

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

Will Pennies Grow? Mr. Gardner, please to tell us How soon will pennies grow? Alfie has one in his pocket, Which we are going to sow.

He fetched his little spade, Saying, 'Gracie, come with me, We will dig, and plant this money-seed, And make it grow a tree.'

'We want a heap of pennies, To help the poor, you know; So tell us, dear gardener, How soon will pennies grow?'

Rebbie and the Toads. Little five-year-old Rebbie had a great affection for all kinds of animals, and owned a cat and a dog which he could never bear to have out of his sight, and it was all that mamma could do to induce him to allow Prince and Tabby to go to the stable at night instead of sharing his bed.

One day, while he was playing in the garden, he espied a big, fat toad sitting under a lettuce-leaf and busily engaged in swallowing a large worm which he had just caught.

Now Robbie has an inquiring mind, so instead of rushing up and scaring him, he stood quietly by and watched him.

The worm was large and strong and had a decided objection to being swallowed. The toad was, however, firm in his purpose; he struggled, and swallowed a half inch at a time, while the worm writhed around above his head and seemed about to crawl forth from his confinement, as the toad's jaws were losing their grip.

Robbie at once ran to the house and told his grandpa and mother what he had seen. They could hardly credit it, but the next day when grandpa went out to his potatoes, Robbie followed to collect the earth-worm for his pet, who made his home under a large clump of lilac bushes close by the parlor window.

He had no trouble with the small ones, but when given an enormous old fellow, grandpa with his own eyes saw the same performance Robbie had witnessed the day before.

The next day another toad came to the yard and the day after the nest was empty. But as grandpa was hunting for them on the ground, he saw something just disappearing down the toad's throat that looked suspiciously like the legs of a very small bird.

He begged for his life, but grandpa would not relent and called John to come with the toad. When Mr. Toad came to be dissected, two of the birds were found in his stomach, and they felt no doubt as to what had been the fate of the others.

In one corner of the front yard there was a large fountain, and oftentimes, at night, the faint notes of a tree-toad could be heard coming seemingly from the middle of the basin.

After much search, Robbie found him perched on the edge of the fountain, where he was just moistened by the spray. He seemed quite at home there, and grew so much accustomed to having people about that he would sing even though they came quite near.

He sang a great deal, and as his voice was strong and shrill, he could be heard at quite a distance. Mrs. Spencer, who lived across the street, was an invalid and very nervous, and he annoyed her so much that she often begged her to have her husband shoot him if he were not disposed of in some other way.

The tree-toad belongs to the genus Hyla, possesses great ventral powers, and has the faculty of changing its color to that of the object on which it rests.

OSTRICH FARMING.

How the Business is Carried on in South Africa.—The Incubation.—Picking.

Formerly the ostrich was hunted by men on horseback; but of late years the demand for the feathers of these birds has elevated the breeding and raising of ostriches to the position of one of the great industries of Southern Africa.

Ten years ago a gentleman named Douglass, residing near Grahamstown, in Cape Colony, conceived the project of what is now known as ostrich-farming.

Having experimented with a few wild birds, and found that they would lay in confinement, he next set to work to devise some method of artificial hatching.

For three years he met with but little success, but finally he invented the patent incubator, since when he has prosecuted his scheme in a manner that has made him famous.

By means of the incubator the eleven birds with which the experiment was first tried have been increased to 900, and these being scattered throughout the district, have made ostrich farming nearly as popular among the residents of Cape Colony as diamond mining or sheep-raising.

There are at present on the farm about 900 birds, which are allowed to run in large enclosures. One of these is 3,000 acres in size, and has within it a troop of 240 birds.

Once a week they are all hunted up by men on horseback, armed with large bows of thorn to keep the birds off, as many are very savage, and their kick is dangerous. One man goes in front, with a pack-horse loaded with Indian corn, to lead them. The farm itself is divided into paddocks, and with those which are breeding, one cock with two hens occupies each paddock.

The young birds—for they do not breed till they are three years old—are which are not reared, run in flocks of thirty or forty each. They are subject to diseases which, of course, require attention, and are apt to damage themselves, sometimes breaking their own bones and getting themselves caught in the wire fences.

Otherwise they are hardly creatures which can stand much heat and cold, and do for long periods without water, requiring no delicate feeding, and give, at existing prices, ample returns for the care bestowed upon them.

The first necessity in artificial ostrich hatching is to secure the eggs. For this purpose the farmer provides himself with an assortment of dummy eggs, consisting of egg shells blown and filled with sand. By means of these he is usually successful in alluring the hens to lay.

The birds are so large and the land is so small that it is difficult to watch them, and the farmer obtains the eggs as soon as they are in existence. As each egg is worth from $20 to $25, there will in course of time be naturally much temptation to theft.

As yet, however, there is no market for the ostrich eggs, and the farmer is obliged to steal an ostrich egg with no means for hatching it would be a useless piece of dishonesty.

A PITY Dialogue.

The Raleigh (N. C.) Observer has a strong belief that the regular tramps scouring the country are regularly organized, that they have a general understanding with one another, and make themselves known to each other by means of a series of questions and answers.

'From whence come you?' 'From a town in New York, called Jerusalem.'

'What's your business here?' 'To learn to subdue my appetite and to sponge my living from an indulgent public.'

'Then you are a regular tramp, I presume?' 'I am so taken and accepted wherever I go.'

'How am I to recognize you as a tramp?' 'By the largeness of my feet and general carnivorous appearance.'

'How do you know yourself to be a tramp?' 'In seeking food; by being often denied, but ready to try again.'

'How gained you admittance into the town?' 'By a good many long tramps.'

'How were you received?' 'On the end of a night policeman's billy, presented to my head.'

'How did the policeman dispose of you?' 'He took me several times around the town to the south, east and west, where he found the chief of police, mayor and the jailer, where a great many questions were asked.'

'What advice did the judge give you?' 'He advised me to walk in upright, regular steps, and to renounce tramping.'

'Will your permission I'll be off very quick.'

'Which way are you traveling?' 'East.'

'What are you pursuing?' 'Work—which, by my own endeavors and the assistance of others, I hope I shall never be able to find.'

'My friend, you are now at an institution where the wicked are always troublesome and the weary are as bad as the rest. You will not be conducted to the middle chamber by a flight of winding stairs, consisting of five or more steps. Instead of corn, wine and oil—the wages of the ancients—yours will be bread and water for five days. When your company escape from this place divide yourselves into parties of three each, take a bee line for Norfolk or Richmond, where in winter they usually run free soup houses, and you may be pardoned on condition of your never returning. (Pointing to the turkey) follow your conductor and fear no danger—if you behave yourself.'

A few months, or even weeks since, her pallid countenance was the very type of ruddy health—the delight of the school and the pride of the household. She was always welcome wherever duty or pleasure led her.

The voice once so enchanting in laugh and song is feeble, husky and broken by a hollow cough. Let us approach her couch and gently take her bloodless hand, and we shall shudder because of its feeble passionate grasp.

The hand once so warm and plump shows its bony outlines, while the cords and tortuous veins are plainly noticeable. Do not touch the pulse that bounded with repletion, imparting beauty, vivacity, health, and strength, to the system, is delicate to the touch.

'Must we lose her while yet so young and so fair?' 'There is relief, but something more is required than the observance of hygienic rules, for enfeebled nature calls for aid and she must have it.'

'Administer this pleasant medicine. It is invigorating, it lays the irritable cough, improves the appetite and digestion, and sends a healthy glow through her whole system. Her voice is cleared, her nervous power increased, and the heart bountifully with a new impulse. Her face brightens, the blood is returning, her voice is cleared, and her requests no longer delivered in that peevish, fretful tone so degrading to sympathy.'

'Her step is still faltering, but in a few weeks she will go without our aid and be able to join her friends in their pleasant pastimes and feel her whole being warmed and expanded into perfect life.'

'The change is so great that we think it is sweeter and nobler than ever before. And the medicine which has wrought this transformation, we look upon as a blessing to humanity, for there are other loved ones who are rescued from the grasp of the insidious destroyer, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has raised her. It will raise others.'
