YEARLING MIT ASPIRANTS RECEIVE FIRST SUMMONS

Coach Houck To Give Preliminary Instructions to Freshmen This Afternoon

The first of a series of tryouts and eliminations for the freshman boxing team will get under way this afternoon when the yearling mit candidates place themselves in the hands of Coach Leo Houck at the Armory between four-thirty and five-thirty o'clock

Looking ahead to the opening meet with the Lewistown Y M C A team of March eleventh, the Blue and White mentor plans to start eliminations early as possible He intends to hold sophomore tryouts for the freshman-sophomore scrap at the same time These first bouts will be staged every Wednesday and Friday during the last hours of the Physical Education periods while the yearling settos will take place on Tuesdays and Thursdays The underclass scrap is slated for March eighteenth

Since there will probably be a great number of first-year men turn out for the trials Coach Houck will not be able to shape his team until a few weeks before the time of the opening clash The first week will be devoted to giving essential instructions concerning boxing as well as some of the fine points of the sport Then the elimination bouts will be in order, followed by the actual moulding together of the first seven

Several of the yearlings have been working out with the varsity mittmen and have gained the advantage of early training Jack McGrath fullback on the 1924 gridiron team has been out with the seventy-five-pounders and has shown good form in his appearances in the ring Other freshmen have also come out intermittently to train with the varsity men However most of the training has been given the underclassmen in the Physical Education classwork

PITT SNATCHES GAME FROM YEARLING CAGERS

ves men still on the long end Reed Pitt guard went on a scoring rampage at this time chalking up two double-deckers and one foul shot. Boote contributed his second field goal just as he was taken out of the line-up to make room for McLinn This last tilley changed the scores' totals to 11-9 with the Blue and White trailing

Score Tied

Hoban dropped a free toss to make the score 12 to 9, but Lungren's trio of one-pointers wiped away this advantage and knotted the count at 12-all Wrobleski gathered up two points by the foul line method and Reed augmented this by his double-decker Baron's free throw and "Simmy" McLinn's mid-floor shot succeeded by McMahon's toss from the foul line, ended scoring activities for the half

At the start of the second period, the blue and White five swept Tom McMillen' charges off their feet by means of a sensational spurt Three foul line throws from the hands of Lungren along with field goals by Whitey VonNieda and Greene gave the home cagers a five-point advantage This was not long held however, as Reed's double-decker and set of free throws made the score change to 22-21, with Captain Baron and his men still in front

Even Terms Again

Boote and Campbell each annexed a free toss at this point Greene's one-pointer and McGill pair of single points once more tied the score each team having 24 points At this point Baron and Lungren were ejected and the Pitt players took advantage of the new combination and scored almost at will counting nine markers while their opponents were able to tally but one

Wally Reed member of last year's Penn State freshman five proved to be the big threat in the Pitt line-up The Pittsburgh boy accounted for thirteen of his team's points McGill substitute for Wrobleski, also performed well for the victors It was his last-minute shots that took the heart out of the Penn State players Captain McMahon put up a good grade of basketball at the tip-off position

For the Nittany yearlings Cy Lungren flashed good form all the time he was in the game Under his sure guidance the opposing Pitt forward was unable to count once from the field VonNieda starting a game for the first time also showed up well The work of the whole Nittany five at the foul line was bettered but the offense seemed to have weakened somewhat

The line-up with substitutions and scoring was as follows:

Penn State Frosh		Pitt Frosh
Boote	F	Wrobleski
VonNieda	F	Campbell
Greene	C	McMahon Capt
Lungren	G	Reed
Baron Capt	G	Hoban

Substitutions—McLinn for Boote, Boote for VonNieda, Von Nieda for Baron, Slate for Lungren, McGill for Wrobleski Goldberg for Hoban

RESHOWING OF KEMPY DRAWS LARGE HOUSE

professional production to be one of the greatest laughs ever staged

The part of Shields, a Chicago dandy, is portrayed by R Wilson '28 while Frances Hayward '28 and Margaret Jones '25 play the parts of mother and daughter and characterize typical small-town women Kathryn Hershey '28 Josephine Cranmer '26 and Mildred Webb '28 are cast to play the parts of flappers while Sara Mallory '25 satirizes the modern movie queen

John Emerson and Anita Loos collaborated on the writing of 'The Whole Town's Talking, in which Grant Mitchell scored such a huge success

Kempy Scores Hit

In its second showing before a Penn State audience this year, "Kempy' substantiated all former reports when it scored an even greater success Saturday night than its premiere, and more than pleased a large house

In the male lead of Kempy James H G Allen '26 did good work and the seriousness with which he portrayed his life's ambition added a human touch to the role His work in the second act was especially commendable Sharing honors with Allen was C J O'Donnell '25 who portrayed faithful Dad' Bence O'Donnell's acting was of the type that made the audience feel that it knew in reality the Dad' Bence he was portraying

As flighty Katherine Bence the authoress who marries young Kempy in a fit of pique Miss Emma Grest '25 gave an excellent interpretation as did Miss Frances Hessel '25 as Mrs Bence who was always willing to do as Dad Bence said if it would do anything to please him Miss Rebecca Hess '26, as the youngest Bence daughter Miss Lois Cherry '25 as Jane Wade R W Tyson '27 as Duke Merrill and Frank Neubaum '26 as Ben Wade all gave excellent characterizations

The plot of 'Kempy' concerns a young plumber-architect who comes to fix a water pipe at the Bence home and there meets Katherine Bence, the authoress of a book that gave the youngster his first inspiration Saying that 'Kempy, who was the architect believed in her Katherine Bence runs off and marries him Complications arise but are straightened out, the marriage is annulled and Katherine Bence marries Duke Merrill the man she had always loved

LION WRESTLERS HAND UPSET TO PENN MATMEN

Losing this gain for a time during a neutral period following a break by Heisler Cary took the advantage again in seven minutes and held it until the final gong, when a time advantage of 1 minutes 26 seconds gave the bout to the Lion captain

The 125 pound clash brought together MacDonald of Penn and Lehman of Penn State The bout was fast from the start, the first advantage going to Penn State as the men left their feet Though in line for a fall several times, Lehman was unable to press his advantage and at the initial nine minutes the bout was declared a draw. The first extra period placed Penn on the aggressive, but slipping his opponent's hold, "Rus" gained the upper hand and registered a fall in 1 minute 29 seconds of the first period

A draw resulted also in the 135 pound bout which followed, between Lillienfield of Penn and Liggett of Penn State The stocky Nittany grappler was little bothered by the rushing tactics of his short opponent though he was unable to gain a hold the men remaining on their feet for practically the entire nine minutes In the extra periods, Liggett took the first advantage and held the aggressive throughout the periods, winning with a time advantage of 2 minutes 53 seconds

Snappy Work

Holland advertised as one of the best 145 pounders to wrestle at Penn since the days of Ralph Waite, intercollegiate champion, remained free of the mat just 1 minute 5 seconds against the present champion from the Nittany Valley Bill Black The bout opened with a rush by Black, the men going to the mat at once A quick change of position gave the Lion champ an arm and body hold and a few seconds later he received the tap, bringing the second fall for Penn State

In the 158 pound division, Wight of Penn opposed Parthemore of Penn State The grapplers were evenly matched for the initial period, neither seeming able to take his opponent down Parthemore secured the advantage in the first extra session though unable to gain a telling hold upon his slippery opponent Staging a clever defensive battle in the second period also, Wight prevented the Nittany grappler from obtaining a fall, the bout going to Parthemore on a decision, with a time advantage of 3 minutes

In the second shortest bout of the clash, Rumbaugh of Penn State downed Lutz of Penn in 2 minutes 13 seconds Taking the offensive soon after the bell, Rumbaugh took his man to the mat and in a brief interval secured the arm and body hold which gave him the fall a moment later

To close the meet Prevost of Penn State contributed the fifth fall to the Nittany total when he pinned Schehr, Penn heavyweight in the time of seven minutes The Quaker grappler took the aggressive at once and for a time held a distinct edge over the Nittany contestant At about four minutes however, Prevost got loose to assume the advantage and later slipped over the half nelson and body hold which gave him the bout.

SYRACUSE CANCELS MEET WITH NITTANY FISTMEN

had taken part in two matches winning both In the meet against Virginia Military Institute, the Orangemen were returned on the long end of a 6 to 1 score The previous week-end they piled off the lid with a victory over the Colgate seven.

A lull in practice, brought on by the examination period hampered the Lion squad last week and little actual progress was made Several of the men were unable to get out for more than two or three workouts and most of them did not get any ring experience at all. However, this was more of a benefit than a handicap since it tended to keep the men from getting on too fine an edge

First Casualty

Coach Houck's squad suffered its first casualty last Tuesday afternoon when Evashwick, promising 125 pounder, broke his thumb in a practice bout This injury will probably keep him out of the ring for several weeks and, as he was showing improved form in all of his recent workouts, his loss will be felt Along with Washington and Gans he had been considered to be one of the logical choices for the twenty-five pound berth

The ranks of the boxing squad have been depleted during the past two weeks Candidates for every weight are dropping out continually and Coach Houck now has the number down to a more workable size than it was heretofore. Because of this, he has also been able to give more personal attention and instruction to each man

The mysterious package

The auctioneer shows a package. In a raucous voice he cries: "In my hand I have an article of value. At any store, anywhere, you couldn't buy it under a dollar . . . I'll tell you what I'll do . . . The first lady or gentleman who hands me a quarter gets this valuable package. Now who'll give me a quarter?"

If you are in a good humor, you may risk a quarter. You don't expect a quarter's worth, and you are not disappointed,

That's all very well once and a while. But you don't want to buy household goods, food, clothes, in this blind fashion. You'd laugh at the idea of your accepting a wrapped package and paying good money for it when it came to every-day necessities.

Yet you do For example, when you buy some well-known breakfast foods. Of course, you have a general idea what is in it. But you don't investigate the quality. You don't break open the package to see the contents.

That is what advertising does for you. It protects you against inferior products. You know that an advertiser must keep faith with the promise in his advertisement. That is why it pays you to read the advertisements. When you buy a wrapped package of advertised goods, you are not buying blindly.

Only worthy products can stand the test of advertising
