FORTRESS MONROE.—Our correspondence from this important fort will attract attention, as our correspondent gives us the latest intelligence we have from that quarter. The whole fleet is doubtless gathered there by this time, as the steamer from Old Point reports passing the Annapolis fleet on Monday evening. That was the same boat which brought our letter.

THE DEATH OF COL. BAKER creates the most profound sorrow everywhere. In Philadelphia it created great excitement, and the city is shrouded with flags at half-mast. The greatest anxiety prevails to hear further details of the engagement among the relatives of the California regiment, which is composed mainly of Philadelphians. Col. Baker leaves a family—his wife being in California, and one of his sons a Captain in his regiment.

The Battle at Edwards' Ferry

Turns out better than the first dispatches indicated. Our troops maintained their position on the Virginia shore, and the remainder of Gen. Stone's force crossed over in the night, and on Tuesday Gen. Banks' Division crossed the river, where Banks himself established his head quarters and took command. This places the whole of the Potomac above Washington, on both shores, in our hands. The whole army is now in a position to crowd the enemy gradually backward, and he must soon make a stand somewhere, and that will probably be in the old place, at Bull Creek and Manassas. Our position is, however, greatly improved by these late movements, as, if the enemy maintains his old front, the Divisions of Banks, Stone and McCall can take him in flank, and if he has thrown his left wing round, and extended his right in the direction of the river, thus pointing northwardly, as is surmised, than our whole army can be brought into battle, as our right wing is now advancing from the Potomac to meet its left. We look for great events soon.

One can hardly survey these majestic movements of mighty armies without a feeling of awe. We hardly realize that this sublime spectacle is witnessed on this continent, and that this whole creation has been the work of a people habituated only to the arts, of peace, and all within the space of a few months. We have read of the great armies of Europe, where war is a trade, but never expected to witness such scenes here, unless in the process of centuries. A few months having passed, since the first hostile gun was fired, and now our land is shaken by the tread of hundreds of thousands, and skirmishes and battles are of daily occurrence, on a frontier extending for many hundreds of miles. Truly we live in historic times—times which may modify and fix the American character for ages.

Gen. Fremont.

The public mind is again agitated with rumors looking to the removal of General Fremont. That his removal is contemplated is now quite evident, but we think it a pity the subject is agitated to embarrass him while he is in the immediate presence of the enemy. While his removal will cause pain to his numerous friends, yet we have discovered no disposition to complain of the Government. The President is undoubtedly actuated solely by motives of duty to the country. If the President is convinced that the general welfare of the service and of the national cause in Missouri demands it, he will meet the responsibility and take the consequence. Fremont is undoubtedly popular in the west, and there are many who no doubt will take umbrage if such a step is taken. Some have even gone so far as to assert that General Fremont will rebel against any order for his removal and throw himself upon the masses of the west, who will support him. We do not believe this either of Fremont or of the majority of the western people. Both are too intelligent and too patriotic to be guilty of such folly and wickedness. The New York Tribune, which has ever been one of Fremont's ablest and most earnest defenders and supporters, looks forward to the possibility of the event in the same spirit as we doubt not will animate other patriotic friends of the patriotic "Pathfinder." It says:

"Abraham Lincoln is the commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States. It was he who assigned General Fremont to the command in Missouri. It was a great and arduous trust, considering General Fremont's almost military experience. That he has committed mistakes and errors in the discharge of that trust, we think more than possible. That he has been deficient in zeal or loyalty, no human being believes. That a more experienced soldier might have done better is by no means improbable. Had we been one of Mr. Lincoln's advisers, and had been asked by him whether to assign to General Fremont the command second in importance in the national service, we should probably have said, 'No—give him the command of a division in active service, but place the department in charge of some veteran like Hunter, or Sumner, or Sigel.' But to General Fremont was assigned the more trying position; and we have done what we could to have him properly sustained and enabled to prosecute his campaign with some chance of success. Should the Executive see fit to supersede him, we shall defer to that act as one clearly within the President's official discretion. The suggestion that the latter is jealous of Gen. F., or afraid of his bearing off the laurels of the contest is utterly contemptible. He may mislead; but Abraham Lincoln will never displace General Fremont except upon a clear conviction that the success of the national arms will thereby be promoted. Let the President never hesitate to place and displace military officers as he shall from time to time deem most conducive to the public good, and never fear that he will not be sustained in so doing, even by those whose judgment may differ from his own."

This is the right spirit, and the Tribune does no more than justice to the President in scouting the idea that any more than motives of the purest patriotism will actuate him, should he decide to remove General Fremont from his present command. We believe also that the whole Cabinet might have been included within this generous acquittal of unworthy motives or personal jealousies. The real danger, we suspect, lies in just the opposite direction, and the President will have to do violence to his feelings, and perhaps have to draw largely upon his moral courage, should he find a state of things existing which require him to issue an order for the General's removal.

THE BATTLES NEAR PENSACOLA AND NEW ORLEANS.—The late accounts, which appear in Southern papers, present the engagements on Santa Rosa Island and below New Orleans in a very different aspect from the rebel dispatches. By the time the whole truth reaches us, we expect to hear of Federal victories. On each occasion the affair was nothing but a midnight surprise. In the affair of Santa Rosa, they have been compelled to acknowledge a heavy loss in killed and wounded, and thirty men missing as prisoners to the Federals. Although reinforced, they did not renew the attack, but abandoned the Island. They no doubt came off second best.

The redoubtable HOLLINS was equally unsuccessful. He fled at the light of day, when, if his own report was true, he might have made some valuable prizes. The rebels may have their glorification. We wait our turn when the news reaches us from our own men.

RESIGNATIONS.—Long lists of resignations of army volunteer officers appear in the eastern papers. These, we presume, are rejections, or resignations from a dread of examinations. A dispatch from Washington says:

"The examination of volunteer officers is in progress here. Several individuals have already been rejected—the searching inquiries that are put to new officers showing their utter incompetency for the places to which they had been appointed on the organization of their regiments. The government is determined that no more incapable officers shall find their way into responsible positions in our army."

THE National Intelligencer, of the 22d, gives the following items in relation to the battle of Edwards' Ferry:

"The force of Gen. Evans, at the beginning of the fight, is stated to have been four thousand men, supported by four field pieces and three masked guns. He was, however, afterwards reinforced, so as to augment his strength from six to ten thousand men.

Gen. Stone crossed the river with his entire command, including Col. Gorman's and Col. Baker's regiment. He maintained his ground at Harrison's Island at the time of our latest reports, and Gen. Banks had moved from Darnestown to the river with the purpose of reinforcing him."

A GENTLEMAN who recently visited Washington informs the Pittsburgh Gazette that, in conversation with the President, the latter remarked, "I hate abolitionists as much as you do. I hold them in utter contempt." —Wheeling Intelligencer.

Our Wheeling contemporary has made a mistake in his authority. The Pittsburgh Gazette never published such an item, and we do not believe the President ever made such a remark. It is not like Abraham Lincoln.

LETTER FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

[Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

FORTRESS MONROE, Oct. 21, 1861.

The fleet continues to gather here, upwards of seventy vessels being now in the harbor, and this number does not include any from Annapolis. The arrivals are about twenty a day, and it looks, now, as if the fleet would contain over a hundred vessels.

A strong north-east wind is now blowing, and has been blowing for twenty-four hours. As long as it lasts, the fleet cannot sail, and it may last for a week to come. Such storms prevail at this season of the year, and this one looks as if likely to continue some time. The waves are running high in the harbor, and the smaller vessels pitch and rock with the swell of every billow, in a manner quite suggestive of sea-sickness, premonishing what we poor land-lubbers are to expect when we get afloat. Well, as the little boy said to his fellow, suffering under nausea when learning to smoke, "This is an ill action we all have to undergo."

The Pawnee steamed up this afternoon and went up to Newport's News, and we learn by the steamer Express, just in from there, that our pickets were driven in, there, this morning, by the Rebels, that the ambulances were leaving for the scene of action and that three regiments had been ordered out, just as it left, at eleven o'clock this morning. This indicates a battle up there, but we cannot get the details until after the mail boats leaves for Baltimore.

I do not know how many men we have at Newport's News; but the garrison at this post is too small to be of much service to them if they were attacked by a superior force of the enemy. The war vessels here, however, can pass up there and render essential service in sustaining the force on shore. Gen. Mansfield is to-day, I believe, with the regiment at that point.

It is probably the intention of the enemy to make a joint demonstration from Norfolk and James River, as soon as the expedition leaves, in the hope of getting out the Merrimac and other imprisoned vessels. This hope, however, is idle, as the Minnesota and other vessels will remain here, and treat them to an entertainment they little expect.

It is cold enough, to-day, with this unpleasant north-east wind, to suggest the idea that the season is now far enough advanced for the commencement of offensive operations with the 250,000 troops under McClellan. He has now the largest army of modern times in his hands, well-fed, well-clothed, and well-appointed in all respects. The civilized world is looking on impatiently, waiting for something to show that we are superior to the Rebels, and if some decision is not taken soon, there is danger that European statesmen will conclude we are unable to subdue the traitors. I am inclined to be patient rather than otherwise; but I may be indulged in expressing the hope that, if it is the true policy to gather our main force at Washington, leaving our outposts bare, our main force should demonstrate that necessity, at the earliest possible moment, by some achievement equal to its capacity. Holding a quarter of a million of men in idleness so long has nothing demonstrative in it. R.

From Missouri—More of the Affair Near Lebanon.

The Rolla correspondent of the Missouri Democrat writes on the 20th inst.:

Several participants of the fight near the Wet Glaze, on Sunday last, have arrived here. They confirm the main particulars of the affair, and more, too. The number killed was greater than was reported. A detachment was sent to bring in the dead. The enemy were found on the field with a flag of truce, engaged in the same duty. Sixty-two of the enemy's dead were buried, and one who was killed on our side. Four of the rebel wounded have since died, making a total of sixty-six dead on their side. A Captain and Lieutenant were killed. The Rev. Mr. Ernest, a Methodist priest of Lebanon, is reported among the dead. We took eighty-one guns, mostly double barrelled shot guns, which were broken around the trees by our men.

The enemy were posted on foot as infantry, with their horses in the rear, held by every fourth man. Capt. Switzler fired a pistol in order to draw the enemy's fire. As was intended, the rebels fired their pieces, killed Tucker, through an opening in the brush. Our men then made the charge, rushing forward with loud yells, which terrified the rebel horses and caused a regular stampede. Short work was made. Some managed to get on their horses. One hundred and ten of the latter fled to Lebanon, riderless. The enemy were pursued a mile and a half; thirty-four prisoners were taken. Lieut. Monigomery sabered six men, and a negro servant killed two and brought in one prisoner. The rebels numbered four hundred, while but eighty-eight of our men were in the engagement—about one to their five. The achievement was a brilliant one. The rebel prisoners said they did not expect to fight all officers; in their innocence they believed that because our men all had swords, they were consequently officers. I may mention that another force of 400 rebels was about two miles off when the fight took place. The commander of the latter, Lieut. Col. Somers, was captured by Lieutenant Stevens and brought to Linn Creek.

From Cheat Mountain Summit.

Capt. Charlesworth, of Ft. Clairaville, and other officers reached the city last evening from Cheat Mountain Summit. One of the gentlemen informs us that the report about the suffering of the soldiers up on the Summit and elsewhere is only too true. Some of the men have not had any overcoats this fall, and many of the blankets are those usually worn by horses, and do not weigh a pound. The hospital has been removed to Huttonsville, where many of the Ohio men are confined with a most malignant type of typhoid fever. The rebels have abandoned the Huttonville road, but are reported to be engaged in blocking up the Staunton road, under the impression that Gen. Reynolds intends pushing in that direction. The troops on the Summit have been ordered to build winter quarters there, which the boys says means freeze.—Wheeling Intel.

The Knights of the Golden Circle.

The testimony produced in the examination of Court at Cleveland has developed these facts:

1. That a secret organization exists in Ohio.

2. That its avowed purpose is to sustain the Democratic party.

3. That, as between the Rebels and the Administration, it sustains the Rebels.

4. That those engaged in building up the organization, are engaged in the Rebel interest, and are working to that end.

Comment is needless. If some of these home traitors are not hung, it will not be because they do not deserve it.

FROM SOUTH AMERICA.—A letter from Brazil says it was rumored there that Robert G. Scott had been nominated as the Commissioner of the Southern States to obtain their recognition as an independent Power. The Brazilian Government positively refused to treat with the agent or agents of the so-styled Confederacy. The papers were laid on the table, and the subject dismissed from their councils.

FINE AND VALUABLE PROPERTY AT PRIVATE SALE IN CHARTERS VALLEY.—Going to contract ill health, the undersigned has determined to dispose of his valuable property situate in Chartiers Valley, Chartiers township, Washington county, Pa., five miles from Washington and two miles from Canonsburg, on the Pittsburgh and Washington Turnpike, the Chartiers Valley Railroad passing directly through the farm. There are about forty acres of land, of the very finest quality in the county, all in a high state of improvement. The improvements are a FINE, LARGE NEW TWO STORY BRICK DWELLING-HOUSE, 44 by 54 feet, with all necessary out buildings constituting one of the most desirable residences in the valley in all respects—its location being heartily admired as an excellent neighborhood—churches and schools abounding—There is also a FLOURING AND SAW MILL, in good condition, with three run of stones. The mill is well patronized by the neighborhood. The terms, which will be liberal in view of the times will be made known on application to the subscriber. Possession of the Mill property can be had at any time, and that of the residence on the first of April ensuing. The attention of persons in want of a delightful home in one of the most beautiful and fertile valleys in the state, is specially invited to this property, as it is rare to find any so desirable in all respects in the market—If desirable, the mill property, with three acres of the land, will be sold separately.
