet consequences; seeing the hazards which surround the discharge of public duty, it must be discharged."

A CORRESPONDENT at Pembroke, whose letter we publish in another column, gives some account of the ancestry of Vice President Hamlin. It seems that the ridiculous report that Mr. Hamlin had negro blood in his veins, sprung from the fact that his father was named Africa Hamlin. His grandfather, a patriot of the revolution, took a fancy to name a part of his nine children after the several continents, and Europe Hamlin, Asia Hamlin, America Hamlin, and Africa Hamlin were designations which four of his sons were obliged to carry to the grave. The old gentleman could hardly have anticipated that partisan malice would, in after years attempt to fasten the stigma of negro blood upon a descendant of the son who bore the unlucky name of Africa.

NEW YEAR'S day is set apart at the South for the hiring out of negroes by the year. The rates this year were very low. At Nashville, Tenn., they were from 30 to 50 per cent. less than last year; at Petersburg, Va., factory hands that brought $200 last year, went this year for $100, and women at from $60 to $100, according to age. Slaves are nearly 50 per cent. cheaper than a year ago.

THE steamer St. Johns, Captain King, on her last trip to Florida, had amongst her freight three boxes of merchandise marked "E. & M., Fernandina." On assorting the freight when nearing Fernandina the top of one of the boxes came off, and the contents were found to be United States mail bags. The other two boxes were then opened and found to contain more of the same sort, and the supposition is the greater part of the Florida mail was stowed away in them Captain King very properly nailed the boxes up, brought them back to Savannah, and delivered them to the postmaster. Who are E. & M.?—Savannah Republican.

THE SHIP CHANNEL TO CHARLESTON CLOSED.—The Savannah Republican of Monday mentions the arrival there on the preceding day of four ships and one bark—all from European ports—which had been prevented from going into Charleston harbor by the sinking of three vessels in the ship channel by the authorities.

A LITTLE boy kneeling at his mother's knee, to say his evening prayer, asked leave to pray in his own words, and with a child-like simplicity said—"God bless little Willie, and don't let the house burn up—God bless papa and mama—God bless me and make my boots go on easy in the morning."

THE FIRST MARTYR.—Mr. Bowlby, of the London Times, who was killed by the Chinese, will live in the history of journalism, as he is the first correspondent of a daily paper who has received the crown of Martyrdom while engaged in his professional duties in a distant land.

A SOLID cake of gold, worth nearly $50,000, has been sold to the Bank of New South Wales, and the quartz reef from which it was obtained will, it is estimated, produce $150,000 a year for many years to come.

THE eighty United States soldiers, who were compelled to surrender the fort at Baton Rouge to the State authorities of Louisiana, have gone to St. Louis.
