The Iron Safe which I bought of you some time back was in the most exposed situation during the fire, and was entirely red hot. The Daily Morning Post.

From the N O Republican.

LATER FROM TEXAS.

We yesterday received papers from Galveston to Sept. 7, and also papers from Washington, Matagorda, and La Grange. The papers are bitten with the same disease which is just now so prevalent in the United States, and are gone mad on the subject of politics.

All the returns which had been received at Galveston, up to the 7th instant, of the voting for President, gave Burleson 694, Jones 308.

The only other item of news we find in all the papers, is that the General Court Martial having come to a decision in the case of Commodore Moore, adjourned sine die, on the 23d Aug. The decision is not published, but it is supposed to be an acquittal of Com. Moore.

The 'Republic,' from Galveston, on the 2d inst. has since put us in possession of Galveston dates to the 1st instant.

Capt Foster, of the Woodbury, revenue cutter, and Commodore Moore of the Texan Navy, came passengers in this vessel.

The returns which have been received from the various parts of the republic, though not yet quite complete, yet show that Anson Jones has been elected President, having succeeded by a majority of about 200.

General Duff Green arrived at Galveston, on the 29th ult., and the News states that his appointment as Consul, has given great satisfaction. He left Galveston on the 1st instant for Vera Cruz, on the revenue cutter Woodbury The News also states that the U. States steamer Union, on board of which Gen. Duff Green left Pensacola, on the 17th ult., had had some part of her machinery deranged, and was driven down the coast and came to an anchor off Velasco. No particulars of what damage, if any, was done. General Green landed at Velasco and came to Galveston overland.

A public dinner was given to Commodore Moore, at Galveston, on the 21st ult., in honor of his return to the city, his increased efforts for his country's weal, and the prospect of his acquittal by the Court Martial.

THE SANTA FE TRADE.

The editor of a new paper just started in Independence, Mo.—the last town in the State on the Santa Fe route, gives some information relative to the business carried on across the prairies, between St Louis and Santa Fe. He estimates the imports this year to be $400,000 in specie, and buffalo robes, furs, &c., to the amount of $50,000 more. Several of the companies which came in last Spring, have not returned, in consequence of the unfavorable state of the weather. For this reason, the exports are much less this year than usual. Four companies went out this year, taking with them merchandize to the value, at Eastern cost, of $200,000; by insurance, freight to that point, outfits, &c., cost another $100 000—making the whole sum invested in this trade $300,000, which would have been increased to $500,000, but for the bad weather. In the four companies there were 160 men, and the outfit for them is stated as follows:

780 mules, worth each $25	$27,300
60 oxen, " 20	1,300
5000 lbs. bacon, at 3¼ cts.	162
30 bbls flour, at $5	120
90 bushels meal, at 30 cts	27
Merchandize, outfit for hands	3,500
Harness for teams	2,500
Blacksmiths' work,	500
Making altogether the sum of	$35 959

Exclusive of wagons, wagon sheets, and many other articles purchased at Independence. The total number of wagons was 22, each costing $100, many of which were made there, and the total number wagon sheets was 1300, including blankets to put between them.

The trade with Santa Fe is thus made to amount to $750,000; but even this sum is said to be considerably short of what is in ordinary seasons. The editor insists that this trade should no longer be neglected by the Government. "Give us (says he) a port of entry; give us the right of drawbacks, and our traders will supply the whole of the provinces of Santa Fe, Chihuahua, Sonora, California and others, instead of being supplied with British goods, through Matamoros, Vera Cruz and other ports; instead of the trade being worth half a million of dollars, it will reach to four or five millions." The East is said to be deeply interested in this trade as furnishing an outlet for their calicoes and domestics.—N O Picayune.

A GREAT PUMPKIN STORY.

The season for Thanksgiving is approaching, and the newspapers abound in paragraphs, chronicling the existence of monstrous apples, enormous beets, mammoth squashes, and pumpkins approaching in size to young mountains. Some of these accounts seem almost incredible—but none that we have seen are hardly so marvellous as a description of a pumpkin-vine and pumpkin, which grew on the banks of the Swamscot river in New Hampshire and which was related to us by a gentleman of undoubted veracity.

A farmer accidentally dropped a pumpkin seed on some rich alluvial land on the bank of the river, and a few weeks afterwards, he was surprised to find an enormous vine growing there, with leaves as large as a dining table, and a stem as big round as a hoe handle. He did not visit the spot again until September, when he found that the pumpkin vine had increased amazingly, and had extended across the river, (which was about twenty yards wide in that place,) and was lost in an alder swamp He remarked that it was "mighty strange," and thought no more of it until the following spring, when he crossed the river on the pumpkin vine, and found at the distance of about forty yards from the river, surrounded with bushes, a pumpkin of a monstrous size indeed! He gazed upon it with astonishment, and on drawing towards it, he heard some rather strange sounds, which seemed to proceed from the heart of this enormous vegetable.

Being rather a timid man, he hastened to some of his neighbors, told them the awful story, and requested their assistance. They armed themselves with axes, clubs and pitchforks, and accompanied him to the spot. The pumpkin was still there, and most appalling noises seemed to issue from its entrails. But being resolute men, they resolved to fathom the mystery, and forthwith assaulted, and after about fifteen minutes' hard labor, cut open the pumpkin, when out bolted a monstrous sow, followed by her offspring, consisting of nine beautiful, thrifty pigs, about six weeks old. It appears that the farmer had missed the sow, then a poor, puny creature, in the fall, and after much search had given her up for lost. Subsequent events, however, proved that she had crossed the river at that time on the pumpkin vine, and had eaten into the pumpkin, which furnished her a habitation and food, and for her little ones, until she was so unceremoniously turned out of house and home.

Questions for Intelligent Whigs.—If the annexation of Texas saves this Republic from the yoke of Great Britain, and protects the South from the incendiary schemes of that country—if it is reduced to a certainty, as it now is, that Texas must be our's or England's—would you not vote for James K. Polk, whose election would secure this great measure, rather than for Henry Clay, whose friends are against it, and would sooner see it in the hands of Great Britain than in our possession.

If a Bank of the United States would ruin your country—and we are told by Henry Clay that he is in favor of one, as his friends are known to be—as it prostrated the business of your State—if, as many believe, it would ruin the mechanic, and build up a host of petty aristocrats—would you not vote for James K Polk, who is against a Bank, rather than for Clay who is in favor of one?
