VALUABLE IMPROVEMENT
In Steam and Atmospheric Hammers.
LETTERS PATENT were granted on Sept. 4th, 1860, to Thomas Rogers, for a very simple and efficient improvement in Steam and Atmospheric Hammers, whereby the full stroke of the hammer is obtained, no matter what is the thickness of the mass of iron to be hammered—thereby effecting a great increase of power where large pieces of metal are to be operated upon, and a corresponding saving of expense.

PITTSBURGH:
WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPT. 4, 1861.

LATEST FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, August 31, 1861.

Gen. Fremont's Proclamation.

The vigorous proclamation of Gen. Fremont has fairly startled Washington from its propriety. It comes upon us like a thunder-clap in a clear sky, and clearly indicates that a new chapter has been opened in the conduct of this war. As yet there has been no indication given from any authoritative source as to whether it has been warranted by any order given by the government here, and there is much speculation on this point. The cabinet will in due time announce its policy; but until it does, distrust all reports sent on from here. It is a matter of too much importance to be made the subject of an informal communication by any member of the Government. There can be no question but that this stirring document will receive the hearty endorsement of the people of the free States; but its reception in Kentucky, Maryland, and Missouri, is open to some doubt.

The Baltimore Press.

You may soon expect to hear news of the suppression of one if not two of the Baltimore papers. The Exchange is so violent that there is no excuse for letting it live in this terrible crisis. It openly defies and maligns the government. Had General Banks had control of affairs in Baltimore instead of General Dix, something would undoubtedly have been done before this time. The Sun is on its good behavior, but is willing to stop the government when the blow can be made effective.—N. Y. World.

A Rebel Officer Killed.

Yesterday a Confederate officer was killed in a skirmish, and during the day the Secession flag on Munson's Hill was lowered at half mast in respect to his memory.

Felling and Burning Trees.

Our men have been hard at work felling trees and burning them, to open an effective range for our guns. The smoke has been rising from them in dense columns during the whole day, and filling the air in the vicinity.

The Rebels Busy.

The Confederate soldiers continue actively at work in throwing up outworks and strengthening and extending their line of intrenchments.

Offer of Troops to General Lander.

Brigadier General Lander has received an offer of the services of one hundred of his old mountaineers, from the Upper Arkansas and Platte rivers. These men, who have been successful under General Lander in some of the most desperate battles on record against the wild Indians of the Western plains, are cool, deliberate, and fearless. Such men would infuse courage and confidence into a whole army. They are used to fighting, and are invaluable as scouts and guides in an advance guard in an enemy's country, where coolness, courage and caution are required.

Drafting.

It is reported in military circles that at the present rate of increase in the army by volunteering we cannot fill the ranks full enough for the purposes of the war, and it is feared that drafting will have to be resorted to at last. Others, however, hold that a few victories such as we ought to expect in the chances of the war very shortly will soon swell our ranks sufficiently. Should drafting be determined upon, those sections of the North which have done least in recruiting for the volunteer regiments will be first called upon.

The Cape Hatteras Affair.

The news of the brilliant success of the naval expedition has put all in a good humor here, and is an omen of the coming season. Hereafter our navy will play a distinguished part in the war, and will strike terrible blows at the very heart of the rebel Confederacy. The captured Fort is to be held and strengthened, and it may be that Wilmington will be attacked.

Gen. Fremont's Proclamation.

If anything could be received here with greater satisfaction than the success at Hatteras, it was the proclamation issued by Gen. Fremont. I have not seen nor heard of one man who does not warmly approve the declaration that the rebels must lose their property, and that the Government will hold its existence as paramount above all consideration for the individual rights of the rebels. Declaring negroes free whose masters are in arms against the Government, strikes at the root; and while the leading rebels of the South cannot be increased to greater efforts by the overthrow of the Government than they have already made, the heavy owners of negroes will hesitate to risk their all by encouraging and aiding the chief traitors.—N. Y. Times.

More Arrests.

Two southern travelers from New York and Boston were arrested to-day and sent to Fort Lafayette. One was from Europe. Their trunks were seized, and on examination found to contain treasonable matter.

Gen. McClellan and the Capture of Hatteras.

Gen. McClellan sent a general order, giving in brief the news of our success at Hatteras, to every regiment, which was read at evening parade, and received by all with the utmost enthusiasm.

"The Defenders of North Carolina."

Among the trophies of the fight was a beautiful silk banner, presented by the ladies of Newburn, N. C., and inscribed, in appropriate terms, to "The Defenders of North Carolina."

Correspondence Captured.

The importance of the victory at Hatteras may be realized when I mention as items to the effect that copies of an extensive correspondence, developing the whole plan of the privateering scheme, have been captured.

The Landing of our Small Army after the Bombardment.

The army of Gen. Butler landed under a heavy fire and through a deep surf, which was up to their necks. Many of the boats were broken to pieces, but not one of our gallant fellows was lost.

The Arms.

It should be remembered that we have captured more arms than we have lost at Bull Run. The guns were of excellent manufacture, and the cannon of large calibre.

Privateers.

Two large privateers have been shut in the internal rivers running into Pamlico Inlet.

Our Numbers.

It is well to remember in illustration of the great victory we have gained, that we had but eight hundred men upon this expedition.

Big Bethel Avenged.

It is worth something, we must admit, that a gallant American officer should commit a blunder. The mistake attributed to General Butler at Big Bethel has been wiped out by his genius and courage at Hatteras.

A New Port.

The next step of the Government will probably be to open a new port somewhere in North Carolina, South Carolina, or Georgia, swim the cotton crop, and invite our English cousins and French connections to purchase.

Commodore Barron's Sword.

The sword of Commodore Barron, the traitor commander of the rebels at Hatteras, was presented to the President of the United States by Commodore Stringham this morning. Commodore Barron was captured in full regimentals, and wearing the eagles and the stars of the Government he had so basely deserted.

The Destination of the Prisoners.

The officers captured will be sent to Fort Lafayette, and the men to the Rip Raps and Fortress Monroe.

THE Day Book has stopped, as it lost the corporation advertising and its southern subscription, while the Daily News is on its last legs, and cannot possibly live after the city printing is withdrawn from it. The report that Mayor Wood had supplanted his brother as the editor of the News is contradicted.—N. Y. World.

THE CARBON DEMOCRAT OFFICE ENTERED.—Mauch Chunk, Pa., Sept. 1.—Some persons entered the Carbon Democrat office here last night, and destroyed the type, upset the stands, &c. The press was not disturbed.

The Scene of the Exploit.

HATTERAS INLET.

A geographical sketch of the spot where our naval forces have been so triumphant cannot fail to prove interesting to our readers. Situated about twelve miles from Cape Hatteras lighthouse is the inlet in question. It is known to the mariner by a low sand island, which was formerly a round-hammock, covered with trees on the eastern side of the entrance. The breakers seldom extend entirely across the entrance to the cove or harbor, but at nearly all times make on each side, and between them lies the channel. The bar should be approached from the northward and eastward, and vessels should keep in four or five fathoms of water along the breakers until up with the opening. The least water on the bar is fourteen feet mean low water, and the rise and fall of the tide but two feet. Once inside the inlet the mariner finds good anchorage in a hard sand bottom, except a few sticky spots at the head of the channel. The anchorage is affords protection from all winds except those from the southward and westward.

As an entrance to Pamlico, Albemarle and Currituck Sounds, the possession of Hatteras Inlet is of vast importance to the cause of the Union. With Ocracoke and Hatteras Inlets closed, North Carolina may be said to be completely shut in from the ocean. Privateers can no longer be sent to sea through the Dismal Swamp Canal and Albemarle Sound to annoy our commerce, and all communication between Virginia and Europe is effectually cut off. Newbern, on the Neuse river; Washington, on the Pamlico river; Elizabeth City, on the Pasquotank, and a number of other ports on the Roanoke and Chowan rivers, will also be included in the blockade. Pamlico Sound (an inland sea, eighty miles long and from ten to twenty-five miles wide, connecting with the Albemarle Sound on the North and the Pamlico and Neuse rivers on the West) can no longer be of any service to the rebels of North Carolina, now that its principal inlet has been closed. Albemarle and Currituck Sounds will also be effectually closed, and the light draught vessels which have been continually annoying the government, by bring up in supplies to the rebels, will no longer be permitted to carry on their nefarious traffic.

OCRACOKE INLET,

Which is about twelve miles southwest of Hatteras Inlet, is defended by a battery of 32 pounders, six in number. It is probably are this in the possession of the federal government, as it was well understood that Commodore Stringham would pay it a visit immediately after the reduction of Forts Hatteras and Clark. In a military point of view its possession is equally as important as that of Hatteras Inlet, as it affords an easy entrance to Pamlico Sound and its numerous tributaries. Through this inlet vessels from Tarborough, Greenville and Washington, on the Pamlico river, and Waynesborough, Goldsborough and Newbern, on the Neuse river, have been in the habit of proceeding to sea and carrying aid and comfort to the enemy at will. But thanks to our intrepid navy and the volunteers acting in concert, this game has been stopped, and North Carolina suffers from something more than a mere paper blockade.—N. Y Herald.

Enforcing the Confiscation Act—Twenty-Five Vessels Seized by the Surveyor.

A Rich Haul of Rebel Property.

Within the last 24 hours the Surveyor of the Port has taken measures of great magnitude and importance, involving marine property to the value of several millions, under the authority of the proclamation of the President, of the 16th ult., issued in accordance with the act of Congress providing for the confiscation of property belonging to parties living in States in insurrection against the United States. The fifteen days that by the terms of the proclamation were to elapse before it should be put in force, expired at 12 o'clock on Saturday night. R. F. Andrews, Esq., the Surveyor of the Port, having previously obtained information in regard to all the ships in the harbor which were owned in whole or in part by persons residing in the seceded States, gave notice to the revenue officers of command at the Barge-office to have in readiness fifty officers to await the orders of the Surveyor at 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

Punctually at that hour the Surveyor proceeded to the barge office with Inspector Thos. J. Brown, and employing the revenue cutter G. Bibbeck, with the fifty officers referred to above, for the purpose, proceeded to take possession of all the ships in port, belonging, in whole or in part, to citizens of States in insurrection, and placed on board of each revenue officers to hold the same until the necessary proceedings can be instituted for their confiscation under the act aforesaid, and their consequent forfeiture to the United States. There were twenty-five vessels seized in all, and of these about an equal proportion of ships, barks, brigs and schooners. Some of the vessels and cargoes are very valuable, and altogether it is estimated that several millions of dollars will probably accrue to the government—an amount at least that will prove a fair offset to Jeff Davis' privateering operations, with a slight margin of profit. The whole affair was quietly consummated, and by its sudden-ness took the parties interested by surprise.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Progress of our Arms.

The late brilliant naval victory at Hatteras, the energy of Fremont in Missouri, as displayed in his proclamation, and the activity and discipline which mark the career of McClellan on the Potomac, all conspire to give a new start to our arms and to augur favorably for their rapid progress during the Fall. The blow struck at Hatteras will be felt throughout the South. Sumter and Big Bethel are avenged, and even Bull Run is shorn of half its depressing effect. The pronunciamento of Fremont will strike terror throughout the border States, and the efficient discipline of McClellan, and the confidence his ability inspires, will fit the grand army now collected at Washington either for an overwhelming attack on the lines of the enemy or to repel him with disastrous and crushing defeat, should he be presumptuous enough to make an assault upon our fortified positions on the right bank of the river or resort to the desperate measure of dividing his army into two bodies, and crossing with one at Leesburg, descend to attack the city on the western and southern sides, while with the other he pressed our army in front. The effect of these recent events is to inspire courage in the Northern army, rekindle the military enthusiasm which was partially extinguished, and to bring the war to a speedy crisis, which cannot fail to result in victory to the Union arms.—N. Y. Herald.

More Prisoners for Fort Lafayette.

Mr. Frederick Grove, a Southern gentleman, who has been some time a resident of Brooklyn, was arrested by detectives Sampson and Devoe, on Saturday, at the instance of the United States Government. From intercepted letters written by the prisoner to "Extra Billy" Smith, of Virginia, it appeared that he was not only furnishing the rebels with valuable information, but had offered his services to the Southern Confederacy in any capacity in which he could make himself of use. In his letters he also stated that he had used his influence to effect the release of the imprisoned Baltimore Commissioners, and others in confinement on treasonable charges. The detectives yesterday morning took him to Fort Lafayette.

A Mr. Williams, arrested in Boston, and a man named Reynolds, whose apprehension was effected in Norwich, Conn., were conveyed to the same place, on similar charges, by the same opportunity. Mr. Williams, who is an Indian trader, went east for the purpose of purchasing bowie and scalping-knives, tomahawks, and other like implements, with which to furnish Indian tribes now in arms against the United States Government.—*N.
