March.

By STATARD STATION.

With rushing winds and gloomy skies
The dark and stubborn Winter dies;
Far-off, unseen, Spring faintly cries,
Bidding her earliest child arise:
March!

By streams that hold in icy snare,
On Southern hill-sides, melting bare,
O'er fields that motley colors wear,
That summons file the changeful air:
March!

What though unfeeling seasons make
Thy days their field, they woo or shake
The sleeping lids of Life awake,
And Hope is stronger for thy sake,
March!

Then from thy mountains, ribbed with snow,
Once more thy roaring bugle blow
And East and West, and to and fro,
Proclaim thy coming to the foe:
March!

Say to the pulse, chilled and numb,
Say to the camp's impatient hum,
Say to the trumpet and the drum,
Lift up your hearts, I come, I come!
March!

Cry to the waiting hosts that stray
On sandy wastes far away,
By nearly isle and gleaming bay,
Bear Southern March to Northern May:
March!

Announce it light with welcome noise,
Where Glory's victor-eagles poise
Above the proud, heroic boys
Of Iowa and Illinois!
March!

Then down the long Potomac's line
Shall follow a storm on hills of pine,
Till ramparts ring and bayonets shine:
"Advance!" the Chieftain's call is mine:
March!

The Evacuation of Bowling Green a Mystery.

In a late letter from Nashville, a correspondent of the N. Y. Herald writes:

What induced the evacuation of Bowling Green, without even an attempt to test the strength of its immense fortifications and the bravery of the troops collected for its defence, is a mystery. History may ascertain, but there is nothing in contemporaneous events that are now known that affords any satisfactory explanation. At the council of war which determined its evacuation, Beauregard, Hardee, Floyd, Pillow, Buckner and Hindman, were present. Beauregard's opinion, that the place could not be held, is said to have had more weight than any other. The evacuation was determined and immediately commenced, Beauregard leaving for Columbus, Floyd and Pillow for Fort Donelson, with orders to fight to the last. The other Generals remained to superintend the removal of troops, artillery, ordnance and commissary stores to Nashville. The theory of future operations was that Donelson could be held against the federals. To make the defence more certain, Floyd and Pillow, with their brigades, and a number of the best regiments in other divisions, were moved at once to Donelson. This was eight days before the surrender of Donelson. The rebels proceeded rapidly with the work of evacuation. So confident were they of the impossibility of the enemy crossing the Big Barren and making an attack upon them, that the ordinary precautions to prevent surprise seem to have been neglected.

In the meantime, General Mitchell had received orders to advance his division towards Bowling Green, by the way of Dripping Spring. The next morning his division was across Green river, and the next day at Dripping Spring. Here a halt was made for orders from General Buell. Late in the afternoon of the 14th, the division reached Big Barren. During the night, in the midst of a terrible storm of rain, sleet and snow, the whole force, Colonel Turchin's brigade being in advance, was moved across the river, nearly in front of Bowling Green. The rebels had six trains of cars upon the track loaded with army stores and troops. General Hardee was in a bank conversing with the cashier. Directly the roar of a Parrott gun from Loomis' battery and the screech and explosion of rifle shell woke him from his comfortable security. "My God!" said he, "did you hear that? Yes, what was it?" said the cashier. "It was a cannon from the Federals." He immediately ran without his hat to the depot where his men were loaded upon the three rear trains. As he reached the depot a second shot struck the smoke stack of the forward locomotive. The third—fired at a distance of one and three-fourths mile—destroyed the tender. Hardee and his troops fled in the utmost confusion, and Bowling Green, with its granite fortifications, was ours.

Punishment of Children.

In the March number of the Atlantic Monthly the "Country Parson" has a charming little essay on "The Sorrows of Childhood," in the course of which he makes these remarks:

"An extremely wicked way of punishing children is by shutting them up in a dark place. Darkness is naturally fearful to human beings, and the stupid ghost-stories of many nurses make it especially fearful to a child. It is a stupid and wicked thing to send a child on an errand in a dark night. I do not remember passing through a greater trial in my youth three miles alone (it was not going on an errand) in the dark, along a road thickly shaded with trees. I was a little fellow; but I got over the distance in half an hour. Part of the way was along the wall of a churchyard—one of those ghastly, weedy, neglected, accursed looking spots where stupidity has done what it can to add circumstances of disgust and horror to the Christian's long sleep. Nobody ever supposed that this walk was a trial to a boy of twelve years old, so little are the thoughts of children understood. And children are reticent. I am telling now about that dismal walk for the first time. And in the illness of childhood children sometimes get very close and real views of death. I remember when I was nine years old, how every evening, when I lay down to sleep, I used for about a year to picture myself lying dead, till I felt as though the coffin were closing round me. I used to read at that period, with a curious feeling of fascination, Blair's poem, 'The Grave.' But I never dreamed of telling anybody about these thoughts. I believe that thoughtful children keep most of their thoughts to themselves, and in respect of the things of which they think most are as profoundly alone as the Ancient Mariner in the Pacific. I have heard of a parent, an important member of a very strait sect of the Pharisees, whose child, when dying begged to be buried not in a certain foul old hideous church-yard, but in a certain cheerful cemetery. This request the poor little creature made with all the energy of terror and despair. But the strait Pharisee refused the dying request, and pointed out with polemical bitterness to the child that he must be very wicked indeed to care at such a time where he was to be buried, or what might be done with his body after death. How I should enjoy the spectacle of that unnatural, heartless, stupid wretch tarred and feathered! The dying child was caring for a thing about which Shakespeare cared, and it was not in mere human weakness, but by faith, that Joseph, when he was a-dying, gave commandment concerning his bones."

In a Scotch town, a man from the country applied to a respectable lawyer for legal advice. After detailing the circumstances of the case, he was asked if he had stated the facts exactly as they occurred. "Oh, sir," replied the applicant, "I thought it best to tell you the plain truth; you can pit the lees tuilll's yersell!"

A COUNTRY editor noticing the decease of a wealthy gentleman observes: "He has died, regretted by a numerous circle of friends, and leaving a widow, as disconsolate as any widow need be, who has obtained the uncontrolled possession of five thousand per annum. More than twenty young men have sent letters of condolence to her."

"Love levels round your mouth during the music section," complained a member of a musical society to another representative. "Oh, yes, I have; was the reply; "I'd love to level the whole course of young ladies round my mouth."

In a Boston church, recently, a young lady fainted away during the sermon. Instantly two young men came to the sister's aid. Both were married men. The sister's husband was a bachelor.

River News.

The river was rising slowly yesterday, with full nine feet by the marks. The weather was warm, pleasant and spring like.....The Minerva was pretty active at the wharf, with an improvement in her arrangements. The receipts, however, continue very slight. The Minerva from Wheeling was the only arrival from below, while the Emma Graham for Zanesville, and Bill Henderson for St. Louis, constitute the departures. The latter boat had all the freight she could take beside a tow of four barges of coal.....Capt. Wm. B. Hazlett made a trial trip yesterday with his new boat "Estelle," and we are glad to learn that she worked to his entire satisfaction. She came up from the head of "Morrison," a distance of nine miles, in an hour and twenty minutes, which is considered good running for a new boat. She will be ready for business in a few days.....The Tycoon was sold at Cincinnati, on Saturday, to Captains Thompson, Dean and J. H. Pepper for $20,000. The latter goes in command.....We have good authority for saying that the rumor in regard to the burning of the Key West and Sunny Side is untrue. The latter boat was at Louisville at the time the disaster is reported to have occurred.....The Florence left St. Louis for this city on Friday last.

CINCINNATI.—The Gazette of Saturday says:

The weather on Saturday and yesterday was warm and pleasant, with some indications, last evening, of rain. The river is falling slowly. Business on the landing continues dull. The Magnolia arrived from Nashville on Saturday, without any freight. The Decatur from St. Louis brought up 300 kgs apples, 97 tons iron, and 100 bbls. whisky.

The departures on Saturday were the Tycoon for Pittsburgh, Dickson for St. Louis, Lebanon, under Government orders, for Louisville, Bostonia for Portsmouth, Firestone for Kanawha, and the Major Anderson for Louisville.

The arrivals yesterday were the T. J. Parks from Maysville, Owl, Ferry from Pittsburgh, and the Jacob Rinaker from Nashville.

The Fannie McBurnie came in last evening from Marietta with 200 bbls oil, 2,000 pcs baloon bulk. The Prima Donna with 250 kgs of nails.

The Com. Perry and Decatur left for Louisville.

FOR ST. LOUIS—The fine passenger steamer Linden, Capt. Harton, will leave to-day without fail. The Argus, Capt. Golding, will leave about the latter part of the week.

FOR THE UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER—The Fred. Lorenz, Capt. R. M. Mason, will leave for St. Louis and all points on the Upper Mississippi River this evening, positively.

CONSIGNMENTS—

BANKS.

DOLLAR SAVINGS BANK, No. 65 FOURTH STREET.
CHARTERED IN 1855.
Open daily from 9 to 2 o'clock, also on Wednesday and Saturday evenings, from May 1st to November 1st, from 7 to 8 o'clock, and from November 1st to May 1st from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Deposits received of all sums not less than One Dollar, and a dividend of the profits declared twice a year, in June and December. Interest has been declared semi-annually, in June and December, since the Bank was organized, at the rate of six per cent. a year.

Interest, if not drawn out, is placed to the credit of the depositor as principal, and becomes the same interest from the first days of June and December, compounding twice a year without troubling the depositor to call, or even to present his pass book. At this rate, money will double in less than twelve years, making in the aggregate EIGHT AND ONE-HALF PER CENT. A YEAR.

Books, containing the Charter, By-Laws, Rules and Regulations, furnished gratis, on application at the office.

DITHRIDGE'S XX FLINT GLASS OVAL CARBON OIL LAMP CHIMNEYS.
Patented October 8th, 1861.

The best that have ever yet been offered to the public. They are the best for the following reasons:

1. Because, being of an oval shape, the glass is every where equally distant from the flame, so that the draft is stronger and more regular.

2. The oval shape is better adapted to resist the effect of sudden expansion, so that it is impossible to crack them.

3. The glass is made largely of Lead and Peerless, giving a great degree of strength and elasticity. The chimneys which housekeepers have found to be so brittle as to crack, even when not in use, are invariably made of Lime Glass, instead of Flint Glass, of which ours are manufactured.

4. But the greatest advantage of these Chimneys is that which you best can appreciate, if you have, as any housekeeper breakfastime by the heat of the lamp, let her call at the manufactory and we will replace her cracked chimney for a dozen whole ones. This proffer does not include accidents or those cases of breakage where the chimney has, through inexperience, been screwed so closely to the lamp as to prevent its expansion when heated.

Manufacturers and consumers of Carbon Oil, who have felt the magnitude of the obstacle, which has existed in the great expense of chimneys, in the way of the universal use of the oil, have found a remedy in the Oval XX Flint Glass Chimneys, which has materially lessened the cost of Carbon Oil light to those who use them, and increased the consumption of oil consequent upon the lessened expense for chimneys.

For sale by J. C. Kirkpatrick, L. Thumm & Co., Rogers & Nesbit, T. Hayden, Lucesco Oil Co., Walden & Reinecke, W. Ogden & Co.; W. P. Wooldridge, W. M. Murray, or at the Manufactory, Washington st., near Pennsylvania avenue.
