WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 28.

☞ Much interesting matter will be found on our first and fourth pages this morning.

In pursuance of a resolution, adopted by the REPUBLICAN EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF ALLEGHENY COUNTY, at their meeting held on Saturday, May 24th, 1862, notice is hereby given that PRIMARY MEETINGS will be held in the various Wards, Boroughs and Townships of the County, at the usual places of holding elections in each Precinct, on SATURDAY, JUNE 21ST, 1862, for the election of TWO DELEGATES from each Precinct, to a Convention, to be held on the FOLLOWING MONDAY.

The Convention will assemble on MONDAY, JUNE 23, 1862, at the COURT HOUSE, at 11 o'clock a. m., to nominate a PRESIDENT JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS, &c., an ASSOCIATE LAW JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS, &c., and a COUNTY CONTROLLER, and to elect DELEGATES to the STATE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION, to be held in JULY, 1862.

The Primary Meetings in the townships will be held between the hours of 3 and 6 p. m., and in the cities and boroughs between 3 and 7 p. m., of said day. The appointment of the delegates in the townships will be by marking, and in the cities and boroughs by ballot. J. F. DRAVO, Chairman.

C. B. SCHOYER, JR., Secretary.

It is not improbable that the retreat of BANKS, as far as Strasburg, was planned some time ago, and that his falling back, so far, was in the programme. But his farther retreat, necessitated by the altogether unexpected reinforcement of the rebels, which made their force so overwhelmingly superior, formed no part of any plan conceived by our Generals.

It may be asked, however, what object was proposed to be gained by those who planned his falling back to Strasburg?

In answer, it may suffice to suggest that the movement Southward, which Gen. BANKS tells Secretary STANTON gave his troops so much satisfaction to hear of, was a movement of FREMONT's forces from the West, and of the division under SHIELDS, with Col. GEARY's command, returning from their feigned march to re-inforce McDOWELL, and forming a junction in the rear of JACKSON, so that he would find himself in a vice, and be compelled to surrender.

Whether this really was the plan, or whether, if it was, it will now fail through the superior strategy of the rebels, the near and inevitable development of events will show.

The Contraband Bearers of News not Contraband.

A special correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from Norfolk, Va., on the 23d, says:

A party of contrabands came into our lines this morning, direct from the vicinity of Weldon, N. C. As representatives of a large class of negroes who sometime since took leave of their masters and fled to the Dismal Swamp, they were a curiosity, and devoutly thankful. They stated that before leaving they communicated with others direct from Weldon, who assured them that Gen. Burnside, after a brief contest, had taken the place and then occupied it.

A report prevails here to-day, more in Union than in secession quarters, brought by fugitives direct from Petersburg, that Johnston's army was falling back, and that Richmond was about to be evacuated. Though there is an air of probability about the report, it is generally deemed best to wait for its confirmation before believing it.

There are many such instances of news thus brought by "contrabands," in the history of this rebellion. Indeed the only faithful news-bearers from the rebel lines, hitherto, have been the negro fugitives seeking freedom within the lines of our armies. Of all the so-called Union men, of the more orthodox color, or colors, in the spurious naturo-political doctrine of our self-complacent expounders of the Constitution, not one in a hundred, or in a thousand, has had the courage and the patriotic zeal to do and dare, on rebel ground for the Union cause, one-half what many and many a poor, unthanked, despised negro has done.

How many of these have, with a degree of skill and intelligence superior to what many of their detractors could bring into requisition, collected important facts respecting the numbers and the position of the forces of the rebels, and brought them to our Generals, when the same information could not possibly have been procured from any other source. Yet, the greatest and most permanent favor that any General, or the Government itself, has yet bestowed on these fugitives, as a class, is that equivocal, almost insulting, definition of their status, in a legal, or, rather, politico-military point of view, which the ready, resourceful wit and acuteness of a Boston lawyer, called to play the role of a General, first suggested and applied, and which by Generals, the Government, and the Public at large has since been acquiesced in and fully adopted.

The Nominations for Judgeship.

The Pittsburgh Post, in an article on the meeting of the Republican County Committee says:

There is evidently a conspiracy formed, in which the Gazette is implicated, to prevent Judge Ritchie from having any chance for the nomination. A straight forward man has but little chance among the multitude of tricky fellows, who have control of the Republican party of this county..

So far as the Gazette is concerned, the above statement is wholly false. The only member of the Committee connected with the editorial control of the Gazette, was in favor of a later Convention, and voted against the nomination of any candidate for some months yet. It is a rule of this paper, to take no part in the nomination of County officers. This is distinctly left to the people, and strict impartiality is observed towards all candidates. When a regularly constituted Convention has nominated a ticket, we give it a hearty support, unless there is some cogent reason for a different policy.

Although as individuals the editors have a right to express their preferences, and to use their influence in favor of their favorites, yet it so happens in this case, that we could be entirely satisfied with either of the excellent candidates for nomination, for Judges, whose names have been mentioned. They are all able lawyers and upright men, and the Convention will not go amiss in taking either of them.

Sick Soldiers in the District.

The number of sick soldiers and wounded in Washington and in the District of Columbia, does not fall far short of four thousand. Probably there never was such a frightful list of sick in an army as large and as well appointed as that of the Peninsula, so early in the season. Military men attribute it to the exposure of the men in March and April, working in the trenches before Yorktown, and as a necessary resolution of their exclusion from winter quarters in front of Washington.

Protecting Secessionists.

A correspondent of the New York Times, writing from near Bottom's Bridge, on the Chickahominy, states that when our army arrived at Bottom's Bridge, the rebel generals had just left the stylish residence of one Crump, where they had been feasting. The man Crump is a noted, avowed, and open secessionist, and has done everything in his power to aid the rebellion. The letter says:

As I was standing conversing with this contraband, Dr. Crump rode up to the headquarters of Gen. Hooker, on a stylish bay horse. He had come to make a complaint against some of our men, for stealing his wood, as he termed it. The General, with his peculiar suavity of manner, assured him no depredations upon the property of private citizens of Virginia would be tolerated, and referred him to the Provost Marshal of the Division, Capt. Charles L. Young, who would immediately take measures to remedy the evil complained of. A guard was dispatched to Dr. Crump's house, and one of the number carried with him a small American flag, which he raised on the gate-post fronting Crump's mansion. This proceeding proved hateful in the eyes of the Crumps, old and young, so much so that the Doctor—the elder Crump—modestly requested its removal from the gateway of his palatial mansion.

"What," says one of Capt. George Lefort's Zouaves, "you claim protection from our troops, and want me to take that flag down? No you don't Old Crump!" The Doctor's visage fell four degrees at this unheard of barbarity and unscrupulous tyranny on the part of the guard, and contented himself by closing the shutters of his windows on the front of the house, to show his contempt for the emblem of freedom.

Dr. Crump had the honor of dining Jeff. Davis, Magruder, Lee and Johnson last Friday, who bid him a hasty but affectionate farewell, as our troops pressed them too close to make it either convenient or desirable to prolong their stay with the "patriot, Dr. Crump," as Jeff. Davis styles him in a short epistle found by one of the guard stationed at his house. Crump is sound, if any one can be sound on the doctrine of secessionism, and he delights in making his doctrine publicly known, while claiming protection from the Government he repudiates in toto.

Our soldiers are astonished, and I confess I am a little inclined that way, to understand why the Government protects the property of notorious rebels, who embrace every opportunity to make their sentiments known in the heart of our camps; but such is the case. Before the rebel army, Union men were forced to fly from their homes, their properties devastated, their lands confiscated or sequestered for their devotion to our Government, consigned to exile and poverty for the crime of Unionism. They look for retribution upon the heads of their oppressors. They look in vain! Each blade of grass, in every notorious Secessionists' field, is fully protected by a special order. They turn up their nose at our legal tender paper, receiving nothing but silver and gold for their farm and dairy products, and demanding fabulous prices. It may be policy to protect the property of our enemy, keeping the horrors of war which they created away from their door—but I don't believe in it.

While rebellion is made so comfortable, and Unionism is at a discount, is it any wonder that there is no Union feeling displayed at the South. Secessionists are protected and petted by the Generals of both armies, while Unionists are harried and persecuted on the one side, and neglected on the other. How long is this policy to last?

Have the Rebels Left Richmond?

There seems to be a general impression that the rebels have evacuated Richmond—or at least have only sufficient troops to hold McClellan in check, so as to gain time, and that they do not intend to fight a battle there. The New York Evening Post says:

Gen. McClellan has doubtless been fighting with a rebel rear-guard ever since he left Yorktown; but it is not likely that this rear-guard is composed of less than half the rebel army, else McClellan would have driven it much faster than he has. If, as our telegraphic correspondent from White House reports to-day, on the authority of a balloon reconnoissance, Richmond is evacuated, then we may suppose the main rebel army already on its way to the North. Then we may expect to hear of a pell-mell pursuit by Gen. McClellan, in which, though the enemy may leap obstacles in his way, we can by proper energy, and the determination which the movement demands, come upon them, and either capture or destroy their whole army, before it can cross the Potomac. In this, Gen. Fremont's army could probably help, by joining the pursuing force, so that we should pick up our reinforcements on the way.

General Banks.

The ability displayed by Gen. Banks, in his retreat before vastly superior forces, a distance of fifty-one miles, bringing off with him nearly all his wagons, and all his guns and munitions, and fighting all the way, is very remarkable, when we recollect that it is not more than a year since he commenced his military career. Having only about four thousand men, and being suddenly and unexpectedly assailed by twenty thousand, and being obliged to start immediately, fighting two or three battles, and having to cross a wide river, it is amazing that he escaped at all. A march of thirty-five miles in one day, encumbered as he was, is a feat not often accomplished—but to fight and march both, and make thirty-five miles, is a great achievement. For energy, prudence and ability, Gen. Banks is second to few, if any, officers in the Federal service.

DISTRUST.—The colored people are beginning to show signs of distrust at the recent turn things have taken. They begin to doubt. This state of feeling is well illustrated by the following incident:—A Quaker gentleman accosted some of the contrabands at Fortress Monroe, and, after some brief remarks, asked one of them, more silent than the rest, whether he had ever seen a Quaker. On receiving a response in the negative, he told the negro that he was one. The contraband looked steadily at him for a few moments, and shook his head. Reproving him for his incredulity, the ex-slave replied: "You may be one, Massa, but I don't know it." "But I tell you I am; don't you believe me?" "Massa, I believe nothing that white man say now. He has been deceiving me all my life, and he deceive me no longer!" This is the general feeling of the negro, though his hopes and his faith in his final deliverance have hitherto borne him up.

HOW CONTRABANDS TRUST IN PROVIDENCE.—Lee's contrabands met on the street after old master and missus had run off, and the following dialogue ensued:

"Well, Sam, does yer tink the niggers kin shift fur theirselves, and de Lod will take care ob us?"

Samson—"Lor bress you, Sam, de Lod don't mind de niggers no how, but don't de good book say de Lord take care of de sparrow what ain't worth mor'n a farthing."

Sam—"Yes, I guess it do—but—"

Samson—"Well, den, if de good master take care ob de sparrow what's only worth a farthing, guess he takes care ob a nigger worth $1,200, sartin.

Sam—"Dat's so, Samson, did'nt tink ob dat scripter, guess you'll make a good preacher, comp let us travel on de strength ob dat tex."

General Saxton.

The telegraph reports that "Jackson and Ewell are marching on Harper's Ferry, where Gen. Saxton is in command." Gen. Rufus Saxton is a graduate of West Point, where he was subsequently artillery instructor and teacher of military strategy. He was recently on his way to the scene of his labors as Military Governor of the Department of the South, when he was shipwrecked on the steamer Oriental, where his coolness and intrepidity revealed the true character of the man. This accident brought him back to New Yord, where he was ordered by telegraph to report at Washington. When the news of Banks' reverse reached the government, his earnest entreaty for a temporary command was granted, and those who know him best say he will distinguish himself at Harper's Ferry, as he has already done in Missouri, Western Virginia and South Carolina.

He is just the man for this unexpected emergency—wise in council, prompt in decision and resolute in action. His firmness and judgment saved a general massacre at St. Louis when marching at the head of the column that brought the Camp Jackson troops prisoners into the city, and General Lyon, whose right-hand man he was, said that Saxton's military knowledge saved St. Louis and the State in the early throes of the rebellion. He contributed largely to the success of Gen. McClellan in that brilliant little campaign in Western Virginia, and was—at his own request—relieved from duty on Gen. McClellan's staff, when he was appointed Chief Quartermaster of Sherman's expeditionary corps. His labors there were herculean, and fairly earned him the stars on his shoulder-straps. He is emphatically a fighting man, and has always begged the government to assign him to duty in the field. He was offered the colonelcy of two regiments in Missouri (one of them Sigel's, whose warm friend he was,) and two from Massachusetts—one of them Gen. Wilson's crack regiment; but the government would not spare him from South Carolina.

It is a fortunate thing for the country that he happened to be in Washington when his services were so much needed. His ripened experience and superior military skill will serve to relieve the apprehensions of timid people—if such there be—that Washington is to be assaulted by the Confederates.
