WEDNESDAY MORNING.....APRIL 29

FOR PRESIDENT.

JAMES BUCHANAN.

Subject to the decision of the Nat. Democ. Convention.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

CANAL COMMISSIONER
GEORGE SCOTT. of Cumberland Co.

AUDITOR GENERAL
JACOB FRY, Jr., Montgomery Co.

SURVEYOR GENERAL
TIMOTHY IVES, of this County.

TO THE MERCHANTS.

We shall stand up to the following, which we take from the Gazette of yesterday; and we ask a hearing from the Merchants. Each merchant and every one who has a friend, or a neighbor, will do well to read the facts which the facts are brought. Here is what we extract from the Gazette:

[For the Pittsburgh Gazette.]

Mr. Editor—I perceive that you claim publicity for anything relative to the Merchants' Exchange, on the ground that the officers of the Managers are confined to a single person. Now, Mr. Editor, I know of no such rule, and I know that the Managers ignore you.

A MERCHANT.

We have never published a word of anything whatever was furnished to us in proper season from the Merchants' Exchange, and have never withheld from it a kindly word which assured that it was needed. But of late years, who have the concern in charge seem to think they can do anything without our aid, and hence we have not been consulted. An appeal from the Directors to the Merchants of the city for aid to establish a Merchants' Exchange was yesterday published in one of the morning papers, but a copy was born after to us, and only this morning. A statement was sent us the Mercantile Agency, at the Exchange. Directors, instead of with that morning paper, and perhaps he think it necessary to pay the cost of his paper by getting a copy of it for us. Perhaps, or not, "subject" to be what we may, we promise to insert whatever the Exchange is likely to profit or reach only remote. Our services in behalf of the Exchange can be had wherever the Directors or Managers think proper to place them. We know of no cause to pursue the course pursued towards us. If any of they prefer to give us, in connect with other, or not, we shall get paid for it? Not one cent. All the pay we get is contained in such articles as are found in the other papers, from the Gazette.

The correspondent of the Gazette who signs himself "A Merchant," can now tell us whether that paper is designed by the Managers of the Merchants' Exchange? One other fact, "that is practical information," and we have done. Whenever any document from the Exchange comes to our office first, we have been careful to furnish the copy early to the other papers; and lest the Gazette would say it was not furnished early enough, we have taken care to provide a witness as to the very hour and minute when the copy was sent to that paper. We send the copy complete to our friends of course it will go late to the others; but that has very seldom happened. All that we have stated above we can prove by unquestionable testimony. Our practical remarks in conclusion, are, that such petty jealousy and malice as characterize the above extract from the Gazette will never appear in the Post. We cannot feel it. We would not express it if we did. The Press, in our view, is a noble mission, and should speak a more manly tone.

We close by saying that we expect for the above remarks one of the brutal replies for which one of the editors of the Gazette has become somewhat distinguished.

LOUISVILLE DEMOCRAT.

The paper of the above name, published at Louisville, Kentucky, is one of the ablest Democratic newspapers of the west, and has a very large circulation, and advertising patronage. It seems that since the election riots and murders of last year, some of its Know Nothing patrons have been withdrawing their subscriptions and advertising because that paper persists in showing up the baneful effects of Know Nothingism upon the prosperity of their city. The Democrat will not be alarmed at that. It will gain two friends where it loses one.

The School House at Evergreen Hamlet.

We are agreeably gratified by a visit to Evergreen Hamlet. It is one of the most delightful residences in this county. Its beautiful scenery, pure air, and the high state of cultivation to which the grounds have been brought, elicit great praise from all who have seen it in the spring time, summer or autumn. The proprietors have now added to it another attraction that doubles its merits as a place of residence. They have erected a school house, which, for judicious ness of design and arrangement, taste in architecture, and convenience and comfort for a school of thirty-five pupils, is unsurpassed by anything of the kind in this State. It is about sixty feet in length by thirty-five in width, well-lighted and aired, and situated in a romantic and pleasant place, with a forest on one side, and flowers, strawberry beds and lawns on the other side. The house is to be handsomely furnished, supplied with chemical, astronomical and philosophical apparatus, and everything provided for a thorough education in all branches. The school is to be under the superintendence of Mr. C. Gregg, assisted by his lady and others, who are excellent teachers. It commences on Monday next. They have also a music teacher. Latin, Greek, French and German will be taught, and vocal music. Arrangements have been made to accommodate a few, and only a few boarding scholars from the city.

The public opening of the new school house will take place on Saturday, May 3d, at 2½ P. M. on which occasion an address will be delivered on "Home and Home Education." It will doubtless be an interesting occasion, and people from the city are anticipating a pleasant trip to Evergreen on that day. Omnibuses will start from the depot of the Excelsior Line at 1 o'clock P. M. on Saturday.

We like such enterprises and such country homes as Evergreen Hamlet especially when combined with such constant reference to good health, good morals, good habits and good education, and we wish the dwellers at Evergreen a happy life of it.

Cincinnati and Louisville Precedillos.

Cincinnati seems to rage prematurely in Cincinnati and Louisville, and our occidental neighbors are just now having a sweet time of it. Police Problem of the Cincinnati Police Court, was was implicated by the Gazette reporter in a serious rabble detention of money that had been picked from the pocket of a young lady named [illegible] Court the other day, and stepping down from the judicial bench deliberately committed a breach of the law by slapping the aforesaid reporter in the face; the reporter, each party interfered, and a general [illegible] At first accounts the breach was wrong, the Judge, the Prosecuting Attorney, sundry lawyers and officials being against the reporter and his friends. But [illegible] Forum, a lawyer in Court street, took occasion at a remark of the Gazette reporter in reference to Spring, that [illegible] green, which he considers disrespectful, and having furnished himself with that now fashionable Black-Republican weapon "Sharpe's rifle," he joined the enemies of the reporter, who, it seems, is [illegible] We have not heard of any Bible in connection with this disreputable affair, but second to the laxity of morals displayed the important adjunct of the rifle is very [illegible] It seems, Miss Dutton and the Rev. Mr. Fletcher should raise a subscription for the poor little inhabitants.

Louisville is accordingly disreputable enough in being carried on against the Democrat by its merchants of that city who have become [illegible] "unpalatable truths" stated in reference to the injuries done and encouraged in the late election riots. Democrat has been wont to moralize on the [illegible] point out a way in which the law [illegible] that city may be regained, and restore "law and order" restored. This [illegible] Louisville [illegible] and other party tyrants have been guilty of the unmanly meanness of sending in notes [illegible] withdraw their subscriptions [illegible] continues to thrive, and [illegible] the letter, which form precious [illegible] stupidity, arrogance, and [illegible] Louisville gaity. When will the purse pride [illegible]

[For the Pittsburgh Morning Post.]

Mess. Editors—We are really gratified [illegible] our old, well-tried, well-known and never flinching Democratic Ajax, Col. M'Candless, at length consented to permit his name to be presented to the next Democratic county convention as a candidate for Congress.

The party, at this particular juncture, needs the man, and not the man the office. We want a true, sterling democratic principles have to stand, the true ring, but the true wear, pure and durable; one who is not only true to Democratic principles, but a lover and adherent of Jackson, their faithful exponent. New men and old men, no matter what their pretensions, are not at this crisis safe men. The best indications of the future is the security of the past, and we have given in this respect more reliable assurances than Col. M'Candless. His whole public life has been a self sacrificing, and in a pecuniary point of view, a profitless warfare on behalf of the party, and shall she now prove faithless to her interests and recreant to her most devoted friends? We hope, nay, we know she will not, and we may not say that other aspirants, imbued with the interests of our common political mother will see the propriety of generously deferring their hopes for a season, and giving to a long and well-earned fame their hearty, entire, and unanimous support.

By giving the above an insertion you will oblige an old Democrat of VERSAILES TOWNSHIP.

The Directors and officers of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, the Ohio and Indiana, and the Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroads are now in session in this city, to consider the proper measures to be adopted by the consolidated line from this city to Chicago. We earnestly hope the deliberations of the body now in Convention will be directed with a spirit of harmony, and justify the expectations of the tens of thousands of this and other States who look to this great air line to the Lakes as the desideratum long expected and much to be desired. The gentlemen now assembled have as much sagacity in such matters as any body of men who have assembled in this country, and we have no doubt will be able to determine the proper basis of action for the relative roads.

SAM HOUSTON is a candidate for the Presidency on his own hook. He announces his platform to be, opposition to the domestic and foreign policy of the present administration: a restoration of the retired naval officers, and a condemnation of no citizen without a hearing. The platform will do for him, but the man is sadly out of joint as well as the times.

THE SCHOOLFELLOW.—We have received the May number of this admirable little juvenile periodical which comes fully up to its predecessors, being replete with interesting and instructive tales for youth of both sexes. It may be had at the book store of W. A. Gildenfenney & Co., Fifth street.

MIXER & Co., and Gildenfenney & Co., have received, for sale at their depots, Putnam's Magazine for May. It is one of the best numbers we have seen.

S. B. LAUFFER, bookseller, No. 77 Fourth st., has received for sale "Household Words," for May, and Putnam's Magazine, which is now one of the best of American monthlies.

For the Pittsburgh Morning Post.

Messrs. Editors:—I have been much amused at the remarks made a few days past under the caption of "Brother Cleveland," in regard to Rochester, Pennsylvania, by M. T. C. Gould, Esq.

It is true they have a fine Car Factory situated on the bank of the Ohio at that place, run by steam. They have no water power at this place, and are obliged to purchase coal, in order to raise steam to create power. Had our friend the "antediluvian" said that Rochester would yet be the commercial point for receiving the raw material and shipping the manufactured articles, which will yet be, as it now is manufactured on the Falls of Beaver, he would have placed things in their legitimate position.

Who ever thinks of making Rochester, Pa., a manufacturing city, while the water power on the Beaver, within three miles of that place, is equal to the Merrimac, of Lowell or Manchester, and sufficient to drive all the machinery on the French river and the Quinebaug, commencing at the city of Worcester, Mass., down to Norwich, Connecticut.

If M. T. C. G. will for an instant turn his "kaleidescope" directly about and take one view of New and Old Brighton, that I am afraid it would dazzle his sight; to use the branches of the place with its tremendous water power thundering on the rock, and late in the morning river, which water will yet be applied to turn the ponderous wheels for the purpose of manufacturing not only "cears," but bar iron, nails, steel, cotton, hemp, flax, paper, flour, and a thousand other articles that follow in their train. It is a well-known fact that the Beaver has four large substantial dams, thrown across it, with a fall of 26 feet at each; dams which cost one sixty thousand dollars, without issues taken for ply of water, and the most elegant ground to build upon than the imagination of the present or even an "antediluvian" can conceive.

The amount of water now passing over these dams is equal to 17,182 cubic feet per minute each dam.

The Falls of the Beaver, by the old geometrician's kaleidescope, is to be the Manchester of the western world. It is now progressing with great rapidity, and if you or your readers will spend a few hours in examining the Works at Old Brighton, which has for a short year or two slumbered, the Falls of Beaver, no doubt you will be perfectly surprised. It is not my intention to exaggerate, but I must place before you a few simple facts. The manufactured articles at New Brighton amount to two hundred and fifty thousand dollars per year, and old Brighton has now five mills in successful operation, and four mills capable of manufacturing two hundred barrels of flour per day; and the capacity of manufacturing five hundred barrels per week; one iron furnace making two and a half tons of blooms directly from the ore per day; one paper mill making five reams of paper per week; one brick yard capable of turning out one hundred thousand brick per month; and last, but not least, one saw mill capable of sawing 1,000 spl. feet, and a water power equal to the rate of five hundred thousand cubic feet per minute, making enough to hoist up all Erie in 48 hours. This is the point that will rival Manchester of the Western World.

Here will rise the cotton factory, the paper mill, the woolen factory, the iron foundry, the Machine Shop, the Workshop, and the mill of the skillful manufacturer, giving employment to scores of operatives, and comfort to thousands upon thousands, who are now using and wear the fruits of their labor. It will be here that you will hear the busy hum of the spindle, and the shrill whistle of the operatives, calling its faithful and honest workmen to their employment and discharging them from their daily toil.

It will be here that your ears will be charmed with the sound of the hammer, the ring of the anvil, the whistle of the engine, and the roar of the mill, rising on every side in the place, the hills, from the hill top, in the valley, from the mountain side, and the deep ravine, and last, but not least, in business, giving employment to hundreds, enriching the state, and population, and increasing the revenue of the commonwealth a thousand fold.

Yours, truly, Rochester, Beaver Co., Pa.

It is pretty certain that a paper devoted to Brighton will be found circulating in the south, and wherever there are the empire, her population, and her shipping and commerce, and the commerce, port in the country, and wherever.

In conclusion, Brighton stands unstable like the pyramids of Egypt, and with the Thunder of the Falls of Beaver, she is spending.

Such are the facts that are [illegible] Beaver, the business, and [illegible] periodically [illegible] other place in the world, [illegible] the footstool. [illegible]
