Evans' Chamomile Pills.
ABRAHAM J. CLEMENT, residing at 66 Mott street, New York, was afflicted with Dyspepsia in its most aggravated form. The symptoms were excitement of the nervous system, great debility, fever, restlessness, cough, heartburn, pain in the chest and stomach always after eating, impaired appetite, sensation of sinking at the stomach, furred tongue, nausea, with frequent vomiting, dizziness towards night and restlessness. These continued upwards of a twelvemonth, when, on consulting Dr. Wm. Evans, 100 Chatham street, and submitting to his ever successful and agreeable mode of treatment, the patient was completely restored to health in the short space of one month, and grateful for the incalculable benefit derived, gladly came forward and volunteered the above statement. Look at This.
THE attention of those who have been somewhat sceptical in reference to the numerous certificates published in favor of Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry, on account of the persons being unknown in this Section of the State, is respectfully directed to the following certificate, the writer of which has been a citizen of this borough for several years, and is known as a gentleman of integrity and responsibility.

To the Agent, Mr. J. KIDDY.

I have used Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry for a Cough, with which I have been severely afflicted for about four months, and I have no hesitation in saying that it is the most effective medicine that I have been able to procure. It composes all uneasiness, and agrees well with my diet,—and maintains a regular and good appetite. I can sincerely recommend it to all others similarly afflicted. J. MINICK, Borough of Chambersburgh.

New York Dyer.
OSEE HIMES, would respectfully inform his friends and the public in general, that he dyes Ladies' dresses, Habits and Mantels of every description, black; and warrants them not to smut, and to look equal to new goods. He dyes fancy colors of all descriptions of silk and carpet yarn. Also, cleans and restores the colors of gentlemen's clothing, so as to resemble new goods.

Mr. H. flatters himself that he can please the public, as he has done an extensive business in New York for twenty years. All work done on moderate terms, at his establishment in 5th st., between Wood and Smithfield along the Theatre.

Iron Safes.
I RESPECTFULLY inform the public that I have and keep always on hand an assortment of Fire Proof Safes. The price, in consequence of the materials and labor being much lower, is reduced about thirty per cent. They are kept for sale at my shop, in Sixth street, above Smithfield, next to the church on the corner of 6th street—as also with Atwood, Jones & Co., and Dalzell & Fleming. In regard to the quality of my safes I leave those persons who have purchased and will purchase my safes to attest the utility of them. I desire no newspaper puffs on my safes; justice and truth warrant me in informing the public that all my safes which have been in buildings burnt down for several years since I commenced have preserved all the papers, books, &c., which they contained. I have a card containing a number of certificates of the same, which are in circulation and in my hands and the agencies. JOHN DENNING.

FOR Coughs! Colds!! Consumption!!!
THORN'S PULMONARY CANDY.
THIS pleasant and certain cure for coughs and colds goes ahead of all the preparations now or ever offered to the public. The use of it is so great that the proprietor has some difficulty in keeping a supply for the increasing demand. Medical agencies, grocery stores, keep a supply on hand. It is called for every where, and will sell in any place. The reason is this; every one who has a cough or cold by eating a few sticks at a distance, by remitting the money, post paid, to the subscriber, will be attended to. For sale by the single stick, 6¼ cents; five sticks for 25 cents; and at wholesale by WM. THE YOUTH OF THE HEART
BY MRS. C. M. SAWYER.

"Shall I never grow old!" said a fair little girl,
As she stood by a fond mother's knee,
And toss'd from her forehead the clustering curls,
And turned up her "bonny blue e'e."

"Shall I never grow old, as the beggar has done,
Who yesterday came to our door?
And he'er again look on the light of the sun,
And see the sweet flowers no more?"

"Will my face be all wrinkled with sorrow and care,
And my pretty brown tresses turn white?
O! mother, I'm sure that I never could bear
To become such a sad looking sight!"

On her fair little daughter the mother look'd down,
And her face wore a sorrowful smile,
As she smooth'd back the beautiful tresses of brown,
And gazed in her blue eyes the while!

"O! yes, my dear child!"—and the tears gathered fast,
As she spoke, in the mother's dark eye—
The charms we so prize in our youth cannot last,
And wrinkles and age will draw nigh!

"But the youth of the heart"—and the mother's dark eye
Grew soft as the eye of a fawn—
"May live in its greatness, when age hath come nigh,
And the rose and lily are gone!"

"That youth!—'its an evergreen—nourish it well
With the dews of affection and love,
And still in thy bosom unfading it will dwell,
When thy spirit ascendeth above!"

O! the youth of the heart!—'its more precious than gold,
For it cheers o'en decripitude's way!
And makes the world bright to us when we're old
As it was in life's earliest day!

Then grieve not, my child, though thy cheek should grow pale,
And thy beautiful tresses turn gray:
But guard well the youth of thy heart, that it fail
Nor do with thy beauty away!"

Jane on her spouse could not bestow
One TEAR of sorrow when he died;
His LIFE had made so many flow
That all the briny fount was dried!

THE MURDERER WHO WAS NO MURDERER.

Jonathan Bradford kept an Inn in Oxfordshire, on the London road to Oxford, in the year 1736. He bore an unexceptionable character. Mr Hayes, a gentlemen of fortune, being on his way to Oxford, on a visit to a relation, put up at Bradford's; he there joined company with two gentlemen with whom he supped; and in conversation unguardedly mentioned that he had about him a large sum of money. In due time they retired to their respective chambers, the gentlemen to a two-bed room, leaving as is customary with many, a candle burning in the chimney corner.

Some hours after they were to bed, one of the gentlemen being awake, thought he heard a deep groan in the adjoining chamber, and his being repeated, he softly awakened his friend. They listened together, and the groans increasing as of one dying, they both instantly arose and proceeded silently to the door, being especially sible to paint their consternation on perceiving a person weltering in his blood in the bed, and a man standing over him with a dark lantern in one hand and a knife in the other. The man seemed as petrified as themselves, but his terror carried with it all the terror of guilt. The gentlemen soon discovered that the person was the stranger with whom they had that night supped, and the man who was standing over him was their host. They seized Bradford: directly, disarming him of his knife, and charged him with being the murderer. He had assumed, by this time, the air of innocence; he positively denied the crime, and asserted that he came there with the same humane intentions as themselves, for that hearing a noise which was succeeded by groaning, he got up out of bed, struck a light, armed himself with a knife for his defence, and had but that moment entered the room before them.

These assertions were of but little avail; he was kept in close custody till the morning, and then taken before a neighboring justice of the peace. Bradford still denied the murder, but nevertheless, with such an apparent indication of guilt, that the justice hesitated not to make use of this extraordinary expression of writing out his mittimus, "Mr Bradford, either you or I committed this murder."

This extraordinary affair was the conversation of the whole country—Bradford was tried, and condemned, over and over again, in every company. In the midst of all this predetermination, came on the assizes at Oxford; Bradford was brought to trial—he pleaded not guilty. Nothing could be more strong than the evidence of the two gentlemen; they testified to the finding Mr. Hayes murdered in his bed, and Bradford by his side of the body, with a light and knife; the knife and the hand that held it bloody; that on entering the room he betrayed all the signs of a guilty man; and but a few moments preceding, they had heard the groans of the deceased.

Bradford's defence on his trial was the same as before the gentlemen—he heard a noise, he suspected some villainy transacting, he struck a light, he assaulted a knife (the only weapon near him,) to defend himself; and the terrors he discovered were merely the terrors of humanity; the natural effects of innocence as well as guilt on beholding such a horrid scene.

This defence, however, could be considered but as weak, contrasted with several powerful circumstances against him. Never were circumstances more strong; there was little need left of comment from the judge in summing up the evidence. No room appeared for extenuation, and the jury brought in the prisoner guilty without going out of the box. Bradford was executed shortly after, still declaring he was not the murderer, nor privy to the murder of Mr Hayes, but he died disbelieved by all.

Yet were those assertions not untrue; the murder was actually committed by Mr Hayes' footman, who immediately on stabbing his master, rifled his breeches of his money, gold watch and snuff box, and escaped to his own room, scarcely two seconds before Bradford's entering the unfortunate gentleman's chamber. This world owes this knowledge to a remorse of conscience from the footman (18 months after the execution of Bradford,) on a bed of sickness; it was a death bed, and the law lost its victim.

It is much to be wished that this account could stop here, but it cannot. Bradford, though innocent, and not privy to the murder, was nevertheless the murderer in design. He had heard, as well as the footman, what Mr Hayes had declared at supper, as to having a large sum of money about him, and he went in the chamber with the same diabolical intentions as this servant. He was struck with amazement—he could not believe his senses; and in turning back the bed clothes to assure himself of the fact, he in his agitation, dropped his knife on the bleeding body; by which both his hand and his knife became bloody. These circumstances Bradford acknowledged to the clergyman who attended him after his sentence.—L. Hunt's Remarks.
