THE CHEMICAL OLIVE ERASIVE SOAP manufactured by R. C. & J. H. SAWYER, is acknowledged to be the most serviceable of any kind yet offered to the public. Gen. Grant's Official Report of the Battle of Belmont.

CAIRO, Nov. 12.—Gen. Grant's official report of the Belmont battle says that he had 2,800 men. The object of the expedition was to prevent the enemy from sending reinforcements to Price, and also from cutting off two columns that he had sent out from Cairo and Cape Girardeau in pursuit of Jeff. Thompson. Knowing that Columbus was not strongly garrisoned, I asked General Smith, commanding at Paducah, to make a demonstration in that direction, and he did so by ordering a small force to Mayfield and another in the direction of Columbus, but not to approach, however, nearer than twelve miles above Columbus. At daylight we reached the point just out of range of the rebel guns, and the debarked troops were marched one mile towards Belmont. They were drawn up in line—one battalion being left as a reserve near the transports. It was but a few minutes before we met the enemy and a general engagement ensued.

The rebels were driven back foot by foot to their encampment on the river bank, a distance of two miles. Here they had strengthened their position by felling the timber for several hundred yards around. Our men charged through this, driving the enemy over the bank into their transports, leaving us in possession of everything not portable.

Belmont, being within range of guns on the opposite shore, could not be held for a single hour by our troops.

Having no wagons, we could not move any of the captured property: consequently, I gave orders for its destruction.

Before getting fairly under way on our return, the enemy made their appearance and again attempted to surround us. Our troops, not in the least discouraged, charged the enemy and again defeated them.

Our loss is about 85 killed, 150 wounded—many slightly—and about an equal number missing, nearly all of the latter from the Iowa regiment, which behaved with great gallantry and suffered more severely than others.

The balance of the report details individual gallantry.
