MARTIN LEWIS & CO'S
CLOTH STORE,

Exclusive Sale of Gentlemen's Wear.
THE ONLY STORE OF THE KIND IN BALTIMORE,

No. 223 Baltimore st., second store west of Charles st.

WE shall remove in time for the Spring Business, from our present Store, No. 212 Baltimore street, east of Charles street, to our new and commodious Warehouse now building, No. 223 Baltimore street, on the same side of the street, but two doors above Charles where we shall be happy to see our friends and customers.

The experience of last fall, when first we took up this Branch of the Dry Goods Business exclusively, convinced us beyond a doubt, that a business like ours would meet with the same encouragement here, as similar establishments for many years past had enjoyed in the Northern Markets; and that Country Dealers, by a single trial, would see the actual necessity to divide their purchases, and, in no instance, to buy their Woollen Goods where they bought their Domestics, Dress, or Fancy Goods. We have, therefore, made such arrangements for the coming Spring Trade, that we confidently invite the attention of all Dealers visiting our Market to our Establishment, assuring them, that in the extent of our Stock, Quality, or Prices, we shall be second to no House in the Country.

We have had our own Buyers in Europe, and will be kept supplied during the season, with the newest and choicest Fancy Goods in our line of business, which England and France can produce for Pantaloons and Vestings, as also Scarfs, Cravats, Suspenders, Gloves, Handkerchiefs, and other articles adapted for Men's wear.

For the [illegible]

LECTURES UPON [illegible]

A number of the most [illegible] of both political parties, [illegible] Judges, members of the Cabinet, [illegible] Representatives, Ex-President [illegible] ry Clay, having invited the Rev. [illegible] Mathews, of New York, to deliver a [illegible] of lectures upon the harmony between [illegible] ence and Letters upon the one hand [illegible] Revealed Christianity upon the other [illegible] first of the course was delivered [illegible] morning, in the hall of the House of [illegible] sentatives. The attendance was very [illegible] and numbered among it the most [illegible] guished official personages in the [illegible] The President of the United States [illegible] President Adams, Henry Clay, [illegible] whole Bench of the Judges of the [illegible] Court, with a large majority of the [illegible] of the two Houses of Congress, [illegible] ent.

The audience, too, in number was [illegible] more large than could be seated, [illegible] standing the spaciousness of the Hall [illegible] ny were unable to be seated, or to [illegible] within hearing, notwithstanding the day [illegible] a very unpleasant one.

The devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Gurley, the Chaplain of the House of Representatives, and once the [illegible] cient Secretary of the American Colonization Society.

The chapter read was the first chapter of the 1st Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians, and the text from these words, (20th verse) —"Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?"

The discourse was rather an introductory lecture than one of the course of twelve or more which are to follow it, and to be delivered either at the Capitol on Sabbath morning, or at one of the Churches on Sabbath evening.

Mr. MATHEWS, in his discourse, drew a contrast between Christianity and Infidelity. Some, he said, objected to the Bible because it taught doctrines which seemed mysterious and irrational. These would not seek to know and understand the truth.

Under the show of science, and in the vast fields of nature, the Bible by infidels had been the most successfully assailed. There were periods which might be called the eras of science, and these were improved by infidels, for a renewal of their assaults upon Revelation. Our progress was wonderful and delightful. We moved forward at a railroad speed, but there was danger of being thrown from the track—danger of losing our hold upon divine and reliable truth. It was not real learning which assailed the Bible, but that "little learning" which was "a dangerous thing." The poet said—

"Drink deep or touch not the Pierian spring."

There was a love of notoriety with some which prompted them to assail the Bible, and vanity prompted others to do so.

Mr. M. said his aim was to place science and letters in harmony with Christianity, and to do this he should bring distinguished names to support its claims. He would not deny that learning, and great learning, had been arrayed against the Bible. The Magicians of Egypt, the Rabbis of old, labored to explain away the miracles of the Bible, as did the infidels of our day, but each were equally unsuccessful.

There was a Platonic philosophy also arrayed against the Bible, and the names of such were cited, with those who in later times presented themselves in a hostile attitude to Luther, Calvin, and in later times against Bacon, Boyle, Newton and Gallileo. Sir Robert Boyle wrote some of the ablest discourses in our language in defence of the truths of Revelation, after Craftsbury, Spinosa and others had arrayed themselves in hostility to the Bible. The unholy alliance of Hume and Voltaire was also considered, with the vanity, love of speculation, poisonous conceptions and classic learning of these authors. Rousseau was known by the fervor of his mind, the richness of his imagery, the power of his thought, and he seldom failed to lead captive the judgment of those who listened. His boast was, that "it took twelve men to write Christianity up, and that he would show that one man was sufficient to write it down." He became the pinacle of infidelity, and with the other two named, inflicted a severe blow upon Christianity.

The name of Edmund Gibbon, and his guilty pre-eminence, was also considered. It seems as if the powers of darkness were concentrated in his person, and he came forth armed with hostility to the Gospel. As there was no enemy like an apostate, so Gibbon became one of the fiercest. He had been a Roman Catholic, a Protestant, and became afterwards an avowed unbeliever in all Christianity. A high compliment was paid to the intellectual ability of Gibbon. While listening to the vespers of the friars, he conceived his great work, and he pictured out the abyss between ancient and modern times. He gave to his work a harmony of parts, a perfection of symmetry, which placed him upon the pinnacle of thought; but he had so constructed his edifice as to make it a running libel upon Christianity, and this was in so diffused a form as to make the real design not apparent. His book was one of the great highways of knowledge. Everything he related in regard to Christianity, he exhibited in a false coloring. He presented the dying throes of Paganism in a manner which seemed to bring the scene before you. So of the elevation of Mahomet and the Koran. Though professing impartiality, he took delight in portraying the want of faith in the Christian character, and in recounting the martyrdom of Christian men. When praise was given to Christian men, it was as grudgingly bestowed as a miser's gifts. It was thus the poison was infused through his whole work.

These were the enemies of the Bible, and their inglorious distinction. Though these men were dead, their spirits still survived.

But how little, after all, had these men done against our common Christian Church. Had they undermined her foundations? Upon the contrary, the power of infidelity was never so feeble as now. They held no territory, and bore no superior sway. Imposture never could stand the test of time. Falsehood, like murder, would out. No impostor or imposition had lived beyond a few years.

We might conceive of some errors difficult to expose. The Bible spoke of things create and increate, of earth, and sky, and sea. It carried us back to the first revolutions of the world, and forward to the last. There spake as by inspiration the words of holy men. It was a book which nearly fifty men had written, and it was spread over a vast space of time. It was written in many lands, by various people, and by men learned and unlearned. But there was a beautiful harmony in all its parts, and no discrepancy of communication. So far from darkening science, it threw a beautiful light upon it.

The conclusion of this lecture, the briefest possible outline of which I have given above, was an impressive application of the value and necessity of the Bible to every human soul. If we shut out the Bible, it was asked, where in heaven or in earth was our hope of salvation.

The clergy of the city, of all denominations, have requested that the remainder of these lectures shall be delivered upon Sabbath evenings, so that they and their congregations may hear them. [illegible]
