IMPORTANT TO RAILWAY COMPANIES, MILL OWNERS, &C.

We have erected and have in operation, near the city, an extensive Laboratory for the manufacture of

Lubricating and Paint Oil,

By a new and ingenious scientific process, and now offer and commend to public notice and patronage three grades, A, B and C respectively, of 1st, 2d and 3d quality LUBRICATING OIL.

Wherever these lubricators have been tested, they have been pronounced greatly superior to any of the preparations lately offered in the market.

The "A," or best quality, is designed to take the place of the best Sperm Oil, and for use on cotton, woolen or other machinery. The "B," or 2d quality, for railway and other like machinery; and the "C," or 3d quality, for heavy and coarse gearing, &c.

The PAINT OIL has been tested by numerous Painters in this city, and proved to be a capital substitute for boiled Flaxseed Oil. Indeed many Painters give it a decided preference.

These Oils are now extensively manufactured at our Eureka Lubric Oil Works.

As the process is scientific and uniform, customers can rely on the uniform excellence of these economic equivalents of sperm and Flaxseed Oil. A trial and test is confidently invited.

The Late Francis J. Grund.

The Philadelphia North American has the following notice of the late Francis J. Grund, Esq., of that city, whose sudden death was reported in our dispatches of Wednesday:

On Monday night a remarkable address, as reported in full in our columns, was made before the Union League of this city by Mr. Francis J. Grund. Mr. Grund had long been identified with the Democratic party, and was one among others to undertake the enterprise of the Age newspaper. Disgusted with the course marked out by his associates for that journal, he withdrew his interest, and transferred his allegiance to the Union and the salvation of the country.

On Tuesday afternoon General McClellan arrived in this city. A plan for a serenade to him was soon adopted, and Beck's band was hired for the purpose. The reporters promptly heard of the affair and followed it up. The band moved to the house of Dr. McClellan, on Walnut street. They prepared for a serenade, but the General was not there. It was understood that he was at the house of his mother, in Spruce street, and thither the band proceeded, accompanied by a crowd chiefly recruited from the singing halls and cassinos.

Songs had been sung that evening to the motley audiences in the various concert saloons, eulogising Gen. McClellan, and with cheers and yells the procession moved toward the supposed place of that gentleman. Francis J. Grund resided but a few doors distant. The crowd approached with yells and groans intermingled, rendering night hideous with their din. Mr. Grund was in his house as the mob passed by. He had received certain anonymous letters threatening him with death for his abandonment of his former party. As the mob passed his house they lit matches, in order to read the names upon the door plates. That they intended any injury to him is doubtful. But the yells for McClelland and Woodward were so fearful that Mr. Grund became alarmed for his own safety. He left his house by a back door, and made his way to the station house at Fifteenth and Locust streets. His object undoubtedly was to ask for a police force to guard his house. He entered the vestibule, but was in an almost speechless condition. He could only say "send for a doctor—bleed me," when he sank to the floor. Dr. Huston was at once summoned, but too late. Mr. Grund was a corpse when he arrived. Death resulted from apoplexy, induced by excitement. He left only a widow and a son. For the latter, Police Lieutenant Paullin at once dispatched a messenger. It was done tenderly and kindly, but when the young man learned of the death of his father he fainted upon the side walk. The widow lost her mind when the tidings reached her, and at this moment lies in a critical condition.

To this we append the following biographical sketch, which we find in Forney's Press:

Mr. Grund was born in Vienna, and at the time of his death was over fifty years of age. He was, in many respects, a most remarkable man. He came to this country about thirty years ago, and has taken a leading part in American politics. In the early part of his career he was a professor of languages, and was accounted one of the finest mathematicians in the country. He contributed several works to our literature—the first being two volumes on the moral, social, and political relations of the American people, published in 1837, and at the time creating great attention. Mr. Charles Sumner, writing in the North American Review, said: "In approaching the consideration of its merits, we are struck with the singular correctness, force, and open eloquence, with which it is written. No other work within our knowledge presents a view so complete of our resources in every department of life." The tribute of Mr. Sumner to Mr. Grund's authorship might be accepted as a fair criticism of his life. He was essentially a scholar, and the range of his information was varied and exhaustive. His knowledge of the French, English, and German languages was thorough; and in addition to these, he was familiar with Spanish, Italian, and the classical languages. His fondness for political life did not give him the leisure necessary to cultivate science and literature, and, with the exception of a small work on the present condition of politics in Europe, printed recently, he has been constantly engaged as a journalist, and an active politician. In 1840 he published a newspaper in this city, called The Forum, and, under the Administration of Mr. Polk, was Consul at Antwerp. He subsequently resided in Washington, acting as a correspondent of many of the leading journals of the country, and possessed the friendship and confidence of most of our public men. When Mr. Buchanan was chosen President, Mr. Grund became our Consul at Havre, and on his return he resided in Chicago. He subsequently came to Philadelphia, and was for some time connected with the editorial staff of The Press. He was not disposed, however, to endorse the policy we felt called upon to advocate. He believed that the temper of the Democratic party was for war, and that the organization might be committed to that policy under loyal leaders. As our own opinion was that the organization was demoralised, corrupt, and an agency of treason, Mr. Grund entered into a newspaper enterprise of his own—the result being The Age of this city. Under his management The Age exhibited a great amount of taste and ability, and in its general tone was loyal to the Government, and in favor of the prosecution of the war. Mr. Grund made an earnest effort to reconcile his duty to the country with his duty to the organization, but he found it impossible—to use his own idea, the association became "intolerable," and despairing of the plan he so deeply cherished, he abandoned The Age, and, repudiating the nomination of Mr. Justice Woodward, became an open and determined supporter of Governor Curtin. He became, as many Democrats had become before—convinced that war was caused by treason, and treason by slavery, and that the evil would die away when the cause was removed. In this faith Mr. Grund died, his last public appearance being at the rooms of the Union League, the evening before his death, where he delivered one of the ablest and most eloquent arguments of his life in defence of the Administration. Its delivery caused a profound sensation, and we find it now being discussed by the leading journals of the country. In this cause Mr. Grund was most enthusiastic, and in conversing with the writer of these lines the day before his death, he said that nothing in his life gave him more pride and pleasure than the opportunity he enjoyed of supporting the Administration. Had Mr. Grund lived he would have been of great service to the country. The end of his life was glorious, but it is not with such a feeling that we write his obituary. We feel that America has lost one of her most erudite scholars, and one of her most accomplished citizens. It is a loss that the press will keenly feel, and that we shall not soon cease to mourn.

In an address delivered at Williamsport, the Hon. Wm. D. Kelley recounted the circumstances of Judge Woodward having, previous to the rebellion, in the Supreme Court room, decided that "if a separation should take place between the North and South, he would prefer that the line should be drawn north of Pennsylvania." Mr. Kelley gave the names of several gentlemen of high position who heard Mr. Woodward make use of the expression above quoted.

WHILE Adjutant General Thomas was on the passage up the Mississippi from Helena, recently, he discovered a Lieutenant Colonel of a Missouri regiment intoxicated, and behaving in a most shameful manner. The general told him he had disgraced the service, tore off his shoulder straps, put him under guard, and dismissed him from the service.

The Rebel Rams in England—How they are to Get Out.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger says:

A letter received by the America gives us the latest dodge which rumor says is to be resorted to to secure the departure of the suspected iron-clads. These vessels are to be unflinchingly claimed as French property, and are to be paid for in French gold. When they are ready for service, which will include everything save armament, they are to be handed over as by contract; and if there is an English impediment in the way of their departure, then the Emperor's government is to be appealed to to see that the rights of his subjects are respected. It is difficult to see, if such is the case, how the British government is to maintain its position in seizing the rams (admitting that they have been seized), as the transaction will appear a perfectly bona fide one, and free from interference by the government or any party connected therewith. But it is now alleged that the government has not interfered, and that the reports to the effects that it had were unfounded. The most that is now claimed on the part of those who are endeavoring to detain the suspected vessels, is, that Mr. Laird had been requested to give the particulars of the contract, and what he believes to be the destination of the vessels. But from this 'explanation' very little satisfaction need be looked for. He will, of course, show that the contract was made with a French house, and probably that part of the money has already been paid in French currency—but upon the question of the destination of the vessels he will very likely plead the most profound ignorance."

Daniel S. Dickinson on Spurious "Democracy."

In a letter to a Union mass meeting at Buffalo, last week, Attorney General Dickinson thus characterised the Seymour "Democracy:"

It may be Democratic according to Copperhead acceptation, to encourage this perjured, perfidious rebellion, by every possible mode of instimulation. It may, according to the same idea, be Democratic to present to foreign despots the exhibition of a divided people upon a question which concerns our existence, and thus encourage them to do openly what they are doing secretly. But it is not the Democracy in which I was raised, and I repudiate it and all its belongings. There are to-day more Democrats upon the Union ticket than upon the Copperhead, deducting the Know Nothing and backsliding Free Soilers on theirs; and as to the principles which they seek to establish as vital to Democracy, such Democratic blood, in the days of Gen. Jackson, would have vomited a leech without the aid of warm water.

THE London Herald, the most uncompromisingly secession of the daily papers of that city, does not try to conceal its anger at the detention of the rebel rams. In its issue of Sept. 16th, it has a long leader devoted to the abuse of Earl Russell and our Government. It says: "The Yankees have bullied the British Government, and tried to mislead the British people; they have appealed by desperate menaces to the fears of Lord Russell, and by falsifications of history to the gratitude of the country; they have even brought before a court of law a case utterly devoid of legal foundation, and supported it before an English jury by the evidence of a set of scoundrels such as are rarely seen in the dock, and rarely indeed in the witness box, and now they have busied themselves in trying, by threats, coaxing, teasing, expostulation, downright bullying, to force the Foreign Secretary to do for them, in violation of law, what the law refuses. We are more scandalised than surprised to learn that they have succeeded. We never believed in the much vaunted spirit of Lord Russell."

SLEEPING IN THE MOONSHINE.—A boy, thirteen years of age, named Henry Lowry, residing near Peckhamrye, Ohio, was, on Tuesday night last, expelled from his home by his mother for some trifling misdemeanor. He at once ran away to a cornfield close by, and on lying down in the open air fell asleep. He slept throughout the night, which was a moonlight one. Some laborers on their way to work, seeing the boy apparently asleep, aroused him. The lad opened his eyes, but declared he could not see. He was conveyed home, and from thence to an ocular institution, where medical advice was obtained. The surgeon affirmed that the loss of sight resulted from sleeping in the moonshine.

The boy is totally blind, and few hopes are entertained of his recovery.

POPULAR DELUSIONS.—It is not to be wondered at, after all, that Jeff Davis and his followers have their admirers, even in the loyal States. In the heart of mankind there is a leaning to untruth, and a falsehood is credited where a fact is not believed. Mahomet died as king; Christ as malefactor. Nor is there a criminal sentenced who has not his admirers. So it is not strange that the arch-conspirator should be idolized by some morbid dispositions, even while, like Samson, he has taken hold of the pillars of our liberties only to hurl down the temple of freedom. Thanks to a loyal people, he is being foiled, and in a few years his name will be classed with those of Iscariot and Arnold.

A MEAN FRAUD.—The Copperhead organs, in their desperate efforts to obtain the sanction of respectable and responsible names to prop their failing cause, are publishing a letter of General Cass, endorsing their extreme peace and dirt-eating doctrines. It is only necessary to say that General Cass, who writes the letter referred to, is not General Lewis Cass, the sterling old patriot and Democrat, of Michigan, who resigned from the Cabinet of James Buchanan, at the time the O. P. F. was selling out the country to a pack of traitors and doughfaces; but General George W. Cass, of Pennsylvania, a very different person. The Copperheads must be in a bad way to resort to such a miserable trick and counterfeit as this.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A NEWSPAPER, called the Spectator, printed in the German language, and published in Erie, has taken down the names of Woodward and Lowrie, and ranged itself under the banner of Curtin and Agnew. So goes the campaign, and from every quarter we hear similar words of comfort and encouragement.

FALL AND WINTER GOODS.—We desire to inform our friends and the public generally, that we have received our

SEWING MACHINES.

GET THE BEST.

WHEELER & WILSON'S

SEWING MACHINES;

THE HIGHEST AUTHORITY IN THE LAND.

[From the Scientific American.]

"We are having a great many inquiries from various parts of the country, and as we cannot conveniently reply to them by mail, we thought it proper to state our opinion through them in this public manner. We use the and say, in regard to it, that it is without a rival. No other machine is so well adapted to all purposes of domestic use. It is simple, not easily put out of order, and in point of effectiveness and finish, is unequalled. We state this much in regard to this excellent machine upon our own experience, and thereby to save correspondents considerable time and postage in answering letters."

Call at the Agency, No. 27 FIFTH STREET, and see them in operation.
