Guerrillas Driven from Kentucky.

A dispatch from Frankfort, Ky., February 24th, states that Charlton Morgan, brother to the famous guerrilla chief John Morgan, and Theophilus Steel, another rebel, were taken prisoners in a skirmish near Lexington, last evening.

The rebels are reported moving on Mount Sterling from Winchester, closely pursued by Colonel Runkle with cavalry. They encamped within eight miles of Paris last night, but have left again, taking all the horses in the neighborhood. A battalion of the 14th Kentucky cavalry is now in Paris to guard the bridges on the Kentucky Central railroad, and the rebels are believed to be retreating toward the Virginia line, pursued by our forces.

Winchester is the county seat of Clark county, Ky., about twenty miles east of Lexington. Mount Sterling is about twenty miles northeast of Winchester. This guerrilla raid into the heart of Kentucky caused no little alarm, and will be attended with a serious panic in some places.

A proposition is before the Legislature of Kentucky to present Colonel McHenry, who was dismissed from the service by the President for ordering the return of fugitive slaves to their owners, with a reward. The matter has excited a good deal of debate.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Mail Dispatches to the Pittsburgh Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25, 1863.

DISSATISFACTION WITH THE RIVER BRIDGE BILL.—Great dissatisfaction exists among some Western members in regard to the passage of the bill authorizing the erection of four new bridges over the Ohio river. They complain that while the bridge at Louisville is required to be only 50 feet above low water mark, that at Cincinnati is left at the height fixed by the Legislature of Ohio and Kentucky, which is 120 feet. The effect of this unreasonable discrimination will be to prevent the passage of a large portion of the river trade from passing above Louisville.

Complaint is also made of the height of the bridges at Big Sandy and Maysville.

INSANE MINORITY.—Vote upon this bill has been but partially published, and, to some extent, incorrectly, a correct list of the yeas and nays of the Western and Northwestern members is appended.

Yeas—Aldrich, W. Allen, Babbitt, J. B. Blair, Blake, Bingham, Casey, Clements, Colfax, Cowan, Cox, Crittenden, Cutler, Dunn, Edgerton, Grider, Gurley, Haim, Harding, Harrison, Julian, Kellogg, Knapp, Lazear, Mallory, Maynard, Moulton, Mitchell, Noble, Norton, Nugent, Porter, Price, Robinson, Shanks, Shellabarger, Trimble, Voorhies, Wadsworth, Wallace, of Pa., A. S. White, O. A. White, Worcester, Yeaman.

Nays—Holman, Hutchins, McKnight, Pendleton, Potter, Riddle, Trowbridge, Washburn and Wilson.

Not voting—Covode, Horton, Lovejoy, Law, Moorhead and Noell.

A DELEGATE IN CONGRESS FROM THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—Mr. Delano introduced in the House, yesterday, a bill empowering the voters of this District to elect a delegate of Congress, like the Territories. It prescribes the establishment of voting precincts by the President, and an election on the first Monday of May next, and on the first Monday of January every second year thereafter. The inspectors are to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, and all white male citizens of twenty-one years and upwards, residents of the District one year, are eligible as voters.

THE SMALL CHANGE NUISANCE OVER.—It is officially announced that the proper depositories now have an abundant supply of specie currency, and will hereafter be able to meet all demands. Over fifteen millions of dollars are already in circulation, and the manufacture is going on at the rate of a million every five days.

The Queen of the West.

The ram Queen of the West, which has won so much glory for herself by running the Vicksburg blockade, and by other notable exploits, has been captured by the rebels up the Red river, whither she had gone in search of rebel steamers and fortifications. The news is contained in the Richmond Examiner of the 21st, telegraphed from Port Hudson. The capture of the rebel transport Eva by the Queen of the West has already been announced. It appears that the pilot of the Eva was taken on board the Queen, and compelled, under guard, to pilot her up the river. He succeeded in deceiving the Commander of the Queen as to the positions of the rebel batteries, and when she had reached Gordon's Landing, she was fired into and disabled. She drifted to the opposite side of the river, when all but thirteen of her officers and crew succeeded in escaping to the transport De Soto. The Queen and all her armament, supplies, &c., remained in the hands of the rebels. According to the rebel report, a rebel steamer subsequently pursued and recaptured the Eva, which had one of her wheels disabled, and the De Soto was burnt, to prevent her capture. It is also stated that the National gunboat Indianola had gone up the Red river to attempt the recapture of the Queen. We shall probably soon get our own version of this whole affair.

A Canard.

The story which reaches us from Europe relative to the presence of a rebel privateer scouring the waters of the Indian Ocean is manifestly a canard. It resolves itself into the simple fact, as related by the Calcutta Englishman, that the bark Sellim, Capt. Simpson, laden with bound from Melbourne, the off Keeling's Island, near the Straits of Sunda, to the southward of the equinoctial line, a large black man-of-war steamer lying to under three topsails, jib and spanker (no steam apparent) shut up and a "suspicious" looking craft sighted the Sellim she bore away for her under all canvass, and when sufficiently near to make out the English flag rounded to again under small canvass; and showed what the captain of the Sellim says has been described to him as, and which he had no doubt of being, the Confederate flag. This is about the entire story.—N. Y. Herald.

THERE is a fearful mortality among the rebel prisoners brought to Chicago from the Bourbon secret. Nearly one hundred (93) died within the past week. They were in a wretched condition when they arrived, nearly one thousand being under the Surgeon's care. The diseases are those induced by want and exposure in the rebel camps, being principally typhoid fever, pneumonia and other afflictions of the lungs and throat. All the Surgeons, both Union and rebel, have their hands full. The hospitals are all crowded, but the barracks are comfortable.

FLAX.

Sow flaxseed, and make your own linen! This is an advice which the thousands of prudent farmers who read the Gazette will heed this spring. When raw cotton is selling for a dollar a pound, a word to the wise is enough. The culture of flax is already profitable, and is going to be more so, for when peace is restored, cotton will not again be king. I am neither a prophet, a party politician, nor an abolitionist, but will venture the prediction, that peace with slavery will never be restored again in permanent union. "The Union as it was," is a neat and attractive party watchword, but it is an utterly impracticable and obsolete proposition if intended thereby that the Union shall be as it was in regard to slavery. That is no longer possible in the nature of things. The Southern people themselves declare it is impossible, and in this they are correct. Either the Confederacy must succeed or slavery perish. If the South succeeds in her separation, it is evident she will not supply the North with cotton as abundantly as formerly. Popular prejudice, which is always proportionate to popular ignorance, tariff and revenue laws, free trade with England and France, and new channels of labor consequent on a separate nationality, will all tend to prevent an abundant supply of cotton from finding its way North.

On the other hand, if the South fails in her present attempt, she will be restored to the Union, piece-meal as in the instance of Missouri, Kentucky, Western Virginia and Maryland; and this appears the more probable result at present. But in that event the slave system will be gone, and the Southern labor thrown into confusion, and require to be reorganized on a free basis, which will not only delay the production of cotton for a time, but tend to divert labor to some extent into new channels.

In any event, therefore, cotton will not again have the power to exclude flax from the profitable crops of the Middle and Northern States; and our farmers may congratulate themselves on their practical knowledge of its cultivation, for we have accordingly the farmer who is not at well posted on the culture of flax as of oats or hay; and there are few farm houses which cannot yet produce the old spinning-wheel and reel in good condition, from some obscure corner of the garret; the self-same old implements, which when the busy hands of the mother or the grandmother produced those soft white linen sheets and tow-cloth covers yet remaining on the bed-ticks in the spare bed-room.

The crochet needle and the piano having long ago supplanted them in the hands of the fair daughters; but I shall not now pursue the subject in that direction. Sow your flax seed anyhow, and, if for want of female help or skill, you are unable to manufacture it into cloth at home, you will find thousands of poor women, who have lost their husbands or fathers in the war, who can turn it into cloth for you for far less than you can buy the cotton fabric; and then you will have something that will afford you twice the wear of the cotton article. Then, linen factories, as in Ireland and Holland, will soon spring up, where you can get cash for the raw material. Even at present prices at the oil mills and paper stores, you can sell the seed and the tow for more than will pay all cost of cultivating and gathering and cleaning the flax.

But go into it moderately at first. Half an acre or no will do to begin with, and for that much you will never miss the time. The labor of it can be all done in the interval of other farm work, and it can be cleaned at a season of the year when you can do no outdoor labor. The end of next month or early in April is the time to sow your seed, if the weather and the condition of the ground is suitable.

In my next I may give some hints to those unacquainted with its culture, and now close for the present. PARAGRAPH.

GEN. ULLMAN'S LOUISIANA NEGRO BRIGADE.—It is stated that Gen. Daniel Ullman, of New York, is to command a negro brigade in Louisiana. He goes out there with a complete set of white officers for two regiments, the rank and file to be raised from the contrabands. A son of Vice President Hamlin is to be one of the colonels, and the visit of the Vice President down east is said to be for the purpose of arranging the organization of these regiments.

THE New York World, a few days since, asserted that Vallandigham had not five thousand supporters in the loyal States. In the House, on Tuesday, Vallandigham pronounced the World an Abolition paper!

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO COAL DEALERS. CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE, Louisville, Ky., February 20th, 1863. Proposals will be received at this office until 12 m. on the 5TH OF MARCH, 1863, for furnishing Coal to Steamers under Charter by the Quartermaster's Department at Cairo, Ill., Paducah, Ky., Evansville, Ind., Hawesville, Ky., and Shawneetown, Ill. The Coal to be delivered in Boats, Barges or Flats, alongside of the Steamers, and the Contractors to furnish shovels, &c., to load the Coal on the Steamers. Contractors will state the length of time for which their proposals will be binding, and the price at each point to be stated separately. Payment to be made on receipt by the Depot Quartermaster at the amount delivered. Contractors will require the boats to produce their charter or other satisfactory evidence to show that they are in Government employ. Proposals will also be received until the same time for the delivery of from 50,000 to 100,000 or more bushels of Coal, to be delivered at Smithland, Ky., to the Quartermaster at that post. The Coal to be delivered in boats or barges. If in boats, the boats to be furnished free of charge to the United States. If in barges, the Government to have the use of the barges for thirty days from the time the Coal is delivered at Smithland; and if detained longer than thirty days, the Government shall pay for the hire of the barges at the rate of Three ($3) Dollars each per day, commencing after the expiration of the thirty days, until the barges are delivered again in the contraband or his authorized agent at Smithland. The Coal delivered at Smithland under this contract shall be inspected and measured by a sworn city inspector, duly authorized for this purpose, at Louisville, Ky., and sealed certificate of measurement shall be presented to the Quartermaster at Smithland on delivery of the Coal. All barges must be approved by disinterested parties, and in case the hire of any or all of the barges should at any time equal the appraised value of the barge, then the barge shall become U. S. property, and proper release papers shall be given by the contractor. The name, number and mark of each barge must be given in detail. The Coal to be delivered before the 31st of March, 1863. Contractors will please give full name and post-office address. W. JERKINS, Capt and Assistant Q. M., U. S. A.
