LETTER FROM HARRISBURG.

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 3, 1862.

The leading event of the day has been the Senate resolutions instructing our Senators at Washington to vote for the expulsion of Jesse D. Bright. The committee on Federal Relations reported back the Senate resolutions this afternoon—but in a position to require a two-third vote to take them up. The first effort failed on that account.

Mr. Bigham, of your delegation, whose experience enables him to pilot such things, took the matter in charge, and in an hour brought the House to a point, where a majority could take up the resolutions. A night session was then agreed upon, and after five hours of elaborate and eloquent discussion the amended resolutions passed finally, with only three nays, and two of these were Republicans, whose only objections were that the amended resolutions were not sufficiently emphatic. The amendment was offered by Mr. Cessna, of Bedford, and was understood to be acceptable to the Democratic side of the House. The great body of the Republicans preferred the original and it will be, I fear, Mr. Bigham, how-ever, of your delegation, took ground in favor of the substitute, as substantially saying all that can be necessary, and that in addition it was more respectful to Senator Cowan, and caused the vote of the Democratic members.

Judge Shannon spoke against the amendment, and in favor of the original, and in fact was one of the two Republicans who voted against the resolutions, finally passed, as not pointed enough.

Mr. Williams also preferred concurring with the Senate resolutions, on the ground of time, though he admitted the amendment more fully expressed his own views than the Senate resolutions.

Allegheny county was, therefore, fully heard on the occasion. It was the first time Mr. Bigham has spoken, beyond a brief business statement. By general consent on the Republican side, he watches every thing, and on the floor is yielded the leadership. This appears to satisfy him, so that he has left this discussion to his colleagues. This was Judge Shannon's maiden speech, and Mr. Williams has spoken a dozen times.

Nearly all the speaking members of the House had their say on the occasion, and in many respects the discussion was the ablest of the session. All the speakers treated Mr. Cowan with great kindness and consideration. Some of the Democrats appeared disposed to become his special champions. Mr. Bigham, however, emphatically declared that he would not permit this; that Mr. Williams and himself, had known Mr. Cowan from boyhood to this time. That a lifetime of active and cordial agreement on all subjects of general politics, entitled them to his continued confidence. I have no doubt Mr. Bigham's appeal in behalf of the amendment—that being more respectful, it would more greatly influence Mr. Cowan than the imperative tone of the original—had its effect. Quite a number of the Republicans had declared that they would never vote for the amendment, but on the sober, second thought, did so.

Mr. Cowan's true friends here are exceedingly anxious that he should reconsider his course, and vote for Mr. Bright's expulsion. In ordinary times his presence with the mark of Cain already stamped on his brow, could do little harm. But now when it is notorious that all our important state secrets are communicated to Jeff. Davis & Co., no toleration should be extended to traitors.

The changed aspect of the weather is a subject of much congratulation. Gen. McClellan, on Saturday, said to the Pittsburgh Commission, "Gentlemen, I hope you will be able to see with me, marked emphasis that if such a change occurred he believed the public would not be much longer left in suspense. I have no doubt that if we have ten days of severe winter that the Anacondas, as some of the Southern journals call our long lines, will begin to coil itself around its victim. I have confidence in the wisdom and sagacity of our Generals. I have an assured conviction in the justice of our cause, that the approving smiles of Heaven will be upon the patriotic cause, I believe that I am permitted to live in such an age, and so I think should each one of your readers. I hope that the next sixty days will show more important movements than the last half century has seen. I believe that before six months more are gone around the waning proportions of the great rebellion will demonstrate that the Almighty himself is not an indifferent spectator in the great contest between human freedom on the one side and human slavery on the other.

LATEST FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5, 1862.

Secretary Chase, in his letter to the Committee of Ways and Means, says that he has great aversion to making anything but coin, a legal tender in payment of debts; but it is at present impossible, in consequence of the suspension of the banks, to procure coin enough for disbursements; therefore, it is indispensable to resort to the issue of notes, and unless made a legal tender, discrimination would be made against them, and those who give a cordial support to the Government would suffer most from their depreciation. "The Committee," he continues, "doubtless feel the necessity of accompanying this measure by legislation sufficient to secure the highest credit, as well as largest currency, of those notes. This security can be found, in my judgment, by proper provisions for funding them in interest-bearing bonds; by well-guarded legislation, authorizing banking associations, with circulation based on bonds in which notes are funded; and by a judicious system of adequate taxation—which will not only create a demand for notes, but, by securing prompt payment of interest, raise and sustain the credit of the bonds. Such legislation, it may be hoped, will divest the legal tender clause of the bill of injurious tendencies, and secure the earliest possible return to a sound currency of coin and of promptly convertible notes."

I beg leave to add that vigorous military operations and unsparing retrenchment of all necessary expense, will also contribute essentially to this desirable and just object.

Before adjournment to-night, Mr. Spaulding read to the House a letter from Secretary Chase, urging the immediate passage of the bill as a necessity for the Treasury. He said he had drawn on the last instalment of the War loan, and feared that after paying it, the banks would refuse to take Treasury notes at par. In another note, written to-day, Chase says:

"True, I come to the conviction of the necessity of the legal tender clause reluctantly, but I reached it decidedly, and now support it earnestly."

Brigadier-Generals Meagher, Wadsworth and Slocum, of New York, and Cooper, of Md., are among the officers confirmed to-day. Assistant Secretary of War, Tucker, not passed upon.

It was the Navy Department that was responsible for the Burnside transports purchased or chartered by Howland and Aspinwall on commission, at two and a half per cent. Burnside's Expedition was originally intended for another destination, hence the excessive draught of the vessels.

Senator Wilson's bill, defining army pay, and emoluments, will be reported from the Military Committee, with a slight amendment. An effort will be made to put it on its immediate passage.

Senator Latham has received a dispatch stating that the California Legislature unanimously voted to assume her quota of the war tax, and pay in gold.

Friends here are exceedingly anxious that he should reconsider his course, and vote for Mr. Bright's expulsion. In ordinary times his presence with the mark of Cain already stamped on his brow, could do little harm. But now when it is notorious that all our important state secrets are communicated to Jeff. Davis & Co., no toleration should be extended to traitors.

LATEST FROM CAIRO.

Movement from Cairo—Twelve Steamers with Ten Thousand Troops leave Cairo—A bona fide Engagement to Take Place.

CAIRO, Feb. 3, 1862.

The steamers New Uncle Sam, Illinois, Aleck Scott, Chancellor, Fanny Bullitt, Keystone, City of Memphis, Emerald, D. A. January, Latan, Alps and W. H. Brown—all in charge of Com. Wash. Graham, Master of Transports, left here this morning at 10 o'clock, with 10,000 troops on board, to join a larger force at another point, for a bona fide active movement against the enemy. Further than that, saith not. Gen. Grant and Staff left on the W. H. Brown, and Gen. McClernand and Staff on the Alps.

A recent order places Gen. E. A. Payne in command at Cairo and its dependencies.

Twelve steamers laden with troops, in charge of Com. Wash. Graham, left here this morning at 10 o'clock, to join a still larger force at another point. I can truly say that this has every indication of a genuine active movement, and that something important will be accomplished. It may prove to be for either return, or somebody will get hurt.

Gen. Paine is in command here, and Col. Morgan, of the 10th Illinois, remains in command at Bird's Point.

Large reinforcements are expected here today and to-morrow. The following is the new order for brigading troops:

GENERAL ORDER NO. 5.

R. J. Oglesby, Senior Colonel of the brigade, commanding. [Special Correspondence of the Chicago Tribune.]

CAIRO, Feb. 2.—The grand expedition up the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers is about to start. The last of it moves in the morning. It will attack Forts Henry and Donelson, Shannon's report to the contrary notwithstanding, and Mr. Williams has spoken a dozen times.

Nearly all the speaking members of the House had their say on the occasion, and in many respects the discussion was the ablest of the session. All the speakers treated Mr. Cowan with great kindness and consideration. Some of the Democrats appeared disposed to become his special champions. Mr. Bigham, however, emphatically declared that he would not permit this; that Mr. Williams and himself, had known Mr. Cowan from boyhood to this time. That a lifetime of active and cordial agreement on all subjects of general politics, entitled them to his continued confidence. I have no doubt Mr. Bigham's appeal in behalf of the amendment—that being more respectful, it would more greatly influence Mr. Cowan than the imperative tone of the original—had its effect. Quite a number of the Republicans had declared that they would never vote for the amendment, but on the sober, second thought, did so.

Mr. Cowan's true friends here are exceedingly anxious that he should reconsider his course, and vote for Mr. Bright's expulsion. In ordinary times his presence with the mark of Cain already stamped on his brow, could do little harm. But now when it is notorious that all our important state secrets are communicated to Jeff. Davis & Co., no toleration should be extended to traitors.
